New Eng. Hist. & Gen. Reg., Vol. 103, p. 219:

William Gaylord, born in England about 1585, to Dorchester, Mass.
"His wife, whose name is unknown, died 20 June 1657."

Hartford Times, 16 Feb 1952, Query B3668 -- Was she Mary Walter?

1934 #8145 -- William's wife MARY died 20 June 1657

1939 #3747 -- No marriage for William and Mary Walter, but surname Walter is given on a pedigree by Ed. Gaillard Matthews.

13 Dec 1952 #B-4509 ---

"Another item in Hartford Times, 27 Dec 1947 stated:

"Col. John Richards quotes the Rev. Arthur Gaylord, who after 20 years of research is positive the William Gaylord who came to Dorchester in 1630 with wife and five children descends from Chevalier Olivier de Gaillard in Normandy. He was Chancellor of France in the reigh of Charles the Simple. His second son Hughes founded a branch, and William is of this branch."

From back side of p. 112:

David Munroe was born in Cambridge Farms, now Lexington, Mass. The Lexington records mention only his birth, but Connecticutt was then being settled by emigrants from the colonies of Plymouth and Massachusetts Bay, and in 1705, he and his wife are found in Canterbury, when their first child was born. Canterbury had 10 families in 1703, when it was made a town. In 1714 Samuel Adams and Obadiah Johnson conveyed a farm of 136 acres to David Munroe.

His identity as David Munroe of Canterbury with the David Monroe , son of William of Lexington was questioned by one writer, but after much careful research by Rev. Mr. Northrup and Dr. Will S. Munroe author of Genealogy of Josiah Munroe"" it was proved (details given on page 5) "Howe Genealogies" state Samuel Howe joined the tide of emigration to Conn., where his daughter married David Munroe.

William Munore, Scothhman, brought to America as a prisoner of War, reached Cambridge Farms, now Lexington, in 1652, and remained there until his death in 1717. Alexander Mackenzie's comprehensive "Hisotry of the Munro's" published in Inverness in 1898, says he is lineal descendant from Donald, founder of the clan Munro, who is said to have come, with his adherents from Ireland to Scotland, in the year 1025 to assist King Malcolm in his war with the Danes. Lineage traced in "The Munroe Genealogy" by John G. Locke; "The Munro Clan " by James Phinney Munroe. "The Genealogy of Hosiah Munro" by Rev. G.S. Northrup, and Hudson's"History of Lexington" (first)edition, from the above Donald Munro through eleven chiefs of the clan, ten of whom were Barons of Foulis, and five succeeding generations of Scottish ancestry down to his birth in Aldie Scotland, in 1625. His father, Robert Munro, was 3rd great grandson of Sir George Munro, tenth Baron of Foulis.

The Battle of Worcester was fought by the adherents of King Charles II, against the forces of Cromwell, in which the latter were victorious, in Sept, 1651. William, and three other Munroes, Robert, Hugh, and John, were shipped to America in the JOHN AND SARAH 1 Nov 1651. Upon arrival, bound out to a farmer to pay cost of passage.

(Hist. of Lexington, 1st ed., p. 147)" William Munroe, the ancestor of the Munroes of Lexington, born Scotland, 1625, came to America 1652 ... He settled at the Cambridge Farms about 1660 in the NE part of the town bordering on Woburn. Several of his sons lived with, or not far from him at first, and it was said by h s great-granddaughter, who died in 1853, aged 104 years, that the old house looked like a rope walk, so many additions had been made to it to accommodate his sons as they settled in life. By By adopting the custom of the Scottish clans, he, in a manner confined the Munroes together, and made them for some time as it were a distinct people. ... Though he came to this country under unfavorable circumstances, and set up for himself rather late in life, he appears to have been quite successful in his worldly affairs, and to have been blessed with a large, prosperis family ... He was made a freeman in 1690, and the subsequent tax bills from 1693-1698 show that in taxable property he was among the first half dozen men of the parish of the parish, thus showing conclusively he was a man of enterprise and force of character"

(From back side of p. 155;)

Caleb, son of Amariah Plumb and Sarah Aspinwall. born in Norfolk, and married probably in Norfolk, though the family say he was married in Balston Springs, N.Y. Remobved to Ohio, and built a mill, and sometime before 1812, traded it for land on 30 mile Creek in Michigan, and built a mill there. The War coming on with England, his three oldest sons who had become of age enlisted with General Hull as scouts. They were absent when he surrendered, and so they did not go to the Fort but went home. Indians followed them, and they fled and reached Lake Erie, bought a boat and got to Celevland. Their house and mill were burnt. Calmb never recovered his land in Michigan, though he tried after the war, but on his way back from Michogan he took sick and died at Upper Sandusky The names of this family depend on the memory of Caleb Jefferson Plumb who told them to his grandson, John H. Plumb about 1890, who wrote them down at that time. Caleb Jefferson was the youngest son of 13 children so that his father Caleb must have been married about 1784. Caleb Plumb served in the Revolutionary War as a servant. He was then 14 years old

There is a Caleb Plumb in Nat. Gen. Soc. Quarterly Magazine, vol. 32 p. 7:
Resident proprieters of the Western Reserve, 1804; Ohio Tax List,
Caleb Plumb, 15 Acres, Range 2, Town 2. Contract

Savages Genealogical Dictionary: Edward Stebbins of Cambridge in 1623. Freeman 14 May 1634, moved to Hartford. Came from Braintree, E Eng. to Hartford Conn.

Edward Stebbing(Stebbins) may have been acquianted with Rev. Thomas Hooker(foundr of Hartford, Conn., in Essex, and may have been introduced to Puritanism Frances Tough, was a widow, and Thomas Hooker's sister-in-law. He may have intorduced them.

No. 3, Elizabeth md (2) abt 1658, Thomas Cadwell.(not favored by parents) They had 10 children, Mary 18 Jan 1857)?) ; Edward md Elizabeth; William d. young; Matthew md Abigail Beckley; Abigail md Hohn Church; Elizabeth md Jeremiah Davis; Samuel md Mary Clark; Hannah md Thomas Bliss; Mehitable md. Thomas Boardman.

A daughter, name unknown , Miss Stebbins #4(or she may have been one of those listed as a"child" who married John Chester in England, lived in or near London in 1670 (Ref: Winchell Genealogy; Hartford Times, 27 July 1940) Hartford Times. 28 July 1951 #B2969) "Savage does say Lydia was a daughter of Edward Stebbings, and wife of Feacon John Wilson, but in sketch of said John under WILSON(4585) He says John's wife was Lydia, daughter of John Cole(11428) This John was son of Robert Wilson, 1st husband of Elizabeth, dau of Edward Stebbins. This fictitious Lydia was therefore made to marry her own nephew. John Wilson and wife, Lydia Cole had among others a son named Stebbing, doubtless the source of Savage's error. Therefore Edward Stebbings had 3 daughters only, May who married William Gaylord, Elizabeth wife of Robert Wilson, and 2nd of Thomas Cadwell, and a daughter who married John Chester in England??????????

From back side of P. 197:

Folder

Editor's Note

Folder 1.56s (after the first dozen pages) contains a pedigree for Merlin Plumb (b. 1826), created by DEW using information from Marion Plumb Thatcher and his wife, Edith C. Thatcher, as supplemented by Theda Plumb Adams (q.v.); the pedigree is continued on the first 42 pages of folder 1.56t. Information for the most recent generations substantially corresponds to the content of the LDS family group sheets in folders 1.56p-r and the first few pages of this folder. Merlin Plumb's pedigree (which, from Caleb Plumb in chart 1 onward, is also EPW's pedigree) is DEW's document number P101; see document calendar 104.

As you may already know, the entire Norton (and related lines) ancestry going back farther than the marriage of John Plumb (b. 1646) and Elizabeth Norton (b. ca. 1647) on November 24, 1668 (see chart 2 in this folder), was eventually rejected by DEW, because of his inability — despite careful and scholarly investigative work — to confirm the assumptions of the Thatchers and other genealogical researchers about the identity of Elizabeth's father. See the index entries for John and Elizabeth; see also DEW's September 14, 1989, letter to Theda (located after document P120[d] in folder 1.56i), which summarizes and brings to a close his diligent, but ultimately failed, effort to tie this John Norton of Branford and Farmington, Connecticut, to the Sharpenhoe, Bedfordshire, Nortons.

Given that single devastating fact, I was sorely tempted to stop indexing and digitizing the Norton-associated portions of DEW's handwritten Merlin Plumb pedigree beyond chart 2, where the Plumb-Norton marriage appears. The loss of my precious remaining time on this earth that would be required for such an effort (not to mention the sacrifice of innocent electrons!) — given its obvious irrelevancy for EPW's family history — was impossible for me to justify, especially since most the data came from readily available secondary sources anyway.

On the other hand, as I contemplated the many hours and weeks and months of effort that my beloved father spent charting the Plumb ancestry of my beloved mother to Pepin the Short and his "issue," Charlemagne, I simply couldn't justify tossing out the product of his work. After all. I am doing this not simply because I'm on "house arrest" in my Denver condo for the duration of the Covid-19 pandemic; I'm doing it because it's a labor of love.

So I decided on a compromise solution. I will continue to scan the entire Merlin Plumb pedigree, but without the associated indexing (which is by far the most time consuming part of the project). This collection of family history documents will end up with all of the charts, and all of DEW's additional work on the Nortons and related families, but everything for those particular lines beyond John Plumb (b. 1646) and Elizabeth Norton (b. ca. 1647) in chart 2 will be invalid for the Merlin Plumb and Elizabeth Helen Kendall Plumb Witheridge ancestries. The rest of the pedigree will be as valid as the Thatchers and the Rev. Mr. Witheridge were able to make it, using the best information they could lay their hands on at the time. And, of course, the Norton extension will be valid, or more likely to be valid, for researchers working on families with provable connections to the Sharpenhoe Nortons.

I think it's a pretty good compromise, don't you? If future researchers are able somehow to repair the broken Plumb-Norton connection (and, just maybe, an obviously disappointed DEW was hinting at that remote possibility in document Nt80, folder 1.53g), they will undoubtedly welcome DEW's conscientions work on the full pedigree. It's fine for what it is: my dad's best effort for somebody's Norton line — just not my mom's. Not bad for an Eagle Scout and lifelong near saint.

To the family historians of the future, I say go for it, and good luck! And to give you a head start, here's a list of the major secondary sources used by the Thatchers and Dad to (erroneously) extend the Plumb ancestry to the nobility and crowned heads of Europe:

I confess that a large number of innocent electrons have, in fact, been sacrificed to produce the many Norton and related family folders already completed (together with the corresponding index and table of contents entries). My only excuse, however lame, is that I'm a genealogical rookie, who started this project knowing virtually nothing about my dad's research methods. Even when I'm done, I won't be anywhere near as smart as he was, or as curious about the subject mattter. His files had been sitting in storage for a dozen years, in three different cities, and I naively assumed that starting with "A" (Allen) and proceding straight through to the end of the alphabet would be as good a plan of attack as any. Unfortunately, "N" (Norton) was more than halfway through the banker's boxes, and the damage was done before I learned the disastrous news about Elizabeth Norton's mysterious papa. My bad. I will go back and insert cautionary notes where possible and practical, and I'll also add warning labels to the Norton-related Merlin Plumb pedigree charts.

Now one final point before I end this long note: Despite DEW's precise penmanship, befitting a trained engineer who knew mechanical drawing and its legibility standards, his habitually faint pencil lines are hard enough to read in the originals, and even harder to read after scanning. You should be able to solve that problem by enlarging the view or, if necesssary, by going to the LDS family group sheets for more readable versions of most of the data. You can find the relevant sheet(s) for the person(s) you seek by using the inclusive page and surname ranges in the table of contents entries for folders 1.56p to 1.56s; the LDS group sheets are in approximate alphabetical order by surname.

And now, back to the scanner. Here in Denver things are looking brighter at last, what with two Covid-19 vaccines already in use and a real President about to be installed.

Happy Solstice!

Editor's Note

This folder begins with the final 45 pages of Merlin Plumb's (b. 1826) pedigree, continued from folder 1.56s. The last chart is number 98, which culminates with Charlemagne and other crowned heads. As I noted in the editor's note at the beginning of folder 1.56s, the information on the Norton and related lines prior to the marriage of John Plumb (b. 1646) and Elizabeth Norton (b. ca. 1647) were thoroughly discredited by Rev. Witheridge; see especially his letter of September 14, 1989, to Theda Plumb Adams (q.v.), which is located after document P120(d) in folder 1.56i.

The remainder of this folder contains 30 extra family record sheets related to the Merlin Plumb (b. 1826) pedigree, neatly handwritten in light pencil by DEW (his document P 102, document calendar 104). Unfortunately, his exact source for the information is not known to me, even after my careful reading of his correspondence with Theda. It is quite obvious, however, that the information on these handwritten sheets doesn't coincide with the data for the very same people in folders 1.56p-s, although there is a great deal of overlap. In general, these extra sheets are missing much of the detail contained in the previous folders, and there are certain factual discrepancies between the two versions. It's unclear why only 30 of the family record sheets were remade in this fashion by DEW (or posssibly made before he saw the previous family record sheets) — i.e., what his criteria were for selecting them and not others.

As I write this, there is a violent coup d'etat attempt in progress, instigated by soon-to-be-former President Trump and the other leaders of his treasonous white supremacist cult (aided and abetted by Republican elected officials) at the United States Capitol, just when President-elect Biden and Vice President-elect Harris are about to be declared the official winners of November's democratic (small "d") election in a pro forma, mostly ceremonial session of both houses of Congress. I'm glued to my television and will put this job aside for another day.

with Bellême. For reference to this chronicle, and for many other valuable suggestions utilised in this article, the writer is indebted to Mr. T. A. Archer.] K. N.

ROBERT, EARL OF GLOUCESTER (d. 1147), was a natural son of Henry I, king of England. A statement in one version of the 'Brut y Tywysogion' (a. 1110) that his mother was Nest [q. v.] is absent from the earlier text; and as Nest's own grandson, Giraldus Cambrensis, has left a minute account of her family (De Rebus, &c., l. i. c. 9; Itin. Kambr. l. ii. c. 7), which contains no mention of the Earl of Gloucester, it seems to be erroneous (cf. FREEMAN, Norman Conquest, v. 852, 853). The mention made by William of Malmesbury of Robert's ancestors, Norman, Flemish, and French (WILL. MALM. Gesta Reg. l. v. c. 446), may possibly allude to his mother, but more probably refers to Henry's grandmother, Adela of France. Robert was a native of Caen (ORD. VIT. 920 B). He was born before his father's accession to the throne (WILL. MALM. Hist. Nov. l. i. c. 452), and was the eldest of all Henry's sons (Cont. WILL. OF JUMIÈGES, l. viii. c. 39).

Henry laid the foundation of Robert's fortunes by bestowing on him the hand of Mabel (called Matilda by Orderic, and Sybil by the Cont. of Will. of Jumièges), daughter of Robert FitzHamon (d. 1107) [q. v.], and with it the whole heritage of her father and her uncle, comprising the honour of Torigny and other property in Normandy, the lordship of Glamorgan in Wales, and considerable estates in England. Chief among these was the honour of Gloucester, which Henry formed into an earldom for his son. The rhyming chronicler called Robert of Gloucester (fl. 1260–1300) [q. v.] dates both these transactions in 1109 (vv. 8910–13); but recent criticism has shown that Robert did not become an earl till some time between April 1121 and June 1123 (J. H. ROUND, 'The Creation of the Earldom of Gloucester,' Genealogist, new ser. iv. 129–40; and Geoffrey de Mandeville, pp. 420 et seq.) In 1119 he was present with his father at the battle of Brémule against Louis VI of France, and in 1123, when a revolt broke out among the Norman barons, he brought up a force to assist in the reduction of the rebel castle of Brionne. In 1126 he was charged with the custody of the captive duke, Robert of Normandy, whom he kept in ward for a while in his castle at Bristol, and afterwards transferred to another stronghold at Cardiff, the capital of his Welsh lordship. On 1 Jan. 1127 he was called upon by his father to join the other barons assembled at Westminster in doing homage to Henry's only surviving lawful child, the widowed Empress Matilda, as heiress of England and Normandy. On this occasion a dispute arose between Robert and the king's nephew, Stephen, count of Boulogne, as to which was entitled to precedence in taking the oath; it was decided in favour of Stephen. Some six months later Robert shared with Brian FitzCount the duty of escorting Matilda over sea for her marriage with Geoffrey of Anjou. He was by his father's deathbed at Lions-la-Forêt at the opening of December 1135.

Whether or not Henry really did, as was afterwards asserted, revoke at the last moment his nomination of Matilda as his heiress, the bulk of the nobles, both in England and Normandy, now treated the succession as an open question, and while Stephen hurried off to seize the English crown Robert himself is said to have been urged by his friends to put in a counter-claim. This, however, he prudently refused to do (Gesta Steph. p. 10). For the moment, however, the chances of the legitimate heir seemed no better than his own, and when the Norman barons invited Stephen's brother, Count Theobald of Blois, to take possession of Normandy, Robert so far concurred in their scheme as to join them in a conference with Theobald at Lisieux on 21 Dec. The tidings of Stephen's election as king in England caused them to abandon their project and accept the new king as their duke, and to this also Robert assented, giving up Falaise to Stephen's representatives as soon as he had safely removed the late king's treasures. It was, however, not till after Easter 1136 that, in answer to Stephen's repeated invitations, he at length crossed over to England, and did homage for his estates there; and even then he did it on the express condition that it should be binding only so long as Stephen's own promises to him were kept, and he himself was left in undisturbed possession of all his honours and dignities.

Next year (1137) Robert accompanied the king on a visit to Normandy; there they quarrelled, and in spite of a nominal reconciliation Stephen, early in 1138, declared Robert's English and Welsh estates forfeited, and razed some of his castles. Soon after Whitsuntide the earl sent to the king a formal renunciation of his allegiance, and to his under-tenants in England orders to prepare for war. This message proved the signal for a general rising of the barons, in which, however, Robert took no personal share, although the garrison of his chief fortress, Bristol, played a considerable part in it under the command of his eldest son. He was himself occupied in furthering the interests of his half-sister Matilda in Normandy, where he procured the surrender of Caen and Bayeux to her husband in June 1138. On 30 Sept. 1139 he landed at Arundel with 140 knights and the Empress Matilda herself. Leaving her in Arundel Castle he set off with only twelve followers, and rode hurriedly across southern England to Bristol, where the empress soon rejoined him. There he set up his headquarters as commander-in-chief of her forces in the civil war which followed, and as her chief assistant in the government of the western shires, which his influence and his valour quickly brought to acknowledge Matilda as their lady.

At the opening of 1141 he headed, in conjunction with his son-in-law, Earl Ranulf of Chester, the whole forces of her party in an expedition for the relief of Lincoln Castle, which Stephen was besieging, and he received the surrender of Stephen himself at the close of the battle which took place under the walls of Lincoln on Candlemas day. He afterwards accompanied the empress in her triumphal progress to Winchester and London, as also in her flight to Oxford when driven out of London. Later in the same year he was with her during the double siege at Winchester, when she besieged the bishop in his fortified house of Wolvesey, and was in her turn blockaded in the city by 'the king's queen with all her strength.' On 14 Sept. Robert succeeded in covering his half-sister's retreat from Winchester, and in cutting his own way out afterwards; but he was overtaken and made prisoner at Stockbridge. The queen sent him into honourable confinement in Rochester Castle till arrangements could be made for his release in exchange for Stephen, who was in prison at Bristol under the charge of Countess Mabel. A project for Stephen's restoration as titular king, with Robert as acting ruler of England under him, was foiled by the earl's refusal to join in any such compromise without his sister's consent; and a simple exchange of the captives, though long opposed by Robert on the ground that an earl was no equivalent for a king, was carried into effect at the beginning of November.

Shortly before midsummer in the next year, 1142, Robert was sent by the empress to Anjou to persuade her (second) husband (Geoffrey of Anjou) to come to her assistance in England. Finding, however, that Geoffrey would not stir till he had completed his conquest of Normandy, Robert was forced to join him in a campaign which lasted till the close of the autumn. Robert was apparently recalled by tidings that Stephen was blockading Matilda in Oxford Castle. He hurried back to England, taking with him his little nephew, the future King Henry II, and three or four hundred Norman men-at-arms. His force being too small to effect Matilda's relief directly, he sought to draw Stephen away from Oxford by laying siege to Wareham, a castle of his own which Stephen had seized during his absence. The king, however, did not move; Robert, after receiving the surrender of Wareham, took Portland and Lulworth, and then summoned all his sister's partisans to meet him at Cirencester. She had meanwhile made her escape, and before Christmas Robert was able to bring her child to meet her at Wallingford. All three seem to have shortly afterwards returned to Bristol, and to have remained chiefly there throughout the next four years. In July 1143 Robert won another great victory over Stephen near Wilton. In 1144 he again led all his forces in person against the king, who was endeavouring to raise the blockade which Robert had formed round Malmesbury; Stephen, however, retreated without giving battle.

Next year Robert planned an attack upon Oxford (which had surrendered to Stephen after Matilda's escape), and for that purpose raised a great fortification at Farringdon. This new fortress, however, soon fell into the hands of the king; and from that moment Robert struggled in vain against the rapid disintegration of the Angevin party. What remained of it seems to have been held together for two more years solely by his tact and his energy, for as soon as he was gone it fell utterly to pieces. In the spring of 1147 he escorted young Henry from Bristol to Wareham on his way back to Anjou; in the autumn he fell sick of a fever, and on 31 Oct. he died at Bristol. There, in the choir of the church of a Benedictine priory which he had founded in honour of St. James, outside the city wall, he was buried beneath a tomb of green jasper stone (Chron. Tewkesb., Monast. ii. 61), which in Leland's day had been replaced by 'a sepulchre of gray marble set up upon six pillers of a smaull hethe' (Itin. vii. 85, ed. 1744).

Robert appears to have been a happy compound of warrior, statesman, and scholar. His love of letters made him the chosen patron, and, as it seems, the familiar friend, of William of Malmesbury, who dedicated his 'Gesta Regum Anglorum' and 'Historia Novella' to him in terms of affectionate admiration; the 'Historia Novella,' indeed, was written at Robert's own special desire. For his capacity as a statesman it may be said that his sister's cause almost invariably prospered when she allowed him to direct her counsels, and declined as soon as she neglected his advice; while to the character of his rule in the west of England during the civil war we have the testimony of a member of the opposite party that he 'restored peace and tranquillity throughout his dominions, and greatly improved their condition, save only that he burdened all his people with taxes for the building of his castles, and required all to assist him either with men or with money whenever he marched against the foe' (Gesta Steph. p. 97). The most important of these castles was that of Bristol, which he so greatly enlarged and strengthened that he is usually said to have been its founder, though it is plain that a fortress existed there before his day. His priory of St. James at Bristol was a cell to the abbey of Tewkesbury, which looked upon his father-in-law as its second founder, and to which he was himself a distinguished benefactor. The Cistercian abbey of Neath was founded in 1130 by Richard de Granville, chief baron of the honour of Glamorgan, under the special patronage and protection of Earl Robert, Countess Mabel, and their eldest son. Another Cistercian house, Margam, was founded by Robert only a few months before his death, in 1147. His widow survived him ten years; she was the mother of six children. The eldest son, William, second earl of Gloucester, died in 1183, leaving only three daughters, and by the marriage of one of these, Amicia, to Richard, sixth earl of Clare, the earldom of Gloucester ultimately passed to the family of Clare [see CLARE, FAMILY of].

ROBERT OF JUMIÈGES (fl. 1051), archbishop of Canterbury, called 'Champart' (Gallia Christiana, xi. 958), a Norman by birth, was prior of St. Ouen at Rouen, and in 1037 was chosen abbot of Jumièges, having been designated for that office by his predecessor and kinsman, Abbot William. He began to build the abbey church of St. Mary in 1040 (ib.; FREEMAN, Norman Conquest, iv. 93, v. 621). While Edward, son of Ethelred the Unready [see EDWARD THE CONFESSOR], was an exile in Normandy, Robert did him some service; they became intimate friends, and when Edward returned to England in 1043 to ascend the throne, Robert accompanied him (Vita Ædwardi, p. 399; Gesta Pontificum, p. 35). The see of London having fallen vacant by the death of Bishop Ælfweard [q. v.], Edward bestowed it on Robert in August 1044. He became the head of the foreigners at the court and in the kingdom, opposed Earl Godwine [q. v.] and his party, keeping alive the king's belief that the earl was guilty of the death of Edward's brother Ælfred (d. 1036) [q. v.], and acquired such an extraordinary degree of influence over him that it is said that, if he asserted that a black crow was white, the king would sooner believe his words than his own eyes (Annales Wintonienses, ii. 21). When the see of Canterbury became vacant by the death of Eadsige [q. v.] on 29 Oct. 1050, Edward set aside the canonical election of Ælfric (fl. 1050) [q. v.], and in the witenagemot held in the spring of 1051 appointed Robert. Robert went to Rome for his pall, returned with it on 27 July, and was enthroned at Canterbury (Anglo-Saxon Chronicle, ann. 1048, Peterborough). His promotion caused deep indignation among English churchmen (Vita Eadwardi, p. 400), and this feeling must have been increased by his refusal to consecrate Spearhafoc, the bishop-elect of London, on the plea that the pope had forbidden him to do so, though Spearhafoc showed him the king's writ ordering the consecration.

Robert's new dignity gave him larger opportunities of thwarting Godwine, and he had a personal quarrel with the earl about some land that he claimed as belonging to his see, and that Godwine was occupying (ib.) During the quarrel between the king and the earl in September, Robert used his influence with the king to inflame his anger against Godwine, insisting that he was the murderer of Edward's brother, and he instigated the mocking message that the earl should have no peace from the king until he restored to him his brother and his companions. When Godwine was exiled, he persuaded Edward to separate from the queen, and apparently suggested a divorce (ib. p. 403). It seems probable that it was at this time that Edward sent him on an embassy to Duke William of Normandy to promise him the succession to the throne, and it may be to invite him to visit him

ROYAL BYE-BLOWS
THE ILLEGITIMATE CHILDREN OF THE ENGLISH KINGS FROM WILLIAM I TO EDWARD III

By WALTER LEE SHEPPARD, JR., M.S., F.A.S.G.
Communicated by the COMMITTEE ON ENGLISH AND FOREIGN RESEARCH

In the middle ages, to a large extent, marriages of the nobility and almost invariably of royalty, were arranged for political or financial reasons, and had almost nothing to do with personal preference. Though in some cases marriages coincided with personal choice, usually affection or love came after marriage, if it came at all. Of the Norman Kings of England and the early Plantagenets, only King John and Edward III and perhaps William I, are believed to have been really in love with their Queens prior to marriage. Henry III and apparently Stephen and Edward I certainly became very fond of their Queens. Henry I and Richard I showed theirs utmost respect, but apparently cared little about them as persons. Edward II preferred the company of men, as did William II who never married.

Small wonder then that "affairs of the heart" existed outside of marriage, especially in the royal family which had the least choice in its selection of partners. Children of such "alliances" were often recognized by their parents and frequently taken into the home to be brought up with legitimate children, given good education, property, and position. Many became the most important people of their day and were most admirable persons. Casual relationships also existed, of course, but usually with servants, barmaids and peasants. The children of such unions were usually unknown or unrecognized by their fathers and only rarely acknowledged.

Roy Log 6

It is no surprise for a student of this period to discover that a large proportion of the Court and the wealthier nobility were related to the King and that the great majority of these relationships were through illegitimacies. Though less easy to trace than pedigrees from lawful unions, especially on the mother's side since she rarely is identified, still these lines are no less a part of one's ancestry than the others and deserve recording. Since these royal bastards have not been tabulated elsewhere, a summary of those claimed or proven from William I to Edward III may be of interest.

WILLIAM I "the Conqueror" has not been shown to have sired any bastards. However, in the past two have been claimed:

1. William Peverel of Nottingham, who was given custody of Nottingham Castle when it was built in 1068. King William gave him properties subsequently identified as the Honour of Peverel, consisting of 100 lordships in the counties of Nottingham and Northampton, 14 in Derby, some 20 in Berkshire, Leicestershire, Oxford, Bedford, Buckingham and Essex. He died 28 Jan. 1113/14. Apparently the first identification of this man as King William's son dates from about 1500; this identification is no longer accepted.[1]
2. Gundred, wife of William de Warrenne, Earl of Surrey and Warrenne, who was called "daughter of the Conqueror," although no evidence was advanced. Elsewhere she is called a sister of Gerbod the Fleming, a child of Mathilda (William's Queen) by an earlier marriage, or her bastard, and lastly a legitimate child of William and Mathilda. These identifications are now disproved; and it is thought that her father may have been Gerbod, hereditary advocate of the Abbey of St. Bertin at St. Omer.[2]

ROBERT, Duke of Normandy, eldest son of William I. His legitimate line died out and any descendants he may have must stem from the last of the three known bastards:[3]

1. Richard, who d. s.p. in 1100 in a hunting accident in the New Forest.
2. William, who d. s.p. in the Holy Land after the battle of Tinchbray while on Crusade.
3. A daughter, whose name is lost, wife by 1089 of Elie de St. Saen, who was guardian of Robert's son William Clito. If this couple left issue, they have not been identified.

WILLIAM II, never married. He is credited by Cobbe with a bastard son whose name is not noted elsewhere.[4] William is thought to have had no interest in women.

1. Berstand, of whom nothing is known.

HENRY I. A list of 21 (perhaps 20, since there may be one duplication) bastard children of this monarch appears in the Complete Peerage, new ed., vol. 11, Appendix D, with biographical material which will not be reprinted in detail here. We confine ourselves to listing these, with references in which additional data may be found. Number 22, below, is an addition to those noted in the Complete Peerage. There may have been others. It has been asserted that Henry married Sibyl Corbet, and later set her aside to marry Margaret of Scotland, thus uniting the Saxon and Norman claims to the throne. Evidence to prove this statement is lacking, but if it is true, the five children of Sibyl Corbet would not be true bastards.

Roy Log 63

1. Robert, "the Consul," of Caen, Earl of Gloucester, by an unknown mother. One of the most important men of his day, who has many living descendants.[5]
2. Reginald "de Dunstanville," Earl of Cornwall, by Sibyl Corbet. Many descendants.[6]
3. William, by Sibyl Corbet. Appears on the Pipe Roll of 1184. Issue, if any, unknown.
4. Gundred, by Sibyl Corbet. Named in the Pipe Roll of 1130. Sometimes confused with Rohese (below).[7]
5. Rohese, by Sibyl Corbet,[8] married Henry de la Pomerai, had 2 sons; living descendants.
6. Sibyl, by Sibyl Corbet, married Alexander I, King of Scots, d. s.p. Sandford calls her Elizabeth.[9]
7. Henry fitz Henry, by Nest verch Rhys ap Tewdr, lord of Pebidiog and Narberth, killed in the invasion of Anglesey in 1157. By an unknown wife he left at least two sons, Meiler fitz Henry, Justiciar of Ireland, and Robert fitz Henry, living in Leinster about 1180, and also a daughter. Living descendants.[10]
8. Isabel, by Isabel, daughter of Robert de Beaumont, Count of Meulan; probably Henry's youngest bastard, since her mother was born between 1102 and 1107. She was unmarried in 1141, and probably in 1149; in fact no marriage or issue is known. Her mother married Gilbert fitz Gilbert de Clare, Earl of Pembroke. After her step-father's death she lived with her mother. She is called "Hedwig" by both Cobbe and Brandenberg.
9. Richard, by Ansfrid who was widow of Anskill; probably Henry's favorite child. Born before 1101 he became an able soldier; he was betrothed to Amice, daughter of Ralph de Gael of Bréteuil, and was to receive his father-in-law's Norman lands, but was drowned in the wreck of the White Ship at Barflete, 25 Nov. 1120, together with King Henry's only legitimate son, William the Aethling, and Maud, Countess of Perche (see 13 below). Richard left no known issue. Brandenberg falsely calls him "Earl of Suffolk."
10. Fulke, also by Ansfrid, either died early or became a monk.
11. Juliane, probably another child of Ansfrid, married in 1103 Eustace de Pacy I. Lord of Bréteuil and Pacy, who rebelled against Henry I in 1119, but was pardoned and died in 1136. She became a nun at Fontevrault shortly after. They had two sons and two daughters. The eldest son William d. s.p. in 1153. Issue of the younger son Roger, if any, is unknown. With the consent of Henry I the two daughters were blinded and mutilated by Ralph Harenc, to whom their father Eustace had given them as hostages in exchange for Harenc's son, whom Eustace had blinded.[11]
12. Maud, by an Edith of unknown parentage, married in 1103 Rotrou II, Count of Perche. She died aboard the White Ship on 25 Nov. 1120, leaving two daughters: Philippa who married Helie of Anjou (son of Fulke V, and brother of Geoffrey Plantagenet) leaving issue,[12] and Felice.
13. Robert, the King's son, by Edith, daughter of Forn, a great tennant-in-chief with 100 knights' service, who supported his sister Maud against Stephen, married Maud, Lady du Sap in Normandy, daughter of Robert d'Avranches. He died 31 May 1172 leaving one daughter and heiress Maud, who married Rainald de Courtney, but d. s.p. in 1224.[13]
14. Gilbert, by an unknown mother, unmarried in 1142 and not mentioned again.
15. William de Tracy, by an unknown mother. He left a daughter Grace who married John de Sudeley of Sudley Castle, co. Gloucester, 3rd son of Harold of Ewyas. They had two known sons: Ralph de Sudeley, ancestor of the Barons Sudeley; and William of Toddington, who adopted his mother's name, Tracy, and founded the baronial family of that name—although the senior male line died out in 1797 with the death of the 8th Viscount Tracy, it is probable that descendants of cadet branches survive.[14]

16. Maud married Conan III, Duke of Brittany, through whom the line of Brittany continued.[15]
17. [? Eustacie], a daughter who married William Goet III, lord of Montminrael and that part of Perche later known as Perche-Gouet. He was born about 1080 and succeeded by his son William IV who died on Crusade in 1169, leaving two daughters. There are probably descendants.[16]
18. Constance (also called Maud), by an unknown mother, married Rosceline de Beaumont, vicomte du Maine. She had South Tawton, co. Devon, as her dowry. Had: Richard (eldest), and William. From the former descent the later vicomtes du Maine and the English Barons Beaumont.[17]
19. Aliz, or Aline, married Mathieu de Montmorenci, Constable of France, and had five sons and many descendants.[18]
20. Maud, by unknown mother, became Abbess of Montivilliers. She is sometimes confused with Isabel (8 above).
21. A daughter, perhaps identical with one of those named above. Henry I agreed to give William de Warrenne one of his daughters in marriage, but asked approval of Archbishop Anselme since the parties were "related in the 4th degree on one side and the 6th degree on the other," which Anselme refused, so the marriage never took place. Note that this proves that William's mother Gundred (above), the reputed daughter of William I, could not have been a half-sister of Henry I, since a child of Henry would be related to William II de Warenne in the 3rd degree.
22. [?] Emme, living in 1157, married about 1121 Guy IV, Sieur de Laval.[19]

Cobbe[20] adds with a question mark two more bastards of Henry I: a second Henry and a Herbert. It has been suggested, without evidence, that Sibyl Corbet's son Herbert by her husband was actually the child of Henry I. Cobbe's list includes numbers 1, 2, 7, 8 (whom he calls Hedwig), 9, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18 and 19 above; Sandford's list is the same.[21]

STEPHEN is credited by Sandford and Cobbe with two bastards. Anselme mentions only the second.[22]

1. William, by an unknown mother. Stated by Sandford to have witnessed, as his brother, a charter of Stephen's legitimate son William.
2. Gervaise, by Dametta of Normandy, who became Abbot of Westminster where he died in 1160 and was buried.

GEOFFREY PLANTAGENET, Count of Anjou, husband of the Empress Mathilda, daughter of Henry I. Since he was the father of Henry II and progenitor of the Plantagenet Kings of England his base born children are included here. He had three known bastards:

1. Emma, who was given in marriage in 1174 by her half-brother, Henry II, to David ap Owen Gwynedd. They had a son Owen, whose issue, if any, is unknown; they had also a daughter named Wennour, who married Meurig ap Roger, a Baron of the Welsh March, by whom she had sons Wrennoc and Gwenwynwyn.[23]
2. Hameline, became Earl of Warrenne and Surrey in right of his wife.[24]
3. Emma, married Guy V. de Laval.[25]

HENRY II. An article detailing the bastards of Henry II, with all known evidences, appeared in The Genealogist's Magazine (vol. 14, p. 361-368, Sept. 1964). We list here only the names as they appear in this article:

1. Geoffrey, Archibishop of York.[26]
2. Peter, Archdeacon of Lincoln.[27]
3. Morgan, Provost of Beverley, Bishop-elect of Durham.[28]

4. William Longespée, Earl of Salisbury.[29]
5. Probably a child born dead, or died at birth, to Princess Alix of France.[30]
6. A child, born in 1169 to Alix, daughter of Eudon de Porhoëst, Vicomte de Porhoëst, and jure uxoris Duke of Brittany. This child may be identical with William Longspée[31] (see discussion, The Gen. Mag., op. cit.).
7. Perhaps a son called Richard.[32]

RICHARD I, by an unknown concubine, had a son:

1. Philippe, born about 1184, to whom he gave in marriage Amelie, youngest or minor daughter of Helie de Cognac, which castle Philippe then held of the Count of Poitou.[33]

JOHN, by a number of mistresses, for the most part unknown, had the following:

1. Joan, whose mother is not definitely known, although she has been called the child of "Queen Clementia" (which may have been a pseudonym for Isabel of Gloucester) or that of Agatha Ferrers. John gave her in marriage to Llewellyn ap Jorwerth, Prince of Wales. She has many descendants.[34]
2. Geoffrey, who, in 1205, held the Honour of Perche, lead an expedition into Poitou, and died in that same year. Issue, if any, unknown.[35]
3. John, a clerk, supported by the custodians of the see of Lincoln in 1201.[36]
4. Henry fitz Roy, sent as a student to the Prior of Kenilworth in 1207, given the Cornish lands of Robert fitz Walter, married a minor heiress, lived into the reign of Henry III, when he was acknowledged as the King's brother. In 1233 he was sent with others to secure the manor of Gilbert Basset in Wiltshire.[37]
5. Oliver, son of one Hawise, perhaps a Tracy, took part in the defense of Dover in 1217, died on Crusade at Damietta in October 1218. Issue, if any unknown.[38]
6. Osbert Gifford, a son by one of the Gifford ladies, about whom little is known.[39]
7. Richard de Chilham, by a sister of William, Earl of Warrenne; he was a Captain during the revolt of the Barons; married in 1214 to Rohese de Dover.[40] Many descendants.
8. [?] Isabel la Blanche, who married one Sir Robert fitz Yva (or Fitz You), may have been another of his bastards since she is shown as a daughter of King John.[41]
   It has been disproven that John de Curci, Earl of Ulster, listed by Sandford as a bastard of John,[42] was his son.

RICHARD, EARL OF CORNWALL, King of the Romans, 2nd son of King John, had four, if not six, bastards, all said to have been by Joan, daughter of Sir Reginald de Valletort, who later (or perhaps earlier) married Sir Alexander (or Andrew) Okeston and by him had a legitimate son and heir.[43]

1. Richard.
2. Walter.
3. ? Lawrence.
4. Probably Isabella.
5. Probably Joan.
6. ? Philip le Cornwalys, alias Philip de Sancto Austolo (a Papal Roll calls him a son of the Earl of Cornwall).

It is interesting to note that through the family of Cornwall, uninterrupted male descent from the Plantagenets, with but this one illegitimacy, still exists. Through the Somerset family (descendants of Charles Somerset, Earl of Worcester, and his descendants, the Dukes of Beaufort, there is also uninterrupted male descent from the Plantagenets, but through two or more illegitimacies.

HENRY III had no known bastards.

EDWARD I had only one known bastard:

1. John de Botetourte, Lord Botetourte.[44]

EDWARD II had no known bastards.

EDWARD III had one known bastard:

1. Nicholas Lytlington, Abbot of Westminster.[45]

After the death of his Queen, Philippa, Edward, in his old age, had several mistresses, of whom the most notorious was Agnes Perrers. This lady had two daughters who were not children of her husband, and may well have been Edward's.[46] These were: an elder daughter Joan, who married Robert Sherne; and a younger, also Joan, who married Richard Northland and was later (1406) known as Joan Despaigne, otherwise Southery.

that this appears to be a confusion with William's wife, whose name would then be something else. Francis Sandford, op. cit., p. 30-37, gives no first name nor does Anselme, op. cit., vol. 2, p. 840, nor does Francois Alexandre Aubert de la Chesnaye-Dessois, Dictionaire de la Noblesse (Paris, 1863-77), vol. 14, p. 370.

This was Guy IV's son, Guy V. Perhaps there is some confusion between these two Emmas. It may be noted that since both were bastards there would be no relationship between the two and no bar to marriage on the basis of consanquinity.

Lincoln from his father in 1188. However, in the article under Rosamond Clifford (D.N.B., vol. 11, p. 76) it is stated that this was the earlier William Longespée (called I). The C.P. account does not include nor does it discuss this grant. William did receive from his brother, King Richard, the 3rd penny of Wiltshire in 1196/7. His wife's birth date is given in C.P. as 1191, but D.N.B. states she was born in Amesbury in 1187 and was said to be aged 12 when given to William in 1198.

The Pipe Rolls (Rotuli de Dominabus), vol. xxxv, p. 60, under the first roll of Suffolk, Hundred of Babeng, footnote 1, states "Acton was an escheat of the Honour of Peverel [Peverel of London], and Henry II gave it to William Longespée senior [probably his own younger brother William]." This identification of William Longespée I with William, Count of Poitou, died 30 Jan. 1164, is further confirmed by Henry de Bracton in whose Note-Book (ed. F. W. Maitland, London, 1887), case no. 1064, vol. 3, p. 92-93, we find, in 1225 a suit between the Abbot of Misenden, Bucks, vs.—Hubert de Burg, for the advowson of the church of Owelton. Hubert states that this is part of the manor of Kauston (now Cawston and Oulton), that it was escheated to the King's grandfather (Henry II) who granted it to his brother William le Longespée to hold at his will as bailiff. William gave it to William de Penna. After the death of William le Longespée it came back to the King. Since William de Penna held it only as bailiff for William le Longespée King John gave it to Hubert de Burgh. There is much discussion, but it becomes clear that William le Longespée had (1) died probably without issue since the property reverted and was re-granted; and (2) William le Longespée died probably in the reign of Henry II, but certainly by the reign of King John, since John is alleged to have re-granted it. Mr. Maitland's footnote 6 on page 92 states incorrectly that William le Longespée is "natural son, not brother" of Henry II. However, William Longespée II (son of Henry II) died 7 March 1225/6, well after King John, leaving a large number of children. Thus we know that William II is not a principal in this property exchange. De Bracton probably knew exactly who these people were and is unlikely to have made an error. Thus it appears probable that William Longespée I (or senior) was William, Count of Poitou and thus could not have been alive in 1188 to receive a grant of Appleby. Obviously this transaction should be re-examined.

George Andrews Moriarty, F.S.A., has made an exhaustive study of the Giffords and come to the conclusion that the mother of Osbert, the King's son, was probably Mathilde, daughter of Richard Gifford, Justiciar under Henry II. He was living in 1176; his son, Osbert Gifford of Norfolk, married Isabel de Friville, and died s.p. about 1229. His heirs were his two sisters: Mabel, who in 1232 was wife of Adam de Kailly; and Mathilde de Gifford, not noted as married in 1232 (see case no. 1671, 1232, in Notebooks of Henry de Bracton, ed. by F. W. Maitland, London, 1887, vol. 2, p. 517-18 and compare Mr. Moriarty's record of the children of Richard Gifford in THE REGISTER, vol. 75, p. 62, January 1921). Osbert Gifford, the King's son, received 21 November, John 17 (1215), the Oxford lands of Thomas de Ardern, which had apparently been confiscated after Runnemede (Rotuli Litterarum Clausarum, ed. by Thomas Duff Hardy, London, 1833, vol. 1, p. 238); and on 1 Feb. following (1216) Osbert received also Ardern's lands in Norfolk, Suffolk and Sussex. Osbert's half-brother, also named Osbert Gifford, was with the Barons since his wife received safe conduct to confer with King John in November, John 18 (1216) (ibid.). Nothing is known concerning any wife or progeny of Osbert, the King's son. The late Oswald Barron, in an unsigned review of Maj. Gen. George Wrotteseley's "The Giffords" in The Ancestor, no. 3, p. 227, October 1902, gives as his arms: ermine, 2 bars gules, a chief gules with a leopard or in chief. G. W. Watson in C.P., vol. 5, p. 649, note e, assigns these same arms to Osbert Gifford of Brimsfield (born about 1188; died about 1237; married Isabel de Bocland), son of Elias, son of Elias, which Osbert would be first cousin once removed of Richard the Justiciar. However, Mr. Moriarty believes Barron's identification is probably more correct; see his article in The Genealogist, new series, vol. 28, p. 128-129. 1922.

DESCENDANTS OF ANDREW FORD OF WEYMOUTH, MASS.

Compiled by Mrs. Elizabeth (Cobb) Stewart, of Cleveland, Ohio

2. James[2] Ford (Andrew[1]), born in Weymouth, say about 1649-50, no evidence of his death has been found in the records of Massachusetts, Connecticut or New Jersey. He was living 25 Feb. 1692/3, the date of his father's will; but he was probably deceased before 1702, when his brother Andrew[2] was called the "heir at law" of Ebenezer[2] Ford, indicating that Andrew was the oldest living brother.

James Ford married, probably about 1674-75, but no record of his marriage has been found, or the name of his wife or the births of any children. However, it appears to be certain that he had a son John, born about 1675-76. On 5 March 1674/5 James Ford bought a lot of land:

"George Danson of Middleboro yeoman for £5. 10s paid by James foord of Weymouth husbandman, 1/35 of all that tract or parcell of land commonly called the Major's Purchase situate lying and being at or neare Indian Head River pond and Jones River and within the Colony of New Plymouth etc all my share excepting and always reserving out of this above sd tract of land all that parcell of land which was sold by the first owners unto John Thomson now of Middleboro." Witnesses: John Gorum, Nathaniel Thomas. Dated 5 March 1674/5. Acknowledged 18 May 1675 before Constant Southworth (Plymouth Colony Deed, vol. 4, p. 17).

The Marshfield Proprietor's Records (vol. 3, p. 56) show that James paid £2. 1 s. for a share of the charges against the settlement of the boundary line at a meeting of the proprietors of Major's Purchase, 21 April 1685 (Mrs. Bamford's "Notes" in New York Genealogical and Biographical Record, vol. 53, p. 171). This property was in Duxbury (now Pembroke) and contained a cedar swamp, but was not a home lot. Note that John[3] Ford of Hanover, N. J., bequeaths to his son Jacob "my seeder swamp in Duxbury and also half of my lands that lie at Quennebog up New London River that falls to me by my father" (Mrs. Bamford, op. cit., p. 164). Since James bought a cedar swamp in Duxbury and inherited from his father land in Quinnebog, Conn., this instrument seems to establish John's paternity.

James probably had service in King Philip's war under Capt. Samuel Wadsworth. Bodge's Soldiers in King Philip's War mentioned "James Ford" several times. Most of the services specified seem to belong to James of Ipswich, another Ford family. However, James of Weymouth could have served in Captain Wadsworth's troop, which, having undoubtedly fought in the Narragansett campaign, was stationed in Marlboro, January 1676, and in Lancaster, February 1676, guarding the frontier and the towns of Milton, Braintree, Weymouth, etc. Weymouth itself was attacked by Indians that spring. Wadsworth's troop was disbanded in early March; the account book of 24 April 1676 shows £2. 15s. 8d. due James Ford (p. 221).

The same year in Weymouth Samuel King's daughter Abigail was killed by being run over with a cart (History of Weymouth, vol. 3, p. 351). The Court of Assistants, Massachusetts Bay Colony, 7 March 1675/6, fined James ffoord, who was the driver of the cart, £10. 5s. to be paid to the "Country," 5s. to the child's father (Records of the Court of Assistants, Boston, 1901, vol. 1, p. 60). James took the oath of allegiance to King Charles II, in Weymouth 29 Oct. 1678, according to the records of the Suffolk Court (Colonial Society of Massachusetts Publications, vol. 30, p. 974). Some time after this, possibly by October 1681, he moved to Ford's Farms in Plymouth Colony. By 1686, when he was sued by his brother Ebenezer, he was called "now or late of Ford's Farms." Perhaps by then he had removed to Duxbury. There are no records to prove this, but it is significant that his son John called himself "of Duxbury" when he went to Windham, Conn., in 1698. James was bequeathed by his father's will, 25 Feb. 1692/3, 200 acres at Quinnepoge.

6. i. John,[3] b. probably in Weymouth about 1676.

3. Andrew[2] Ford (Andrew[1]), born in Weymouth say about 1650/51, died in Abington 24 Aug. 1725. There is no record of Andrew's birth or of his age at death; it is certain, however, that Andrew[1] had at least two sons by 3 April 1651, the date of Robert Lovell's will, in which Robert mentioned his son-in-law's "eldest son" and "youngest son."

He married about 1679/80 Abiah [? Pierce], born about 1654, died between 22 March 1721, the date of Andrew's letter quoted below, and 8 April 1725, the date of his will which does not mention her. Abiah's identity has long puzzled re-

This deed proves that Anna, second wife of Daniel Church of Lee, was the widow of Barnabus Bates of Kent. It is witnessed by Levi Church, Anna's step-son, and by Hannah Young, wife of James Young (D. M. Wilcox, ed., Records of the Town of Lee . . . to 1800 (1900), p. 249). Hannah Young may have been related to Anna Church, perhaps her sister.

ROYAL BYE-BLOWS: ADDITIONS AND CORRECTIONS:—THE REGISTER, vol. 119, p. 97, April 1965, "No. 22." This daughter was certainly named Emma and she married Guy IV de Val Guyon, who died in 1152. Her epitaph ran "Emma anglorum regis filia dominaque lavallensis." Their son, Guy V de Val Guyon, married Emma, an illegitimate daughter, not of Geoffrey, Count of Anjou, as given under his name on p. 97 as his third child, but of Reginald, Earl of Cornwall, No. 2, on page 96. However, Geoffrey, Count of Anjou, had an illegitimate daughter Marie, Abbess of Shaftesbury, by the wife of the Sire de Osteilli, who was probably also the mother of her sister Emma, wife of David (p. 97 as No. 1). Abbé A. Angot, Généalogies féodales mayennaises du XIe au XIIIe siècle, Laval, 1942; C. Bullock-Davies, "Marie, Abbess of Shaftesbury, and her brothers" in The English Historical Review (1965), vol. 80, p. 314-22. Also Fergus, Lord of Galloway, is said to have married Elizabeth, youngest natural daughter of King Henry I: The Scots Peerage (1907), vol. 4, p. 136; though W. H. Thurton (Plantagenet Ancestry (1928), p. 269, note 49) considers her to have been a daughter of William II. On p. 98, children of King John: Sidney Painter (in his article "Who was the mother of Oliver fitz Roy" in Feudalism and Liberty (1961), shows that the mother of Oliver was Hawise, daughter of Fulk fitz Warin and Hawise de Dinan. A William de Say is described as a natural son of King John by N. Denholm-Young (History and Heraldry (1965), p. 65-6); but this is probably a mistake as he later (op. cit., p. 85) gives another account of his parentage. On p. 99, Edward II had a bastard son Adam, as F. D. Blackley has discovered (Bulletin of the Institute of Historical Research (1964), vol. 37, p. 76-7).

TIRRELL-KINGMAN-SHAW:—In preparing the Tirrell genealogy for publication it has been necessary to settle the controversy about the wife of Gideon[2] Tirrell (William[1]). In the "Corrections and Additions" to Savage's Genealogical Dictionary published in THE REGISTER, vol. 46, p. 188, April 1892, it was stated that Gideon's wife Hannah was the daughter of Thomas Kingman. In vol. 3, p. 355, of the History of Weymouth, Massachusetts (1923), George W. Chamberlain in his account of the Kingman family repeated this statement. But, in vol. 4, p. 612, of the same work, Mr. Chamberlain named her as the daughter of John and Alice (Phillips) Shaw, and cited the distribution of the estate of John Shaw, whereby Gideon and Hannah Tirrell, with the other children and their spouses, shared his property, as evidence that Hannah, the wife of Gideon Tirrell, was a daughter of John Shaw (he gave Suffolk County Probate, new series, vol. 6, p. 181, as his authority). An examination of the original probate file confirms Mr. Chamberlain's statement. The confusion in identifying Hannah, wife of Gideon Tirrell, may have been due to the fact that Gideon[2] Tirrell had a daughter Hannah, not shown in the History of Weymouth (vol. 4, p. 656), who married John Kingman, with whom, by an agreement with her brother, John Tirrell, she was a beneficiary of the estate of Gideon Tirrell.

THE WATSON ANCESTRY OF CONSTANCE (BRIGHAM) CROSBY: ADDITIONS AND CORRECTIONS:—In THE REGISTER, vol. 120, January 1966.

Page 22. The year of baptism of Katharine, fifth child of Henry Watson, should read 1589/90 (not 1588/90).

Page 23. Perhaps the unknown wife of James Watson (No. 3) was the Jenet Watson who was buried 12 May 1580, a year and a half after the baptism of his youngest known child.

Page 25, last line: the will of William[2] Southeron (born about 1470) was abstracted by J. Gardiner Bartlett as follows: To be buried in the churchyard of Holme in Spaldingmore; to elder son John 20s, to daughter Joane 6s 8d, to Agnes Gibson a sheep or 20d. All residue to my wife [unnamed] and younger son William, they to be executors. Supervisors: Robert Hormett, John Southeron. Witnesses: Thomas Brewster clerk, Stephen Home, Thomas Fenceman, John Southeron, Robert Hormet. Proved 26 June 1517 (P. and E. Wills, vol. 9, fol. 47). The daughter Joane would be the right age to be the wife of John Watson, No. 2, p. 22.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE NEW ENGLAND HISTORIC GENEALOGICAL SOCIETY

STATED MEETING, 9 MARCH 1966

A stated meeting of the Society was held at 101 Newbury Street, Boston, on Wednesday, 9 March 1966, at 2:30 P.M., Edgar Packard Dean, Director, presiding.

The minutes of the meeting of 2 February were read and approved.

The Council reported that since the annual meeting one Life and thirty-eight Annual Members had been elected.

The Recording Secretary reported that during February notice of the following death had been received:

Annual Member

Robert E. Cardoze of Garden Grove, Calif., 17 November 1965.

The report of the Librarian for the month of February showed that forty-five volumes, thirty-nine pamphlets and twenty-four miscellaneous articles had been added to the Library and Cabinet of the Society by gift.

After these three reports were accepted the Chair presented as the speaker of the afternoon, Benjamin W. Labaree, Dean of Williams College, who spoke on "New England Town Meetings."

At 3:30 P.M. the meeting was declared dissolved and the members and their guests were invited to remain for the social hour.

STATED MEETING, 6 APRIL 1966

A stated meeting of the Society was held at 101 Newbury Street, Boston, on Wednesday, 6 April 1966, at 2:30 P.M., President Whitehill presiding.

The minutes of the stated meeting of 9 March were read and approved.

that Mathilda was called Regina, implying, since her husband was not royal, that she was a royal princess; that her son, Guigues IX, was baptized Dauphin, which is apparently the Northumbrian name Dolphin; and that she might have been a daughter of Edgar, the Atheling, of England, who lived in Scotland and had a known daughter. The proof of the latter statement was said to be that Henry of Huntingdon said that Edgar had a daughter Margaret, mother of Henry Lovel. Moriarty expressed puzzlement over this statement, which he could not find in Henry of Huntingdon's annals. In fact, the true source of the statement is not Henry of Huntingdon, but the Chronicle (of the Canons) of Huntingdon, which was prepared in 1291 as a contribution to the investigations of Edward I in that year. The text reads "This Edward begot Margaret, the queen of the Scots; and Edgar. Edgar [begot] Margaret, who was the mother of Henry, called Lupellus" (Alan O. Anderson, Early Sources of Scottish History (1922), vol. 2, p. 28). Since Henry Lovel is known to be the son of Ralph Lovel and his wife Margaret, and since Margaret had property in Scotland, the statement seems plausible (cf. Complete Peerage, new ed., vol. 8, p. 200-201). It should be pointed out that Edgar was the last known male line descendant of the house of King Alfred; under later inheritance rules this would have made Henry Lovel the rightful heir of the Saxon claim to rule England. The source is far from having the value of a contemporary witness, but might well be right. However, it is much to weak to offer support to the hypothesis that the Regina Mathilda was another daughter of Edgar. In any case, the marriage of Mathilda to Guigues VIII about 1080 seems a little early for a niece of St. Margaret, who was, herself, married about 1070. On the other hand, the omission of a daughter in a foreign land would not be unlikely—note that this same source omits Edgar's sister, Christiana, the nun.

Lincoln, Nebr. DAVID H. KELLEY.

THE COUNTESS OF GLOUCESTER, 1316:—A correspondent has questioned the statement made in THE REGISTER, vol. 120, p. 258, October 1966, that Dr. Michael Altschul in his account of the Clare family (A Baronial Family in Medieval England, p. 171, footnote 56) has corrected a statement made in The Complete Peerage (1926), vol. 5, p. 715, note d, that Margaret de Clare was called Countess of Gloucester in 1316. The fact is that Dr. Altschul makes it clear that the documents quoted by the author of the article on the Earls of Gloucester were misread, and that the person named in them was Maud (Mathilde) Countess of Gloucester (died in 1320), the widow of Gilbert de Clare, the 4th Earl (died in 1314), not Margaret, his sister and coheir. Margaret was then known as Countess of Cornwall because she was the widow of Piers de Gaveston, Earl of Cornwall (beheaded in 1312). She married secondly, in 1317, Hugh de Audley, who was not created Earl of Gloucester until 1337.

Havertown, Pa. WALTER LEE SHEPPARD, JR.

CHURCH:—In the article, "Samuel and Jonathan Church of Granville, Mass." (THE REGISTER, vol. 120, p. 176, July 1966), the statement is made that no further record has been found relating to Rebecca[2] Church (Samuel[1]) after that of her birth in 1718. The author of this note is a direct descendant of Rebecca Church and had been unable to identify her until Samuel Church of Stonington, Conn., appeared in THE REGISTER (vol. 118, p. 272, October 1964). A handwritten copy of the inscriptions on the gravestones in the cemetery in Pomfret, Conn., is in the vaults of the Society. It shows she was born in Plainfield, Conn., 15 Jan. 1717/18; died in Pomfret, Conn., 20 Nov. 1798, aet. 83; and that she married 5 Jan. 1743/4 Isaac Sharpe, born 23 May 1716. The dates of birth on her gravestone and on the Plainfield vital records are the same, which would appear to be sufficient evidence to identify Rebecca (Church) Sharpe as the youngest child of Samuel and Mary (Edwards) Church. It is possible she went to Pomfret to live with her aunt, Rebecca—"Zerviah"—(Church) Cleveland when the family was broken up after the death of Samuel.[1]

Newport, R. I. PETER C. CARD.

ROYAL BYE-BLOWS: ADDITIONS AND CORRECTIONS:—The following emendations to my article on "The Illegitimate Children of the English Kings from William I to Edward III" have been called to my attention or noted by me since it was published in THE REGISTER, vol. 119, p. 94-102, April 1965. They are arranged in the order of the several kings (or their immediate issue) as in the original article.

WILLIAM II ("William Rufus") and his older brother ROBERT, DUKE OF NORMANDY:—Prof. David H. Kelley of the University of Nebraska notes that Lt. Col. W. H. Turton in his Plantagenet Ancestry gives the wife of Fergus, Lord of Galloway, as Elizabeth, daughter of William II (p. 101), and the mother of Roger de Mortimer (died in 1215) as Maud of Normandy, daughter of William Cliton or Clito, son of Robert, Duke of Normandy, and nephew of William III and Henry I (p. 76). Let us consider them in order given.

The Scots Peerage (ed. by Sir James Balfour Paul), vol. 4, p. 135-6, shows that Fergus witnessed a charter of David I in 1136, was seen in 1147, and retired to a monastery where he died in 1161. He is said to have had a wife Elizabeth, youngest natural daughter of Henry I, but that the authorities "quoted by Chalmers" do not bear out this identification; yet they do not deny it, and it is quite possible and fits chronologically. Hovenden and Benedict Abbas both refer to Uchtred, eldest son of Fergus, as a cousin of Henry II, but Paul (op. cit.) points out that the same label is not applied to the other son Gilbert, who might have been of another mother. However, G. W. S. Barrow in his Robert Bruce (1965), p. 36, note 2, points out a fallacy in this statement, and thinks Gilbert also is referred to as cousin. Most of the authorities find it most likely that Elizabeth was a natural daughter of Henry I [cf. Charles Evans "addition" in THE REGISTER, vol. 120, p. 230, July 1966]. It is most unlikely that she was William's daughter both because of his character and because of chronological considerations.

As to the Mortimer descent from William Clito: this is chimerical, Roger was a younger son of Hugh de Mortimer (died in 1180-1). Hugh's wife was Maud, but she was the widow of Philip de Belmeis and daughter of William Meschin of Skipton-in-Craven, by Cecily, daughter and heiress of Robert de Romelly. Maud became coheir to her father's estate on the death of her brother, and Roger de Mortimer inherited some of his grandmother's lands. See the Complete Peerage, vol. 9, p. 271. William Clito is not known to have had any children.

Mr. George Walker of Palmerston North, New Zealand, has drawn the author's attention to one Avelina (died ca. 1178-9), married Hubert de Rye (or Ria) III, died by 1158/9 (V. J. Whatney, The Wallop Family (1928), p. 673, where evidences are not cited), who is stated to be a daughter of William II. Aside from the chronology and my statement regarding William's character and the unlikelihood of his having had children, nothing has been seen either to support or reject this identification.

HENRY I:—The maternity of the eldest son of Henry I, Robert of Caen, Earl of Gloucester, has been the subject of so many misstatements that it should be stated here that his mother was neither Sibyl Corbet nor Nest, daughter of Rhys ap Twedr. Probably the best discussion of her is still that in Edward A. Freeman's The Norman Conquest (1876), vol. 5, p. 852, where he states his reasons for believing her to be French or possibly a Norman.

STEPHEN, his eldest son EUSTACE (d.v.p.):—the March 1966 issue of The Genealogists' Magazine (vol. 15, p. 186) contains a note by Charles F. H. Evans, F.S.A., an able medievalist and genealogist, referring to his earlier article in the same publication for the preceding June (vol. 15, p. 53-63) and demonstrating that it is highly probable that Eustachie de Champaigne, wife of Anselme Candavaine, Count of Saint-Pol (died in 1164), who had first been married to and divorced by Geoffrey de Mandeville, Earl of Essex (died 21 Oct. 1166), was a bastard daughter of Eustace IV, Count of Boulogne, the eldest son and heir of King Stephen, who predeceased his father, 1153, without legitimate issue (hence the accession of the House of Anjou). Her children are given in Mr. Evans' note.

RICHARD I:—Mrs. Margaret Buxton of Albuquerque, N. Mex., has invited the author's attention to John O'Donavan's Annals of the Four Masters (1858), vol. 3, p. 263, where he states that "William fitz Adelm de Burgo, by Isabel, natural daughter of Richard I, and widow of Llewellyn, Prince of Wales" was father of Richard de Burgo, great lord of Connaught, and father of the William de Burgh who became Earl of Ulster. Prof. David H. Kelley has checked this against its source, Cucogry O'Clery (one of the Four Masters) in his The O'Clery Book of Genealogies, as edited by Seamus Pender (Analecta Hibernica, no 18, Dublin, 1951), and finds that the original pedigree (p. 193, paragraph 2315) merely shows that William the Conqueror [of Ireland, that is, William de Burgh] married ———, daughter of the King of England. The King is not identified, but the chronology above is certainly enough to make one suspect O'Donavan's interpretation. Richard I almost certainly was not the father of Richard de Burgh's mother. Moreover, since Llewellyn died in the first part of the 13th century, his widow, if he left one, could hardly have been the mother of a man born in the 12th century. Elsewhere it has been stated that William de Burgh (not fitz Adelm, as shown by J. H. Round in his Feudal England, p. 516-18), married the daughter of an Irish King, which appears more likely. Mrs. Buxton also noted mention of a son of Richard I called Fulke of Anjou, born in the Holy Land to one Johane de St. Pol. This is taken from C. W. Scott-Giles, The Romance of Heraldry, p. 50, where there is a quotation from a speech of Richard I, the wording of which might lead the uninitiated to believe that he was dealing with fact. However, the reference cited is to Maurice Hewlett's Life and Death of Richard Yea-and-Nay, a novel dealing with the last seven years of Richard's life, most of it with this alleged romance between Richard and Johane, for which there seems to be no real evidence. It should be noted that Norah Lofts' The Lute Player, covering the same period, also mentions a bastard of Henry "the Young King," older brother of Richard. This too appears to be fiction only.

JOHN:—Mrs. Margaret Buxton also called attention to N. Denholm-Young's Richard of Cornwall (1947), in which, on p. 41, in reference to the debarkation of Richard, Earl of Cornwall, from Dover, 10 June 1240, it is stated that his company included Eudo fitzRoy, an illegitimate son of King John, who had in 1237 an exchequer fee of £20 per year, and whose lands in Essex were granted in 1242 to Giles de Cancellis, a knight of Earl Richard. From this we would conclude that Eudo was then dead without issue. Footnote 7 (op. cit.) identifies his lands as "Kanewoden, in the Honour of Raleigh, Essex," and states that Matthew calls him "G. the Earl's own brother," while Flores, vol. 2, p. 249, shows him as a half brother, son of King John. On page 112 in note 2 it is stated that "Earl Richard had for example besides his brother Eudo . . . a brother Ivo who attests his charter to Launceton (Oliver, Mon. Dioc., Exon., p. 23)." Sir Anthony R. Wagner, K.C.V.O., Garter King of Arms, has kindly verified the existence of these two bastards not heretofore noted in the account of King John's progeny (who may be one and the same person).

Dr. Sidney Painter in Medievala et Humanistica, vol. 8, p. 17-19, identifies the mother of John's bastard son Oliver as probably Hawise, sister of Eva de Tracy (widow of Oliver de Tracy) and Fulk fitz Warin III, all three being children of Fulk fitz Warin II and his wife Hawise de Dinan.

Dr. George E. McCracken, reviewing N. Denholm-Young's History and Heraldry, 1254 to 1310: a study of the Historical Value of the Roll of Arms (1965) in The American Genealogist, vol. 42, p. 57, notes that the author added to King John's illegitimate sons William de Say. This reference states that the Dering Roll (in the possession of Sir Anthony Wagner) shows five sons of King John, including this William. However, Sir Anthony writes: "The roll does not describe anyone as the son of anybody . . . . I do not know . . . what his evidence is that William de Say was a natural son of King John. I suppose the William in question is the one we all know who died in 1272, who is generally given as the son of Geoffrey de Say." Mr. Denholm-Young, in a letter to me, has withdrawn this identification.

EDWARD II:—Mr. Charles Evans in THE REGISTER, vol. 120, p. 230, July 1966, called attention to F. D. Blackley's identification of Adam, a bastard son of Edward II, in the Bulletin of the Institute of Historical Research, vol. 37, p. 76-77. This the undersigned had already noted. The identification is clear and acknowledged in the "Wardrobe account of Roger de Waltham, 1 May 1322 to 19 Oct. 1323." This son, whose mother's name is unknown, was born about 1304-1310 (perhaps earlier) and probably before his father's marriage to Isabel of France in January 1308. He accompanied his father on the ill-fated Scottish expedition of 1322, although he was not yet a knight. It is not known whether he left descendants.

GENEALOGIES IN PREPARATION

Persons of the several names are advised to furnish the compilers of these genealogies with records of their own families and other information which they think may be useful. We would suggest that all facts of interest illustrating family history or character be communicated, especially service under the United States Government, the holding of other offices, graduation from colleges or professional schools, and occupation with places and dates of birth, marriage, residence and death. All names should be given in full if possible. No initials should be used when the full name is known.

Clark.—Hon. and Capt. Daniel, born in England in 1622, died in Windsor, Conn., in 1710, by Arthur H. Radasch, 14 Captain Small Road, South Yarmouth, Mass. 02664.

This is the last public record which has been found pertaining to Ira[6] Sherman or his wife Phebe. It is presumed, therefore, that they both died sometime in the ensuing decade, possibly soon after 1860. No will or administration of his estate has been located.

Mrs. Holman stated, presumably on the authority of his great-nephew, Joseph Pembroke Sherman, that Ira and Phebe Sherman had eight daughters. Since the 1830 census indicated that there were then seven female children in the family, and, as shown below, an eighth was born three years later, this seems to be correct. These eight children were as follows (the first seven born before moving from Ontario to Chautauqua County, N. Y.):

1. ORILLA,[7] born about 1817; married MARCUS DALRYMPLE of Sheridan, Chautauqua Co., N. Y., where they were living in 1850. Her grandson, Marriott Eugene Reynolds (son of John Hodge & Margaret (Dalrymple), born in Walworth County, Wis., 17 May 1870, furnished much of the information about this family.

2. SYLVIA ANN, born 18 Jan. 1818; married in Hanover, Chautauqua Co., N. Y., about 1838, SCHUYLER MATTOON, son of Abel & Mary (Livingston), by whom she had issue (surname Mattoon): 1. Amanda Louise, born in Silver Creek, Chautauqua Co., N. Y., 23 Sept. 1840 (the compiler's grandmother).* 2. Phebe, born in Silver Creek in 1842. Schuyler Mattoon died before 1845; and she married (2), WILLIAM CYRIL CALKINS, son of Israel & Mary (Grigg) (see Helen Turney Sharp's "The Calkins Family," a MS., Connecticut State Library, Hartford, fo. 652). Leaving her two Mattoon children with her parents, they went to Nauvoo, Ill., where they each received the Patriarchal Blessing in the Mormon Temple on 2 Jan. 1845 (Temple Records, Book 6, p. 91). They had issue: Jenette Ruby, born in Nauvoo 7 Jan. 1845; married Wesley Delap. On 3 Feb. 1846, before the "Saints" started to leave Nauvoo, Sylvia Ann Calkins is recorded as attending service in the Temple (Temple Records), but a record is on file of her visit and, since she was unaccompanied by her husband, he may have died or had been sent on ahead with other Mormons. Sometime after 1850, she married (3), ELIAS BLISS SUTHERLAND and moved to a homestead claim in Pinon, Pueblo Co., Colo., where he died 13 July 1877. In his will he mentioned his wife Sylvia Ann and her daughter Phebe (Probate Records, Pueblo County, Colo.). She died in Pinon sometime after 30 April 1883, when she sold her property to her son-in-law, Wesley Delap, and was buried in the Steele Cemetery there.

3. EMILY, born 2 Feb. 1820; died in Villenova, Cattaragus Co., N. Y., 28 Nov. 1898 (cemetery records); married in Chautauqua County GEORGE YOUNG. Four children.

4. NANCY, born about 1822; married in Spring Prairie, Walworth Co., Wis., 30 March 1854 as his second wife, JOSEPH BABCOCK. No children.

5. A DAUGHTER, unnamed in all family records. She is said to have been frail and probably died young.

6. A DAUGHTER, unnamed in all family records, who is said to have followed Brigham Young to the Great Salt Lake in 1847 and was never heard of again.

7. HARRIET, born 19 June 1827; died in Geneva, Walworth Co., Wis., 8 April 1909; married in Geneva, as his second wife, ANTHONY DELAP whose son by his first wife, Wesley Delap, married her niece, Jenette Ruby Calkins (see above). Children (surname Delap): 1. Ira. 2. Henry. 3. Albert.

8. LAURA, born in Silver Creek 10 July 1833; died in Williams Bay, Wis., 26 Jan. 1904; married (1), with her father's consent, 11 Aug. 1849, DEXTER CROCKER; married (2), HENRY SOUTHWICK.

* Amanda Louise Mattoon, daughter of Schuyler and Sylvia Ann[7] (Sherman) Mattoon, was born in Silver Creek, Chautauqua, Co., N.Y., 23 Sept. 1840; she died in Chicago, Ill., 4 June 1927; she married in Walworth, Wis., 4 July 1859, Noble Lovely Johns, descendant of Jehiel Johns, one of the pioneer settlers of Huntington, Vt., a Revolutionary War soldier. Alvin Lincoln Johns, the second child of this marriage, married Mary A. E. Cole of London, Eng., and had two daughters, the younger being the compiler of this article.

ROYAL BYE-BLOWS II
THE ILLEGITIMATE ROYAL OFFSPRING FROM EDWARD III TO QUEEN ANNE

By WALTER LEE SHEPPARD, JR., M.S., F.A.S.G.
Communicated by the COMMITTEE ON ENGLISH AND FOREIGN RESEARCH

The first article on this subject (THE REGISTER, vol. 119, p. 94-102, April 1965) has brought a number of requests to continue the listings to the end of the Stuart dynasty. Perhaps some of the readers will be able to add to the data here presented and comments are invited.

Before proceeding with the illegitimate lines of the kings who succeeded Edward III, we consider the lines stemming from Edmund of Woodstock, Earl of Kent, son of Edward I, and those from the legitimate sons of Edward III, which were not included in the compiler's earlier contribution.

EDMUND of Woodstock, Earl of Kent,[1] had a daughter and eventual heiress, Joan, "the Fair Maid of Kent," who married secondly (or thirdly), Edward "the Black Prince" (see below). By her first (or second) husband, Thomas Holand, Earl of Kent jure uxoris, she had, with others:

1. Thomas Holand, 2nd Earl of Kent, whose yr. son Edmond, the 4th Earl, had by Constance of York, Countess of Gloucester, an illegitimate daughter[2] Eleanor (see below).
2. John Holand, Duke of Exeter, married Elizabeth, daughter of John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster, had a son John, Duke of Exeter, who married Anne, daughter of Edmund, Earl of Stafford, and had a son Henry, Duke of Exeter, died without legitimate issue, but left two bastard sons,[3] Robert from whom there are descendants, and another whose name and issue if any are unknown.

Roy Log 63

The following are the records of the legitimate sons of Edward III.

EDWARD, Prince of Wales, "the Black Prince," eldest son, by wife Joan, "Fair Maid of Kent," had Richard II; he sired also the following bastards:

1. Edward, d. ca. 1369 aged 5 years.[4]
2. Sir John Saunder, said to be the son of Edith de Willesford.[5]
3. Sir Roger Clarendon.[6]

JOHN OF GAUNT, Duke of Lancaster,[7] 3rd son surviving, father by first wife of Henry IV. By his mistress, Katharine (Roet) Swynford, he had four children who were brought up with his other children. After the death of his second wife, he married Katharine and the children were legitimated, both by Act of Parliament (excepting succession) and by the Pope. Of these

1. John Beaufort,[8] Earl of Somerset, Marquis of Dorset, had with others: John, Duke of Somerset, who had a bastard daughter Thomasine,[9] married Reynold, Lord Grey of Wilton. Edmund, Duke of Somerset, Marquis of Dorset, whose son Henry succeeded but died s.p. legit., leaving a bastard son Charles Somerset, Earl of Worcester, male line ancestor of the Dukes of Beaufort.
2. Henry Beaufort, Cardinal of St. Eusebius, had a bastard daughter Joan, married to Sir Edward Stradling.[10]

By Marie de Ste. Hilaire, a Maid of Honour to Queen Philippa, John of Gaunt had a bastard daughter

3. Blanche, married in 1381 Sir Thomas Morieux.[11]

EDMUND of Langley, Duke of York,[7] 4th surviving son, had a daughter Constance, widow of Thomas le Despencer, Earl of Gloucester, who by Edmund Holand, Earl of Kent, had an illegitimate daughter Eleanor who married James Tuchet, Lord Audley of Norfolk. (See also under Thomas Holand, above.)

RICHARD II, son of Edward, the "Black Prince," had no known issue.

HENRY IV "Bolingbroke," son of John of Gaunt, left no known bastards. However, of his sons

1. Thomas of Lancaster, 2nd son, Duke of Clarence, is credited with a bastard son, Sir John of Clarence.[12]
2. John, 3rd son, Duke of Bedford, is credited with a bastard son, Richard.[13]
3. Humphrey, 4th son, Duke of Gloucester,[14] had two known illegitimate children: Arthur,[15] and Antigone, Countess of Tancarville.[15]

It is sometimes claimed that at least Antigone was legitimate, perhaps the child of his second marriage, born before marriage. However, all contemporary records call her illegitimate, and no evidence of maternity is shown.

HENRY V, eldest son of Henry IV, had no known bastards.

HENRY VI, son of Henry V, had no known bastards, and the paternity of his son Edward, Prince of Wales, d. s.p., has occasionally been questioned.

EDWARD IV, son of Richard, Duke of York, is said to have had many bastards,[16] but only two have been identified by the writer:

1. Arthur Plantagenet, Viscount Lisle.[17]
2. Elizabeth, married Sir Thomas Lumley knt., or Thomas, Lord Lumley, his grandfather, the former being far more likely.[18]

EDWARD V, son of Edward IV, died a child.

RICHARD III, brother of Edward IV, is said to have had seven bastards, but only the following are noted:[19]

1. Dame Katharine.[20]
2. John of Gloucester, called "de Pomfret."[21]
3. Richard Plantagenet.[22]
4. [?] Stephen Hawes, a Groom of the Chamber of Henry VII.[23]

HENRY VII, son of Margaret Beaufort and Edmund Tudor, had at least one known bastard: Sir Rowland Velville, constable of Beaumaris Castle; and probably Sir David Owen of Ditcheling, co. Surrey.[24]

HENRY VIII, son of Henry VII, had the following known (or claimed) illegitimate children:

1. Henry, Duke of Richmond.[25]
2. Sir John Perot.[26]
3. [?] (probably) Ethelreda, married John Harrington.[27]
4. [?] Sir Henry Cary, Lord Hunsdon.[28]
5. [?] Sir Thomas Stucley.[29]

EDWARD VI, son of Henry VIII, no issue.

ELIZABETH I, daughter of Henry VIII, no issue. The story, widely told by Baconians and occultists, that Sir Francis Bacon was an illegitimate son of Elizabeth I has no foundation whatever.

JAMES I of England (and VI of Scotland). Among his issue: Elizabeth married Frederick V, Count Palatine of the Rhine. Their 3rd son Prince Rupert, Duke of Cumberland, left no legitimate issue but two bastards: Ruperta, and Dudley Bard.[30]

CHARLES I, eldest surviving son of James I, had no known bastards.

CHARLES II, son of Charles I, had 14 acknowledged bastards (the first 14 in the following list), and probably a number more, though the additional three listed here with the exception of the last, no. 17, are more than doubtful. An excellent study of his acknowledged children, including further data on each, appears in the Complete Peerage, and so will not be repeated here.[31]

1. James Scot, Duke of Monmouth (by Lucy Walters).

2. Charlotte Jemima Henrietta Maria, Countess of Yarmouth (by Elizabeth Killigrew).
3. Charles fitzCharles, Earl of Plymouth (by Catharine Pegge).
4. Catharine, a Benedictine nun (by Catharine Pegge).
5. Anne Palmer, married Henry, Earl of Sussex (by Barbara Villiers, possibly a child of Roger Palmer her husband).
6. Charles fitzRoy, Duke of Southampton (by Barbara Villiers).
7. Henry fitzRoy, Duke of Grafton (by Barbara Villiers).
8. Charlotte fitzRoy, m. Henry Lee, Earl of Litchfield (by Barbara Villiers).[32]
9. George fitzRoy, Duke of Northumberland (by Barbara Villiers).
10. Barbara or Benedicta (by Barbara Villiers). By James, 4th Duke of Hamilton, she had a bastard Charles Hamilton "comte de Arran." She became a nun.
11. Charles Beauclerc, Duke of St. Albans (by Nell Gwinn).
12. James Beauclerc (by Nell Gwinn), died young.
13. Charles Lennox, Duke of Richmond (by Louise de Keroualle, Duchess of Portsmouth).
14. Mary Tudor, married Edward Radclyffe, Earl of Derwentwater (by Mary Davies).[33]
15. [?] a daughter by Lucy Walters named Mary Walters, whom he refused to acknowledge.
16. [?] a son, known as a Mr. Swan, by "an unidentified court lady," who was the father of a Mrs. Robinson.[34]
17. A claimed illegitimate son by a "Maria Stuart" was Don Jacobo Errico de Bove Stuardo, born in 1646. His son "Prince Don Giacomo Stuardo" had "his right recognized" in Naples in 1715.[35]

JAMES II, son of James I, had eight known bastards:[36]

1. Henrietta (by Arabella Curchill),[37] married in 1684 Sir Henry Waldegrave.
2. James fitzJames, Duke of Berwick (by Arabella Churchill).[38]
3. Henry fitzJames, Duke of Albemarle (by Arabella Churchill).[39]
4. Ignatia, a nun (by Arabella Churchill).
5. Another unidentified child (by Arabella Churchill).
6. Lady Katherine Darnley (by Catharine Sedley),[40] married first, James, Earl of Angelesy; secondly, John Duke of Buckingham and Normandy.
7. & 8. Two sons (by Catherine Sedley) educated in Paris but died young.

MARY II, daughter of James II, co-monarch with William III, no surviving issue.

WILLIAM III, son of Mary, daughter of Charles I, by William II, Prince of Orange, had no known surviving issue, no claimed bastards.

CHARLES, called III (son of "The Old Pretender"), also "The Young Pretender," and "Bonny Prince Charlie,"[42] had by Clementina Walkinshaw, a daughter Charlotte Stuart[43] to whom he gave the title Duchess of Albany. She is stated to have had by Ferdinand de L. Rohan, Archbishop of Cambrai, who died in 1813, three bastards: Charles Edward Stuart, born in 1781, died in Dunkeld in 1854 aged 73, twice married but apparently died s.p. Aglea and Mary, the two daughters not further seen. The Young Pretender is frequently credited with other bastards, but none have been proven. Gen. Charles Edward Stuart, Baron Rohenstadt, sometimes stated to be a son of Charles, was actually his grandson, son of Charlotte, as above. Two brothers claiming to be legitimate grandsons of Charles III, "John Sobieski Stuart" and "Charles Edward Stuart," both of whom styled themselves "Comte d'Albany," were actually John Hay Allen and Charles Stuart Hay Allen, sons of Capt. Thomas Allen, R.N. For details of their masquerade see Albany in the Complete Peerage.

HENRY, called IX, Cardinal York, brother of Charles, called III, had no known issue. With him ended the Stuart dynasty.

Emanuel Scrope Howe (brother of Scrope Howe, 1st Viscount Howe), who died in 1709. They had four sons and two daughters. Dudley Bard, born about 1666, was the son of Frances or Francesca, daughter of Sir Henry Bard. He was killed 13 June 1686 in the siege of Buda, apparently without issue.

32. Lady Charlotte is of particular interest to citizens of the United States since she has many descendants in this country, the most notable being the descendants of the Calverts, Lords Baltimore. See also Notes and Queries, n.s. (1965), vol. 12, p. 43-47.

33. There may be descendants of Mary Tudor in the Americas too. Anya Seton in her book Devil Water (1962) recites the tale of a daughter (by a secret first marriage) of Charles Radclyffe, Lord Derwentwater, second son of this marriage, and successor to his brother James, as having married and come to Virginia, where she left descendants. Miss Seton claims access to records to substantiate the story. It is interesting to note that a similar story about a daughter of the same name (illegitimate) of Sir Charles, is current in Charleston, S.C., where a Dr. James Wilson over a century ago wrote down a slightly variant tale claiming to be her descendant. The author has seen no factual evidence to support either story.

The reader seeking references for the lists of legitimate children of the kings, not here listed or followed, will find such data as he may require in the Dictionary of National Biography under the name of each sovereign in question. There is also a genealogical article on the succession, with all legitimate children, in the front of Burke's Peerage (1963 ed.).

He married in Pittstown, N. Y., 28 Feb. 1793, CYNTHIA WHIPPLE, born 17 Sept. 1768, living in Utica in 1840.

Lyman Ellis and his brother Marvel Ellis enlisted as fifers in Capt. Cushing's Company in 1777, when both were mere boys. A deposition, dated 11 Sept. 1840, by Lyman Ellis was presented on behalf of his sister-in-law, Cynthia (Whipple) Ellis, then widow of his brother Marvel, in which he swore that his brother was born in Mendon, and gave an account of his service. He said that about 1786 Marvel removed to Pittstown, where the deponent already resided. He added that Marvel had married Cynthia Whipple there and that on 4 Feb. 1794 they had jointly purchased from Daniel McCormick a tract of land in the County of Washington, N. Y., "on the West side of Lake Champlaine" (a copy of which deed was attached); and that there the daughter, Elizabeth Harriet, had been born. Finally, he deposed "that he and the said Marvel removed from Pittstown to Troy, Rennselaer County, N. Y. in the year 1795 or 1796." A deposition by Cynthia Ellis, widow of Marvel Ellis, dated 14 Aug. 1840, gives her marriage date and furnishes a Bible record showing births of their children and the date of death of her husband and their daughters. Both depositions state that Marvel Ellis served in the Regiment of Col. Revere (Revolutionary Pension Record W-16250, National Archives). We note that the celebrated Paul Revere served for a time at Ft. William in Boston Harbor as a Captain of artillery.

Children (Bible record in pension claim):

i. ELIZABETH HARRIET,[6] b. 22 Jan. 1794; d. 2 Aug. 1797.
ii. ELIZABETH HARRIET, b. 4 Aug. 1797; d. 1 Dec. 1817 "in the 21st yr. of her age."
iii. MAHLON MARVEL, b. 31 Oct. 1801; m. 6 Oct. 1847 LUCINDA FIFIELD. They had at least one child.

ROYAL BYE-BLOWS III*
ILLEGITIMATE DESCENDANTS OF THE SCOTTISH KINGS TO JAMES VI

By WALTER LEE SHEPPARD, JR., M.S., F.A.S.G., of Havertown, Pa.

The writer has arbitrarilly started this list with Malcolm II (Mac Kenneth). Little is known about the marital status of the earlier kings, but those seeking data on them may wish to consult the references noted.[1]

An interesting feature of Scottish history is the Competition for the Crown in 1290, which resulted from the deaths, within a short period, of all those closely related by blood to the immediate Royal House. This necessitated making a decision between a large number of claimants, thirteen of whom were related by blood, and one, Eric of Norway, by his marriage to a princess of the blood. Of the thirteen blood claimants it is interesting to note that seven based their claims on descents from bastards. The Competition was renewed seven years later when John Balliol surrendered the Crown to King Edward I of England, but at that time the succession of the Bruce was a foregone conclusion.[2]

MALCOLM II, reigned 1005-1034, son of Kenneth II (reigned 971-995), left no known bastards, and no sons. He had three daughters of whom (1) Bethoc married Crinan and was the mother of Duncan I; and (2) Donada married Finlac of Moray and was the mother of Macbeth (below).[3]

DUNCAN I, reigned 1034-1040, had no known bastards, but three, or perhaps four, children: Malcolm III (Canmore); Donald Bane; Melmare, ancestor of the Earls of Atholl; and perhaps Madach.[4]

MACBETH, reigned 1040-1057, had no known issue. He married as her second husband Gruoch, daughter of Bode, a son of Kenneth III (cousin of Malcolm II) and grandson of Dubh, the brother of Kenneth II. By her first husband Gillacomen, she had a son Lulach.[5]

LULACH "the Simple", reigned for only seven months before he was assassinated in 1058. He had a son Malsnechtal and a daughter whose son Angus succeeded to the earldom of Moray and was associated with Malcolm, natural son of Alexander I, in a rising against David I in 1130.[6]

MALCOLM III Canmore, reigned 1058-1093, had no known bastards. By his first wife Ingeborg, widow of Thorfin, Earl of Caithness and Orkney, and daughter of Jarl Finn Arnason, he had Duncan II; by Margaret, daughter of Edward Aethling, he had (with others) Edgar, Alexander I, and David I, as well as a daughter Eadgith (otherwise Matilda) who married Henry I, King of England, and had issue.[7]

DONALD BANE, reigned 1093-1094, and again 1094-1097, had no known bastards.[8] His granddaughter and heiress Hextilda (daughter of his daughter Bethoc by Huchtred of Tyndale, son of Waltheof), married Richard Comyn. Their descendant John Comyn, "the Black Comyn", was a Competitor for the Crown in 1291.

DUNCAN II, reigned half of 1094, had no known bastards.[9] His son William fitzDuncan had a son Donald MacWilliam who may have been illegitimate, who claimed the Crown against William the Lion, and was killed in 1187. A son of Donald named Guthred raised a rebellion in 1211-12 but was captured and killed. Another son Donald Bane, was killed in 1215.

EDGAR, reigned 1097-1107, died unmarried 8 Jan. 1106/7 and had no known issue.[10]

ALEXANDER I, 1107-1124, left no legitimate issue by his wife, Sibyl, illegitimate daughter of Henry I of England (THE REGISTER, vol. 119, p. 96, April 1965).[11] He had a bastard son Malcolm.

DAVID I, "The Saint", reigned 1124-1153, had no known bastards.[12] His son Henry,[13] Earl of Huntingdon, was the father of Malcolm IV, William the Lion, and David, Earl of Huntingdon, and three daughters of whom Ada married Florent, Count of Holland, and had a son who was a Competitor in 1291. Henry had a bastard daughter Marjorie, whose grandson Robert de Pinckney was a Competitor in 1291. The 3rd son:

David,[14] Earl of Huntingdon, had three known daughters (1) Margaret married Alan of Galloway, whose daughter Devorguilla married John Balliol and had a son John Balliol, successful Competitor, who became King in 1292; (2) Isabel married Robert Bruce (Brus) whose son Robert was a Competitor in 1291, whose grandson became Robert I; (3) Ada married Sir Henry de Hastings whose grandson Sir John de Hastings was a Competitor,[15] but deferred to Balliol. Earl David had also, illegitimate: i. Henry of Stirling, d.s.p.; ii. Henry of Brechin, held the Lordship of Brechin, and by a wife Julian, had issue; iii. Ada married Malise, son of Earl Ferteth, and brother of Earl Gilbert of Strathern, issue.

MALCOLM IV, "the Maiden", reigned 1153-1165, died unmarried leaving a bastard son whose name is unknown who died in his father's lifetime.[16]

WILLIAM, "the Lion", reigned 1165-1214[17] had only one surviving legitimate son, Alexander II, and at least six bastards:

i. Robert de London.
ii. Henry Galithtly, whose son Patrick was a Competitor in 1291.[18]
iii. Isabella (by a daughter of Robert Avenal) married (1) 1183 Robert Bruce, no issue; married (2) 1191 Robert de Ros, whose great-grandson William de Ros was a Competitor.[19]

iv. Ada married 1184 Patrick de Dunbar, 5th Earl. Her great-grandson Patrick de Dunbar was a Competitor.[20]
v. Margaret (by a daughter of Adam de Hythus) married Eustace de Vesci. Her grandson William de Vesci was a Competitor.[21]
vi. Aufrica married William de Say. Her great-grandson Roger de Mandeville was a Competitor.[22]

ALEXANDER II (died 1249) had only two known children, his son and heir Alexander III, and a bastard daughter Marjorie who married Sir Alan Durward,[23] and whose grandson Sir Nicholas de Soulis was a Competitor.[24]

ALEXANDER III (died 1286) had no known bastards.[25] Two sons predeceased him together with his daughter Margaret who had married King Erik of Norway and had an only daughter Margaret, "the Maid of Norway", who at the age of six was heir to her grandfather.

MARGARET,[26] "the Maid of Norway", died in 1290 aged seven, on the North Sea en route to her coronation, leaving the succession in doubt with many claimants, and finally it was resolved in favor of John Balliol.

JOHN BALLIOL, descendant of David I, "the Saint" (see above), compelled to resign 1296,[27] had a son Edward, later King Edward Balliol, but no known bastards.

ROBERT I, the Bruce (died 1329)[28] (see above under Henry of Huntingdon), succeeded John Balliol after several years of struggle; married (1) Isabella, daughter of Donald, 10th Earl of Mar, by whom he had a daughter Marjorie who married Walter the High Steward, killed by a fall 1316 leaving an only son Robert Stewart who became Robert II. Robert the Bruce married (2) Elizabeth, daughter of Richard de Burgh, Earl of Ulster, by whom he had sons David II and John (d.y.) and daughters (1) Mathilda[29] married Thomas Isaac and had two daughters Catharine d.s.p., and Joanna married John, Lord of Lorn; and (2) Margaret married William, 4th Earl of Sutherland, and had two sons John, d.v.p. and William, 5th Earl. King Robert I had also the following bastards:

i. Sir Robert Bruce, Lord of Liddesdale & Sprouston, killed 12 Aug. 1332.
ii. Walter Bruce of Odistoun, d.v.p.
iii. Nigel (or Neil) Bruce of Carrick, killed at Neville's Cross 17 Oct. 1346.
iv. Margaret married Robert Glen, living 29 Feb. 1363/4.
v. Elizabeth married Sir Walter Oliphant of Gask.[30]
vi. Christian Bruce of Carrick, living 1328/9.

EDWARD BRUCE, Earl of Carrick, King of Ireland, was the younger brother and (in 1315) the designated heir of Robert; he died in 1318[31] He obtained dispensation to marry Isabel, daughter of William, Earl of Ross, but there is no record of the marriage. His son Alexander Bruce, created Earl of Carrick about 1329 by David II, was by Isabel of Atholl, sister of David de Strathbegie, who was not his wife though she is so called by Balfour. Edward died s.p. legitimate, leaving probably two bastards:

i. Alexander, Earl of Carrick, mar. Eleanor, sister of the 1st Earl of Douglas, had no sons but is said to have a dau. Eleanor who mar. Sir William de Cunningham.
ii. Thomas, falsely stated to have succeeded to the Earldom of Carrick on death of his brother Alexander. He has been variously identified as (1) an illegitimate son of Robert I, by whom he was created Earl of Ross for life, which story can be positively disproven; (2) as descended from John de Brus, a younger brother of the Competitor (Robert I's grandfather), which is possible although this line has not been investigated; (3) as a son of Edward Bruce which is more generally accepted although positive proof has not been found. This Thomas was the ancestor of the Bruces of Clackmannan, Earls of Elgin, Barons Kinloss.
iii. Robert. Edward Bruce is often credited with a bastard of the name (perhaps his eldest) who is said to have succeeded to the earldom of Carrick upon Edward's death and to have died s.p. in 1332 when he was succeeded in the earldom by Alexander. However, this seems to be a confusion of names with that of Edward's brother, the King; no such son Robert appears to have existed.

DAVID II, succeeded in 1329, died in 1371, twice married but left no issue by either wife.[32] Although he had many mistresses including an English favorite, Katharine Mortimer, there are no known bastards.

EDWARD BALLIOL, crowned by the English at Scone in 1332, was chased back to England three months later; he was 'off-and-on' king in competition to David II, until he surrendered his crown to England in 1356 where he died s.p.s. 1363. No known surviving issue, legitimate or bastard.[33]

ROBERT II, grandson of Robert I, son of Marjorie Bruce and Walter Stewart; crowned 1371, died 1390; twice married.[34] He had nine children by his first wife Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Adam Muir, all born before legal marriage, later legitimated; the eldest, John, Earl of Carrick, ascended the throne as Robert III (see below); the third, Robert, Duke of Albany (see below); the fourth, Alexander, Earl of Buchan (see below). He married (2) Euphemia, daughter of Hugh, Earl of Ross, widow of John Randolph, Earl of Moray, and had by her four more children. He had eight known bastards:

i. Sir John Stewart of Rowallon, "the Black Stewart," hereditary sheriff of Bute.[35]
ii. Thomas Stewart, Archdeacon of St. Andrews.
iii. Alexander Stewart, Canon of Glasgow.
iv. Sir John Stewart of Dundonald, "the Red Stewart," lord of Burley, Clerk of the Audit, Capt. of Dunbarton Castle, where killed in an attack 1425 by his grandnephew, James, son of Murdac, Duke of Albany; married Elizabeth, daughter of William, Lord of Graham.
v. Alexander Stewart of Inverlunon, charter 3 Jan. 1377/8, erected into a Barony. Remainder to his brothers of the whole blood, James & Sir John of Cairdney.
vi. James Stewart, received a charter in 1383 for part of Kinfauns, also in a charter of 25 Dec. 1372. Living 1391. Remainder to his brothers Alexander and Sir John.
vii. Sir John Stewart of Cairdney, received land in charter 15 Jan. 1382/3; remainder to his brothers James and Alexander. Descendants.
viii. Walter Stewart, said to be a 4th brother, and in the remainders for Cairdney.

ROBERT STEWART (1340?-1420), Duke of Albany,[36] 3rd legitimated son of Robert II, had a son Murdac,[37] 2nd Duke, whose children included (1) Walter who by a lady named Campbell had two bastard sons: i. Andrew, lord of Avondale; and ii. Arthur; by (?) Janet Erskine he had another bastard named iii. Walter of Morphie from whom descended the Earls of Castle Stewart in Ireland. These three sons were legitimated 17 Apr. 1479. Possibly he had other bastards. The Duke had a younger son, Sir James, who had by a lady named Macdonald a bastard i. James Beg from whom come the Stewarts of Ardverlich; and a daughter ii. Mathilda who married William Edmondston of Duntreath. The story frequently told that James (or alternately Walter) had by a lady of the house of the Lord of the Isles, seven bastards: Andrew, Walter, Murdac, Arthur, Robert, Alexander, James, is a confusion and amplification of the above.

ALEXANDER STEWART, Earl of Buchan,[38] 4th legitimated son of Robert II, had no legitimate issue, but seven bastards: i. Alexander, Earl of Mar, d.s.p. legit. but had a bastard son Thomas d.s.p. & v.p., and a bastard daughter Janet mar. Lachlan M'Lean of Dewart, who received a grant of rents from James II; ii. Sir Andrew of Sandhuach; iii. Duncan; iv. Walter; v. Robert of Atholl; vi. James; vii. Margaret mar. Robert, Earl of Sutherland.

ROBERT III, eldest son of Robert II, baptised John, crowned 1390, died 1406, had seven children by his wife, including James I,[39] and two known bastards:

i. James Stewart of Kilbride, flourished 1388-1400.
ii. Sir John Stewart of Auchingowan and Ardgowan 1390, ancestor of the Shaw Stewarts of Ardgowan, Blackhall and Greenoch.

JAMES I, eldest son of Robert III, crowned 1424, assassinated 1437, married 1424 Joan Beaufort, granddaughter of John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster, son of Edward III, and by her had twin sons Alexander (d.y.) and James II, and six daughters.[40] He is said to have been deeply in love with her and to be the only Stewart King of England who had neither mistresses nor bastards. His widow married (2) 1439 James Stewart, Lord of Lorn, "the Black Knight of Lorn" (see above under Robert I), the son of Sir John Stewart, Lord of Lorn, jure uxoris, by his wife Isabel,[29] daughter of Joanna Isaac (or Ysak), daughter of Mathilda Bruce and Thomas Isaac of Lorn. By this second marriage Joan had three sons: (1) Sir John Stewart, Earl of Atholl,[41] (2) Sir James Stewart, Earl of Buchan (who had bastards: James, ancestor of the Earls of Traquair,[42] and Agnes[43] married (1) Adam, Earl of Bothwell); (3) Andrew, Bishop of Moray.

JAMES II, reigned 1437-1460,[44] had four sons, including James III, and two daughters: (1) Mary who by 2nd husband James Lord Hamilton, had with others, Elizabeth, married Matthew 2nd Earl of Lennox; (2) Margaret who had a bastard daughter Margaret Crichton by William, 3rd Lord Crichton. The daughter had three marriages with issue by the third.[45] King James had also an illegitimate son John Stewart of Sticks and Ballechin, ancestor of the Stewarts of Ballechin, Perthshire.

JAMES III, reigned 1460-1488, had three sons including James IV and probably an illegitimate daughter who married a Logan of Restalrig.[46]

JAMES IV, reigned 1488-1513,[47] married Margaret Tudor, daughter of Henry VII of England and had two daughters and four sons, James V being the only child to survive infancy. His widow Margaret married 2nd, Archibald Douglas, 4th Earl of Angus, by whom she had an only daughter Margaret who married Matthew Stewart, 4th Earl of Lennox, whose eldest son Henry Stewart, Lord Darnley, became the 2nd husband of Mary, Queen of Scots, and father of James VI. King James IV had the following bastards:

i. Margaret (or Jane),[48] by Margaret Drummond; mar. (1) John, Lord Gordon of Huntley, and had issue; mar. (2) Sir John Drummond of Innerpeffry.
ii. Alexander Stewart, Archbishop of St. Andrews, by Marian Boyd.
iii. James Stewart, by Marian Boyd; when 8 years candidate for Abbacy of Dunfermline.
iv. Catherine,[49] by Marian Boyd; mar. James Douglas, 3rd Earl of Morton.
v. James Stewart,[50] Earl of Moray, by Janet Kennedy.
vi. Joan, by Agnes,[43] illegitimate dau. of James, Earl of Buchan (see above), by Margaret Murray who afterward mar. Adam, Earl of Bothwell; mar. Malcolm, Lord Fleming.[51]
vii. Henry (called Wemyss), who became Bishop of Galloway; by a lady named Wemyss.

JAMES V, reigned 1513-1542, had three legitimate children of whom only Mary, Queen of Scots, survived.[52] He had the following bastards:

i. Lord John Stewart, Prior of Coldingham, by Elizabeth, dau. of John Carmichael; legitimatized by Papal decree 1534, issue.[53]
ii. James Stewart "senior,"[54] Abbot of Kelso and Melrose, d.s.p. 25 Sept. 1557; by Elizabeth, dau. of Alexander Shaw.
iii. James Stewart "secundus," Earl of Moray, regent temp. Mary;[55] by Margaret, dau. of John, 5th Lord Erskine.
iv. James Stewart "tertius," apparently d. s.p.;[54] by Christina Barclay.
v. Robert Stewart, Earl of Orkney, Prior of Holyrood, many descendants;[56] by Euphemia, dau. of Alexander, Lord Elphinstone.
vi. Adam Stewart, Prior of Carthusian House, or of Charterhouse at Perth;[57] by Elizabeth, dau. of John, 3rd Earl of Lennox.
vii. A child, name unknown, by Elizabeth Beaten.
viii. Robert Stewart "secundus," Prior of Whithorn,[58] by an unknown mother.
ix. Joan, by Elizabeth Bethune; mar. Archibald, 5th Earl of Argyll.[59]
x. Margaret, by Elizabeth Bethune; proposed wife of Alexander, Master of Home, son of George, 4th Earl of Home. Her fate unknown; prob. d. s.p.[60]

MARY, Queen of Scots,[61] reigned 1543-1567, had by her second husband, Henry Stewart, Lord Darnley, an only son and heir, James VI of Scotland who ascended the English Throne as James I. Mary's third husband was James Hepburn, Earl of Bothwell, d. s.p. legit., son of Patrick, who was son of Adam by his wife Agnes, illegitimate daughter of James, Earl of Buchan[43] (see above). His sister, Lady Jane Hepburn, became the wife of Lord John Stewart,[53] Prior of Coldingham, bastard of James V, and their son Francis Stewart Hepburn[62] was created Earl of Bothwell by James VI (and I of England), and was subsequently attainted.

JAMES VI, King of Scotland (1567) and I of England (1603), son of Mary, Queen of Scots (see THE REGISTER, vol. 121, p. 187, July 1967).

24. D.N.B., vol. 16, p. 266: Alan Durward "the Usher," justiciar, regent, Earl of Atholl 1233-35, may have mar. (2) Isabella, Countess of Atholl, after the death of her husband, Thomas (who d. s.p. legit.), and may have fathered a daughter Lora by her who contested the succession with Isabella's sister Forflissa, unless this is a misdated record of the earlier contest between Isabella herself and Forflissa. D.N.B. (see also A. O. Anderson, Early Sources of Scottish History, vol. 2, p. 571) says Alan sought Papal legitimation for his daughters by Marjorie, illegitimate dau. of Alexander II; further wording shows Nicholas de Soulis the claimant to be a descendant of Marjorie. Ermengard, wife of William de Soulis, was a daughter of Marjorie by Alan Durward, her husband. The request for legitimation was for Marjorie herself to make her daughters eligible to succeed to the Crown. Names of other daughters of Marjorie have not been found. D.N.B. suggests Thomas Durward, a knight in 1258, was a son of Alan. Another Alan Durward flourished about 1306, apparently connected with the Soulis family of claimants. Alan was the son of Thomas de Lundin, "Ostarius" or "the Doorward." See also S.P., vol. 1, p. 6, 422; vol. 2, p. 256; vol. 8, p. 249-50. The descent of the claimant was: Ermengard Durward mar. William (son of Nicholas de Soulis (a border chief)) d. 1264. Their son, Sir Nicholas, the Competitor, married Margaret, 5th dau. of Alexander Comyn, Earl of Buchan, had William, involved in a conspiracy to seize the throne in 1320, and Sir John who was killed at Dundalk. Agnes, Countess of Strathern, widow of Malise, also involved in the conspiracy, was probably the 2nd dau. of Alexander Comyn and sister-in-law of Sir Nicholas. Transactions of the Dumfrieshire and Galloway Natural History and Antiquarian Society, 3rd ser., vol. 24, p. 163-193.

SOME LIGHT ON THE MARRIAGE OF ROBERT AND MARY ROYCE OF CONNECTICUT

By Clarence Leslie Hewitt, Jr., of Clearwater, Fla.

The limbo of Robert Royce's origin and ancestry still seems to be impenetrable despite efforts over many years to clear it up. There is ample evidence that he and his wife lived in Connecticut—in Stratford, New London, and Wallingford—and that he left his mark on contemporary history of that period. It is well recorded that his wife's name was Mary but it is not at all clear that her surname was Sims.

To those of us who are descendants of Robert and Mary Royce, the following report will prove disappointing. The writer's keen interest in tracing the English roots of his family had given rise to the hope that some day a leisurely trip to England, with an automobile to provide convenient and adequate transportation would enable him to establish beyond question the link between the American and English families. In 1965 we took advantage of the opportunity afforded by recent retirement, and with our automobile, indulged ourselves to the limit in this fascinating but frustrating experience.

The marriage of Robert Royce and Mary Sims has been stated frequently as having occurred in Martock, co. Somerset, 4 June 1634. The date and place have no apparent validity as the following account of recent research seems to establish.

The search for this couple's origin and ancestry must of necessity start with the earliest record of either person. Robert was an early settler in Stratford, Conn., but it is not recorded how he got there or from whence he came. He had land—lot #74—recorded in his name as early as 16 Sept. 1648. In 1658 he appeared again in the Stratford land records as Robert "Rise" (New page, old folio #62, vol. I).

He appeared next in New London in 1657, a year prior to the last record of him in Stratford, where he was named among the first sixteen members of the New London Church. The town granted him the original lot on Post Hill in 1657; he was constable in 1660; a member of the General Assembly in 1661, 1667, and 1669; and townsman in 1663 and 1668. In 1663 he was granted land by the town to settle his two sons, Samuel and Nathaniel, and in 1667 was appointed to keep an "ordinary" (tavern) and was freed from training, probably on account of his age.

Robert died in New London in 1676. His unsigned will was probated there and is recorded in the County Court records, vol. III, p. 87. His inventory was presented 22 Sept. 1676.

Mary continued to live in the Post Hill homestead until 1688 when, on 4 February, she signed an agreement with her children consenting to the sale of the property of which she had life use. She died intestate in Wallingford where, on 14 July 1697, her son Samuel was granted the administration of her estate (New Haven County Records, vol. 1, p, 251).

Many reputable sources have tried to answer the question as to how Robert and Mary got to Stratford and from whence they came. Two of the best known references are found in F. M. Calkins' History of New London (p. 293-295); and James Savage's Genealogical Dictionary of New England (vol. 3, p. 570).

These sources associate Robert Royce of Stratford with Robert Royce of Boston who in 1637 became involved with the Rev. John Wheelwright and Mrs. Ann Hutchinson in the contemporary religious controversy and was disarmed. This Robert (with his wife Elizabeth) came to Boston in 1630 in the Winthrop Fleet, on the ship Francis.

Charles Edward Banks, in his book The Winthrop Fleet of 1630 (1930), p. 90, gives this item from the passenger list:

> "Royse (Ryse), Robert.—Boston. Possibly from Exning, co. Suffolk, No. 137 in church list of 1630. Freeman, 1 April 1634 (Mass. Col. Rec., vol. 1, p. 368)." and "Elizabeth. Wife of Robert."

On 27 Aug. 1965, the writer visited St. Martin's Parish Church, Exning, and, with the help of the Vicar, the Rev. Mr. Edmund, examined the original parish registers which are in remarkably good condition, albeit the English script is difficult reading. Many Royses are recorded but no wedding of a Robert and Elizabeth, or of a Robert and Mary Sims was found. A Robert Royse did marry Mary Lawes (or Hawes) on 11 Oct. 1602 but nothing was found that might link this couple to the American immigrant.

A study of the Banks' Manuscripts in the Rare Book Room, the Library of Congress, reveals the evidence supporting the "Royce" entry in his Topographical Dictionary of 2885 Emigrants to New England (1620-1650). There is no doubt that Banks made quite a [Observations.—SWEIN, eldest son of Godwin, Earl of Kent, witnessed a charter, circa 1043, as "Swegen dux."[b] His great earldom seems to have embraced the shires Gloucester, Hereford, Oxford, Somerset and Berks. According to the Tewkesbury Abbey Chronicle,[c] BRICTRIC, son of Algar, otherwise known as Brictric Meaw, a great Thegn of the time of Edward the Confessor, held, with Tewkesbury, various lordships in Worcester, Gloucester, Somerset, and other counties. Maud, afterwards wife of William the Conqueror, in her youth wished to marry Brictric, who refused her. When she became Queen she imprisoned him, and on his death shortly afterwards his manors, the (later) "honour of Gloucester," were given to her. On her death in 1083 the King took possession. After the Conqueror's death William II gave this honour to Robert FitzHamon in reward for his services to the King and the King's father.

WILLIAM FITZEUSTACE, possibly son of Eustace II, Count of Boulogne, is called by Dr. David Powel, in his additions to Caradoc's Historie of Cambria, "Earl of Gloucester," but there is no good evidence of his having held the earldom.[d] been a composition instead of one-third of the total realised. In most cases at this early period the third penny appears to have been actually one-third of the sum for which the profits were farmed—e.g., in Essex it amounted to £40 10*s.* 10*d.* It remained at this figure for more than two hundred years—and, indeed, as long as it can be traced in records. At some time, therefore, this odd amount probably was offered and accepted as a composition, for it is inconceivable that throughout so long a period the amount paid by the farmer never varied. The third penny in the case of Gloucester remained at £20, which is the sum for which the third penny was compounded in most of the grants of earldoms in the fourteenth century.

In 1140 he burnt Nottingham,([b]) and in Feb. 1141 he and his son-in-law, Ranulph, Earl of Chester, relieved Lincoln and took Stephen prisoner,([c]) sending him to Bristol.([d]) He accompanied Maud in her progress to Winchester and London, and when the citizens drove her out fled with her to Oxford. He took part in the fighting at Winchester and helped Maud to escape from the city, but was captured 14 Sep. (1141) at Stockbridge and taken prisoner to Rochester.([e]) Shortly afterwards he was exchanged, without concessions on either side,([f]) for Stephen, who was set at liberty on 1 Nov., and Robert then joined Maud at Bristol, and with her proceeded to Oxford. In June 1142 Maud sent him over to her husband, Geoffrey of Anjou, to urge him to invade England. It would appear that on this occasion Robert entered into a treaty of alliance with Miles of Gloucester, Earl of Hereford.([g]) Geoffrey declined to help until he had conquered Normandy, whereupon Robert joined him in his campaign.([h]) On hearing that Maud was besieged in Oxford, Robert hurried back to help her, taking with him her son, afterwards Henry II. He captured Wareham and other places,([i]) and on Maud's escape from Oxford he and Henry met her at Wallingford, and they went to Bristol, which was Robert's chief residence till 1146. In 1143 Robert defeated Stephen at Wilton, and in 1144 blockaded Malmesbury, Stephen refusing battle; but Maud's party was now so much reduced that Stephen was able to take Faringdon, which Robert had fortified.([j]) In the spring of 1147 Robert took Henry, Maud's son, back to Wareham and sent him over to Anjou; and in the same year he founded Margam Abbey.([k]) He m. Mabel,([l]) da. and h. of Robert FitzHamon, by Sibyl, da. of Roger (de Montgomery),

The granting of the earldom is connected by chroniclers with the marriage of Robert and Mabel, but the date (1122) raises a difficulty, for it is unlikely that the King would have kept his son waiting for 15 years, or the heiress waiting so long. The local tradition in Robert of Gloucester (Rolls Ser., vol. ii, p. 623) that Mabel objected to the marriage because Robert had no to-name [surname], and when the King said he should be called FitzRoy replied that that would not go down to her children (for they would be merely FitzRobert, not FitzRoy), and that then Henry made him Earl of Gloucester, may refer to two stages: (1) At the time of the marriage he was called FitzRoy (and so he is described as filius Regis in the charters he attested); (2) later, when the children began to grow up, Mabel made the further complaint that this name would not descend to them, and so the King, in order to please her, made Robert Earl of Gloucester. The argument might appeal to a feudal lord, who ought not to marry a ward to his (or her) disparagement.

APPENDIX D[a]

HENRY I'S ILLEGITIMATE CHILDREN

Henry I and Charles II were the only Kings of England to beget a large brood of bastards. Charles II's children have already been catalogued in vol. VI, Appendix F; from which it appears that Charles, who had no legitimate issue, is credited with 8 sons and 6 daughters, but that the paternity of one of those sons is not certain. This record is easily beaten by Henry I. Besides his 2, or possibly 3, legitimate children,[b] it seems fairly certain that he was the father of at least 9 sons and 11 daughters. Moreover it is possible that one of the 9 sons really represents 2 brothers of the same name; and finally it remains doubtful whether a certain unnamed daughter of the King was identical with one of the 11 or was yet another addition to his extensive family.

No complete catalogue of Henry's bastards is given by any contemporary writer. However, Robert de Torigny, in his additions to the Gesta Normannorum Ducum of William de Jumièges, enumerates 6 sons, mentioning the marriage of the first, gives the marriages of 6 daughters, of whom he names only three, and refers to another daughter, also unnamed, who was still unmarried when he wrote.[c] Particulars of Henry's other children have to be collected from different sources.[d]

It is impossible to set out the names of the children in the order in which they were born, as the date of birth is not known for any of them; nor is it possible to arrange them according to their maternal parentage,

(a) This Appendix is by Geoffrey H. White.

(b) Besides his 2 well-known children, William the Aetheling and the Empress Maud, Henry is said to have had by his 1st wife, a 2nd s. (and 3rd child), named Richard (Gerv. Cant., Rolls Ser., vol. i, p. 92); who, if he really existed, must have d. young. He is ignored in the Dict. Nat. Biog. (sub Henry I).

(c) William de Jumièges, Gesta Normannorum Ducum (ed. Marx, Soc. de l'Histoire de Normandie), pp. 306–08—additions by Robert de Torigny.

(d) There is no satisfactory modern list of Henry's bastards. A table of the "Illegitimate Issue of William II, Henry I and Stephen" is given by Cobbe, Norman Kings of England, Table III; but, like most of his tables, it is very inaccurate. The best list is probably that printed by Ramsay, Foundations of England, vol. ii, pp. 338–40, which enumerates 7 sons and 9 daughters (2 unnamed); but one of these ladies was not the child of Henry. The same 16 children are listed by Lord Onslow, The Empress Maud, p. 199. The Dict. Nat. Biog. does not profess to give more than a selection of the children.

for in most instances this is not recorded.[a] Indeed, Robert de Torigny does not name the mother of any of the 13 children whom he enumerates except the unmarried daughter, although his omissions may occasionally be made good from other sources.

The sons were as follows, nos. 1 to 6 being those named by Robert de Torigny. He states that no. 1 was the eldest son, and it is certain from other evidence that no. 2 was the 2nd son;[b] but it is doubtful how far the others follow any chronological or other order. It seems likely that no. 6 was 3rd of the six, because when Robert wrote, probably not earlier than 1142,[c] nos. 3, 4 and 5 were still young and unmarried (or so he says); but no. 6 had died soon after his father,[d] being then a married man, leaving issue. Where the 3 remaining sons should be inserted is again uncertain; but no. 8 should probably follow no. 2, and no. 9 come after no. 3, each pair being apparently children of the same mother. On the other hand, it is possible that Henry had two or more mistresses simultaneously.

(1) ROBERT the KING'S SON, styled also DE CAEN,[e] the name and identity of whose mother are uncertain;[f] b. probably circa 1090; cr. in 1122 (June–Sep.) EARL OF GLOUCESTER; m. Maud (named also Mabel and Sibyl),[g] da. and h. of Robert FITZHAMON, LORD OF GLAMORGAN, by Sibyl, da. of Roger (DE MONTGOMERY), 1st EARL OF SHREWSBURY; d. 31 Oct. 1147 at Bristol; bur. at the Priory of St. James, Bristol. For fuller particulars of Robert and for his issue, see ante, vol. v, pp. 683–86, sub GLOUCESTER.[h]

(a) However, an attempt will be made, after discussing the children separately, to group as many as possible under their respective mothers.

(b) See p. 107, note "b"; cf. p. 107, notes "a" and "c" below.

(c) Apparently between 1142 and 1150, probably finishing his interpolations and additions about 1149 (Marx, William de Jumièges, p. xxviii).

(d) Idem, p. 307.

(e) He attested charters regularly as Robert "filius Regis"; but he is twice styled Robert de Caen (de Cadomo) by Orderic (ed. Le Prévost), vol. v, pp. 121, 122. The statement in the Dict. Nat. Biog. that Robert was born at Caen, citing Orderic, seems to be a deduction from these passages. That he was "known . . . as Robert 'de Caen' from his birthplace" is also assumed by Round, Family Origins, p. 214.

(f) The statement by Pezet, cited ante, vol. v, p. 683, that she was Sibyl, da. of Robert Corbet, a burgess of Caen, seems to arise from confusion with Henry I's mistress Sibyl, da. of Robert Corbet of Alcester (see below).

(g) Her name seems to have been Maud (Round, Cal. Docs., no. 799; Orderic, vol. iii, p. 318); but she is called Mabel by William of Malmesbury, Hist. Novella (Rolls Ser.), pp. 529, 587, and by Robert of Gloucester (Rolls Ser.), ll. 8876, 8883, and Sibyl by Robert de Torigny, in his additions to Will. de Jumièges, p. 306. As Earl Robert claimed to be a banner-bearer (signifer) of the see of Bayeux by hereditary right (Rec. des Hist. de France, vol. xxiii, p. 700), that office was probably hereditary in his wife's family, and may have been appurtenant to the lands which she inherited.

(h) The statement there (ante, vol. v, p. 686, note "b") that Robert had a da. Mabel, who m. Aubrey de Vere, is certainly mistaken.

Ancestry + Descendants of Marlin Plumb

Editor's note:
This short summary by Edith C. Thatcher, obtained by DEW from the LDS Library (film 1032969) in 1984, was very blurry in the original, but it is still readable (with difficulty). Be aware that Thatcher's conclusion about the connection to royalty of the Elizabeth Norton who married John Plumb was rejected by DEW. See the editor's note at Norton family.

CHRONOLOGY OF THE PLUMB LINE

The oldest Plumb we have record of on our direct line is John Plumbe, born about 1505 in Copessfield, Essex, England. They lived there and in Spayne's Hall, Great Feldham, Essex, England.

It is through the 11th great grandmother, Elizabeth Norton, who married John Plumb, 24 Nov 1668, that we branch out into the many lines, and royalty. The Norton (and Norville as they change to earlier) goes back into the Le Sigur, Norville who came to England with William the Conqueror, as his Constable. John Norton came to America with his family in about 1638. Sir John Norton was born about 1421 in Sharpenhow, Beds., Eng. He married Maude de Grey (they were 13th great grandparents), daughter of Lord John de Grey, and f Anne de Ferrers, (who also used the name Dispencer, as her mother was Joan or Anne Dispencer. Lord John de Grey was the Lord of Wilton, and Justice of North Wales, also Governor of Carnervon Castle. He died between 1322-1349.

Ann de Ferrers was the daughter of William de Ferrers, Lord of Groby, and the de Ferrers line was in Derby, they being the Earls of Derby, for several generations. I believe they came to England with William the Conqueror, and the first one of them (22nd great grandfather) was Walkelyn or Walcheline de Ferrers, who was born in Galenius, Normandy, and died about 1036.

William de Ferrers, the 7th Earl of Derby (Anne de Ferrers grandfather) married Margaretde Quincy, daughter of Roger de Quincy and Helen McDougal, Princess of Scotland (Hence the Scotland line of Kings.) Helen was daughter of David le Scott, and Maud Kevelioc. The Kevelioc line goes into Randle le Meschine and Cohun. They came to Wales in the 1100's from Normandy.

David's father, Henry le Scott, Earl of Huntingdon married Ada, or Adeline deWarren (21st great grandparents); and Henry le Scott, Earl of Huntingdon was son of King David I, King of Scotland, who married Matilda, or Maud. David I, was son of Malcolm III born about 1031, who married St. Margaret Atheling, daughter of Prince Edward, born 1016, who was called the Exile. Malcolm III, was the son Of Duncan I, and Grandson of Crinan the Thane of Altanach, and Princess Bethoc, also called Beatrix of Scotland.

Prince Edward's line goes on up through Edmund I "Ironsides" Athelred II "Unready", and the others through Alfred the Great which is the English Royal line we go into. Alfred Great, 20th gnf. Another part of the Pedigree goes to William the Conqueror, 23rd gnf Coming another way, Roger de Quincy's parents were Saire de Quincy(Magna Charta Baron) who married Margaret de Beaumont (Leicester) in 1170. Her lines were the Earls of Leicester, Eng., and three generations above her, Robert de Beaumont married Isabel de Vermandois, in 1096. In some places she is called Isabel Elizabeth. Her father, Hugh the Great or Magna was son of Henry the First King of France, and his wife, Anne of Russia, Queen. Incidentally her grandfather was Olaf Skotkonung, King of Sweden)

Isabel de Vermandois' mother was Adelheid (Adelaide) of Vermandois, daughter of Hubert the 4th, who was none of Henry the 3rd who was son of Edward I, King of England (29th great grandfather)

Going back to the Norton's, Dennice Cholmely, of St. Anne's, Blackfriars, London (chr in 1562) was the wife of William Norton. Her Cholmeley(Cholmondeley) line goes back to Cholmondeleigh Cheshire, 1175, and John Belward 1055 of Malpas, Cheshire. It branches out into a lot of Cheshire Pedigrees, Kingsley, Dutton, Brereton, Vernon, Done, Sandbach, le Botor, or Thornton, Venables, Vernon, Bromley, Chetwilton, Praers, Berkeley, Massy, and a number of other early Cheshire families. George Ormerod's History of Cheshire has some 154 great-grent grandparent and their families.

Well, so much for the ancestors. I guess it is up to the descendants to live their lives in a way that they can be able to hold their heads up in the world. It is the way we live our lives that counts.

ARGOTTA, the mother of all the kings of France, was wife of Pharamond,* Duke of the East Franks, 404, elected King of the West Franks 419, or 420, or 424, reckoned by historians the first King of France in the reign of Theodosius II, Junior, the Emperor of the East. Their son,

CLODIO or CLODIUS, surnamed Crinitus or Long-Hair, because he made the Franks wear long beards and long hair in opposition to the Romans and for a sign of liberty; for

* Pharamond, Duke of the East Franks, 404, elected King of the West Franks, son of Marcomir I, Duke of the East Franks, 389, d. 404, reigned fifteen years, son of Clodius I, Duke 379, d. 389, reigned ten years, son of Dagobert, Duke 358, d. 379, reigned twenty-one years, son of Genebald I, who with 2,686 men with their wives and children were sent by his brother Clodomir IV, King of the Franks, in quest of new habitations, A.D. 328, and they planted themselves between the Almans and Thuringi, and Genebald became their first Duke and d. A.D. 358, reigned 30, son of Dagobert, King of the Franks A.D. 306, slain 317, as above.

he invaded Gaul, and after he had been several times repulsed by Ætius, the Roman General, he took Artois, Cambray, Tournay, etc., as far as the River Somme, residing at Amiens. He d. A.D. 445, or 447. Wife, Basina, a widow, daughter of Weldelphus, King of the Thuringians. Their son, SICIMERUS I, m. a daughter of Ferreolus Tonantius, a Roman Senator and son-in-law of the Emperor Avitus. Their son,

FERREOLUS, Duke of the Moselle and Markgrave of the Schelde, m. (1) a daughter of Clovis I, King of France, and m. (2) Deuteria, a Roman lady, and had by his second wife

AUSBERT, on account of his grandmother is said to be of an Imperial descent, d. 570; m. Blithildis, daughter of Clothary I, King of France, who had Soissons, Vermandois, Piccardy, Flanders and Normandy, son of Clovis I, Magnus (and his wife Clotildis, who got Clovis to promise to turn Christian, but he delayed it some time, daughter of Chilperic, King of Burgundy, m. 492, and she d. 548 or 551), who slew Alaric the Goth for being Arian, 507, and overturned the Gothic Kingdom in Languedoc and annexed it to the Crown, 508, also made other conquests in Germany; son of Childeric I; son of Merovaeus I. Their eldest son,

ARNOALDUS, Markgrave of the Schelde, after his wife's death turned monk and went into the monastery of St. Martin in Villa Longa, which he himself had built, succeeded as Bishop of Mentz, d. 601; m. Oda, a Swabian lady, and had Itta (Itha, or Ida) who m. Pipinus de Landis, the first Duke of Brabant, 615, Major Domus of Clothary II, d. 647, and also

ST. ARNOLPH, the first Major Domus of Clothary II, after his wife's death was Bishop of Mentz, d. an hermit 641, and afterwards canonized. He is the common patriarch of the Carolingian and Capetian kings. Wife Dodo, a Saxon lady. Their son,

ANCHISES, or ANDEGISUS, Markgrave of the Schelde and in his wife's right Duke of Brabant after his brother-in-law Grimoaldus 658, was also Major Domus of King Childeric II, and was slain 685. Wife Begga, heiress of Brabant, 658-698, daughter of Pipin de Landis, the first Duke or Count or Lord of Brabant, A.D. 615, d. 647, reigned 32, and his wife Itta (Itha, or Ida), daughter of Arnoaldus, Markgrave of the Schelde (see ante). Their son,

PEPIN of Heristal, or Crassus, founder of Carlovingian line of Frankish kings, became Duke of Austrasian Franks 680, Duke of Brabant 685, Major Domus in the time of Theodoric III, Clovis III and Childebert III, kings of France. In 687, in battle of Sestri, conquered Burgundy and Neustria. He d. 16 December, 714. His son,

CHARLES MARTEL, King of the Franks, b. A.D. 690; m. Lady Bothrude. He succeeded his father as Mayor of the Palace in 714, and obtained royal power while Chilperic was the nominal King. He gained near Poitiers, in 732, a most important victory over a large army of Saracens who had invaded the Kingdom. This is known as the Battle of Tours and is regarded as one of the decisive battles of the world's history. For this victory he was surnamed MARTEL (i.e., the Hammer). He d. in 741, at Quierzy-Sur-Oise, and was succeeded by his son,

PEPIN LE BREF, b. in 714, m. Lady Bertha, daughter of Charibert, Count de Leon. (Another account says she was daughter of a son of one of the Eastern emperors). He became in 741 Major Domus of Neustrasia and Burgundy under Childeric III, a Faineant, and in 747 succeeded his brother Carloman as Major Domus of Austrasia and the Rhine country, including Thuringia and Swabia. In 749 he defeated the Bavarians and in 752 was crowned King of the Franks by St. Boniface by authority of Pope Zachary; conquered Septimania from the Saracens 752-760; was again crowned by Pope Stephen III, 754. Broke the power of the Lombards in Italy 754-756, and gave the Exarchate of Ravenna and the Pentapolis to the Holy See, the origin of the temporal power of the Popes; overcame the Saxons 757; took Marbonne from the Saracens 759; waged a stubborn war with Guifar, Duke of Aquitainia, 760-768; and in the latter year procured the assassination of his valorous enemy. Died September, 768. His title LE BREF (the "Short") was given on account of his small stature. He first established Parliaments in France 18 January, 757. His second son,

CHARLEMAGNE (CHARLES I), King of the Franks and Roman Emperor, b. 2 April, 742, probably at Aix-La-Chapelle; after his father's death, in 768, reigned over the Franks jointly with his brother Carloman until the death of the latter, in 772; from that time, sole ruler during a reign of forty-three years, he carried on incessant wars on all his borders, extending his domains and at the same time spreading Christianity, subduing rebellions and building up the vast dominions over which he was crowned a successor of the Roman Cæsars by Pope Leo III in 800. In 772 he began a thirty-year war with the determined Saxons, after the successful opening of which Charlemagne was called to the assistance of Pope Hadrian I against Desiderius, King of the Lombards, who had demanded the banning of Charlemagne and the coronation of the sons of Carloman because the former had put away the daughter of Desiderius on account of sterility and m. the Swabian Princess Hildegard of Savoy. Charlemagne marched two armies over the Alps and conquered Lombardy in 774; returned and beat the Saxons again and hastened into Spain, in 778, to help the Arabian rulers of that country against the Osman Caliph of Cordova. It was in this war that the hero of romance, Roland, fell in the pass of Roncesvalles.

The extensive domain of Charlemagne was only rendered secure by ceaseless vigilance and warfare. In 799 the Romans revolted against Pope Leo III, and were again brought into subjection by Charlemagne, who, in return, while he was praying on the steps of St. Peter's Church, was crowned by Leo with the iron crown of the Western Empire, unexpectedly to him, as he pretended, on Christmas Day 800. Charlemagne laid the foundation of his empire securely. He was sagacious, energetic, and vigilant as a ruler and commander alike. He watched over and fostered agriculture, trade, arts and letters with untiring zeal, clearing away forests, draining swamps, founding monasteries and schools, building up cities, constructing splendid palaces, as at Aix, Worms, and Ingelheim, and drawing to his court scholars and poets from all nations, as Alouin, Paulus, Diaconus, and Turpin. He was himself proficient in science, as well as all hardy accomplishments, speaking Latin and knowing Greek. He was tall and stately, measuring seven feet of his own foot-lengths, simple in his life, "excelling all men of the time, to all alike dread and beloved, by all alike admired," according to the historian Nithard.

His fame spread through all the land. The Caliph Haroun-al-Rashid sent an embassy to the Court of Charlemagne with gifts in token of good will.

He had three sons: Pepin, Charles, and Louis. In 813 he associated his only surviving son, LOUIS LE DEBONNAIRE, with himself in the empire. He d. at Aix-La Chapelle January 28, 814, and was succeeded by his son Louis. His descendants are called Carlovingians.

LOUIS I, le Debonnaire, or the Gentle, Roman Emperor 814 to 840, born at Casseneuil in 778, son of the Emperor Charlemagne by his wife Hildegard, m. (2) Lady Judith, the Fair Maid of Bavaria, daughter of Guelph I, Duke of Bavaria.*

LOUIS I, le Debonnaire, his elder brothers having died, succeeded his father January 28, 814, and the first years of his government were quite successful; but in 817 he yielded to the wishes of his sons and gave each of them a share of his dominions, and hence arose complications which he was incapable of managing and from which resulted the dissolution of the Empire. He d. at Ingelheim June 20, 840, and was buried at Metz. By his first wife, Irmingardis, daughter of Ingram, Count of Hasbania in Saxony, who d. 818, he had LUDOVICUS GERMANICUS (LOUIS THE GERMAN) b. 800, King of Bavaria; Gisela, wife of Eberhard, Count of Burgundy; and Adelheid, wife of Robert Fortis, Count of Burgundy, Duke of France. By his second wife, Judith, the Fair Maid of Bavaria (see ante), he had CHARLES II, the Bald, b. 823, King of France, 840, Emperor 875, d. 878.

* The Huns and other such nations as found a passage westward into Old Germany seemed to be colonies of the ancient Russians and Muscovites, at least their very near neighbors. But the Russians themselves were not famous until the time of Michael III, the Emperor of the East, when coming from Mount Taurus they infested the Euxine Sea and attempted to take Constantinople, A.D. 864, but failing in their attempt and not willing to go home, they made a descent on the northwest banks of the Euxine Sea, where the inhabitants were much akin to them; and enlarging their bounds northwards they became so powerful that their King Wolodomir I (see genealogy given below) was married first to Helena, daughter of the Emperor Nicephorus Phocas; and after he was converted to Christianity, he was married next to Anna, daughter of the Emperor Romanus I, when they left off molesting the Eastern emperors and turned their arms against Sarmatia Europæa, Lithuania, Padolia, Russia Rubra, and the countries thereabouts, until A.D. 1240, Bathu (or Boydo), the son of Occata Chan, with his Crim Tartars, conquered them, after which they had not one sole monarch, but many princes called Lords of Russia or Muscovy, tributary to the Tartars, who held them in vassalage very long, even after John, the son of Basilius II, came to call himself the Great Duke of Muscovy; for at the conclusion of a peace with the Tartars, it was stipulated that Duke John once every year should stand on foot in the Castle of Moscow and feed the horse of the Crim Tartar with oats out of his own cap; which homage was afterwards changed into a tribute of furs; and this being also denied by his successors, occasioned long and bloody wars between them and the Tartars. But though the Tartars have had the assistance of the Turks, the Muscovite has bravely asserted his own sovereignty and also wrested from them many goodly provinces. and Burgundy and Marquis of Orleans and Count of Paris, d. 16 June, 956, and his wife Adelheid or Hadwid, daughter of Henry I, Auceps, the Emperor.

PRINCE HUGH MAGNUS, Count of Vermandois, and his wife, the Countess Adelheid of Vermandois were parents of LADY ISABEL DE VERMANDOIS, who m. (1), in 1096, Robert de Beaumont, 1036-1118, Count of Meullent, first Lord of Bellomont, by tenure, created in 1103, Earl of Leicester (see Planche's The Conqueror and His Companions); and m. (2) William de Warren, Earl of Warren, second Earl of Surrey, son of William, Earl of Warren, created Earl of Surrey, a companion of William the Conqueror, and his wife Gundred, daughter of William the Conqueror and Matilda of Flanders. Lady Isabel de Vermandois-de Bellomont-de Warren d. in 1131.

The genealogy of King Wolodomir I and of Anne, wife of Henry I of France, is as follows:

RURIC, Prince of Russia, 840, father of ICOR RURICOWITZ, slain 950, m. Olga, a Christian of the Greek Church, baptized at Constantinople and called Helene, and had SUIETISLAUS ICOROWITZ, father of WOLODOMIR I, Swietoslawitz, chosen the first Czar, built the town Wolodimir. He was first a pagan idolater, but was converted to Christ and joined those of the Greek Church and when baptized was called Basilius, 990 (or 999). His wife Ann was sister of Basilius II, Emperor of Constantinople, and daughter of Romanus I, Emperor of the East, son of Constantin VII, Emperor of the East (and his wife Helene Augusta, daughter of Romanus Lacopenus, and Theodora Augusta), son of Leo V, Philosophus, Emperor 886-910 (and his fourth wife, Zoe), son of Basilius, a Macedonian, Emperor of the East 867, d. 885 (and his wife Eudocia). Wolodomir I, first Czar of Russia, divided his dominions among his twelve sons, who were all alive at his death, 1005. His son, JAROSLAUS, the Halt, was Lord over all Russia, 1015, d. 1052; m. Engerherde, daughter of Olaus the Bold, King of Norway, 993-996, drowned 998 (or 1000), and had Agatha, m. Prince Edward, the Exile, of England; Anastasia, m. Andrew I, King of Hungary, and ANNE, wife of HENRY I, King of France, 1027-1060.

* This map gives approximate location of the Clans and Families of North Scotland. Territories located outside the Highland Line (that invisible boundary forming the division between the Highlands and the rest of Scotland) have been determined by reference to reliable records and manuscripts. On a small scale map it is possible to detail only the most prominent names. Absence of any family does not mean that they were landless.

Foreword to the First Edition

A couple of years ago, while staying with Mac Cailein Mor to shoot roe in a drive with Scottish deer-hounds to clear the young timber plantations in Glenshira, I was given access to the many neat note-books at Inveraray on West Highland history and clan genealogy that contained the life-work of that scholarly recluse, the late Duke Niall of Argyll. Everything was unfinished and unpublished. It all seemed such a waste.

I realised that I too had been doing the same sort of thing: more than thirty years spent in collecting material for an exhaustive book on the clans and families of Scotland, highland and lowland alike—impeded by simultaneous work on the influence of the Dawn Religion and sacral royalty on subsequent civilisation in general and on British custom in particular. Recently, David Hicks had also taken a number of photographs to illustrate another of my projected works: on the historic homes of the present-day lairds associated with the Highlands, who still hold some of the lands they held at the time of the sixteenth-century Parliamentary Rolls. Duke Niall's unfinished notes made it clear that these tasks cannot adequately be completed in anybody's otherwise busy lifetime.

It therefore seemed better to write something now than everything never. This book is the result. So it is not meant to be a disciplined work of scholarship. Nor does the layout permit space for references. It's more like a note-book of random jottings about this vast subject. The length of an article has nothing to do with historical importance, but usually only indicates that I've more fairly new stuff to write about one clan or family than about another. Thus the mighty MacLeods and the massacred Lamonts are already extensively written up in the excellent histories published by their active Clan Societies, but little has been written before about such interesting clans as the Maclachlans and the McCorquodales. And time has prevented any research as yet into the history of such families as Polson and Swanson (branches of Mackay and Gunn), MacNicol of Portree (otherwise Nicolson), Rankin (hereditary pipers to Maclean of Coll), Maclaverty and MacSporran (respectively tatlers and purse-bearers to the Lords of the Isles). But we do try to give a panoptic view of the clans in particular and of Highland history in general.

A lot more work needs to be done by Gaelic scholars, like the Rev. John McKechnie, who can collate the Irish annals and MacFirbis's genealogies with the Highland genealogical papers (often with several generations obviously omitted) that are already printed or gradually being made available for research. Far more will probably be known about clan origins when the work of such modern scholars as Professor G. W. S. Barrow, Professor Archie Duncan and Dr. Grant Simpson can be fully considered: although unfortunately mediaeval genealogy is only incidental to their work as historians. Meanwhile, I have been greatly helped by the draft county maps of feudal superiorities in the thirteenth century so generously made available to me by their compiler: Major John Weir, Keeper of MSS. in Glasgow University Library.

So many other people have helped that it's impossible to thank them all. My wife, for instance, is responsible for most of the typing errors. Of all those who were kind about the illustrations I'm especially grateful to Sir Anthony Wagner, Garter Principal King of Arms, who has allowed us to reproduce a part of his unique Balliol Roll even though it's at present awaiting special editing before general publication. Then there is Ian Cameron, who has undertaken the layout of a book made difficult by the length of the pictures' captions. But above all, I must thank Miss Elizabeth Kingsley-Rowe (a genealogically interesting specimen as a cousin of Kingsley who wrote The Water Babies), who has been the driving force behind getting the book completed in time and space—and who, as a result, has had skilfully to edit our over-lengthy captions. Finally, David Hicks and I are especially indebted to two Chiefs who had us to stay and provided us with bases from which to operate. One is Lochiel, perhaps the most talented of a long line of remarkable Chiefs. The other is Lord Lovat, of whom Winston Churchill wrote to Stalin (quoting Byron) that Lovat was the mildest-mannered man that ever scuttled ship or cut a throat.

Of course the book is intended to appeal to clannish pride. But it should always be remembered that the Highland clan system produced vertical as opposed to horizontal social distinctions. A Maclean or a Campbell, a Cameron or a Mackintosh, were distinguished by features which cut clean across class. Although people often speak of 'old families', in fact no family is older than any other. What is meant is that the particular families called 'old' have managed to maintain their identity and retain records of their past longer than the majority of other folk. In England and abroad, this is too often true only of a limited aristocracy. In the Highlands, however, everybody was eventually descended one way or another from several of the great historic royal clans. Nor did parental disregard of the canonical laws of marriage bar innocent children from membership of the clan. At a meeting of the Standing Council of Scottish Chiefs, while discussing the Succession Bill, the present writer pointed out that illegitimacy did not necessarily in Scotland exclude a son from succession even to a chiefship, if covered by a parental nomination accepted by the Crown—and that this applied in fact to a fellow chief present. After the meeting two other chiefs

(neither of them the one I had in mind) came up to me separately and protested: 'I've never been called a bastard in public before'

All the same, this book stresses the sacral royal and dynastic origin of the founder chiefs, and thus of the clans themselves: the ultimate biological unity with the Sovereign that accounts for 'Highland pride' and loyalty. The end-papers should make this meaning clear. Also, a short history of a clan must be based on some account of its chiefs, just as a short history of a realm tends to concentrate on the doings of its kings. (Incidentally, the royal title was not King of Scotland but King of Scots, as Chief of Chiefs of the whole family of Scots throughout the world). Economic and social history can better be studied in the works of Dr. I. F. Grant, and by reading Scottish Studies, the twice-yearly publication of the School of Scottish Studies run by Mr. Basil Megaw for Edinburgh University.

Again, any Perthshireman is conscious of the overlapping of the Highlands and the Lowlands. So some of the families who held lands in both parts of Scotland tend to be given extra space, as their history is usually omitted altogether from standard clan books. Indeed, had there been more time and space, I would have included accounts of such other 'overlapping' names as Rose of Kilravock, Brodie of Brodie, Dunbar of Westfield, Erskine of Mar, Spalding of Ashintully, Ramsay of Banff, Fothringham of Fothringham, Lyon of Glamis, Haldane of Gleneagles and Stirling of Keir: though it would perhaps be a bold man that tried to write anything new about such an 'overlapping' family as Innes of that Ilk, whose historian and scion is the present Lord Lyon King of Arms—Sir Thomas Innes of Learney, author of The Tartans of the Clans & Families of Scotland (Edinburgh 1947) and editor of Frank Adam's The Clans, Septs & Regiments of the Scottish Highlands (Edinburgh 1952). I should perhaps mention at this point that the following crest badges appearing in this book have not yet been recorded in Lyon Register: Galbraith, Gunn, Macaulay, Macfie and Macquarie.

Readers who want to follow up a particular clan or family should refer to Margaret Stuart's Scottish Family History (Edinburgh 1930), supplemented by Joan Ferguson's Scottish Family Histories held in Scottish Libraries (Edinburgh 1960). Much fascinating detail about the rarer surnames is to be found in Dr. George Black's The Surnames of Scotland (New York Public Library 1946). A good short general history of the Highlands is W. R. Kermack's The Scottish Highlands (Edinburgh 1957). The pioneer work on the older castles of the Highlands and Lowlands alike is of course MacGibbon & Ross, The Castellated & Domestic Architecture of Scotland (Edinburgh, 5 vols. 1887–1892)—on which we have drawn for some of our illustrations—but which should be read in conjunction with the present-day works of Dr. W. Douglas Simpson, who has kindly allowed us to use two of his drawings. Highland dress is examined in J. Telfer Dunbar's History of Highland Dress (Edinburgh 1962). The selection of tartans for the present work had to be made while I was temporarily abroad, and so that difficult task fell upon my editors. However, those who want to study tartan further should read Lady Hesketh's Tartans (London 1961). We received a lot of kind help from Mr. R. E. Hutchison of the Scottish National Portrait Gallery and Mr. Stuart Maxwell of the National Museum of Antiquities of Scotland. Finally, I can hardly miss this opportunity of warmly recommending my own coloured map, Scotland of Old, illustrated by Don Pottinger and published by John Bartholomew & Son, of Edinburgh.

Foreword to the Second Edition

Since the first edition of 1967, I have modified my views in certain cases, and made numerous corrections and additions. Also, the clans and families associated with Highland history are now arranged for convenience in alphabetical instead of geographical order.

For revisions to Macquarie and Munro history, I am grateful to Dr. Jean Munro and her husband, R. W. Munro, author of Highland Clans & Tartans (London 1977). To Professor Peter Loptson of the University of Saskatchewan, I am indebted for clearer understanding of the Hamilton duchy of Châtelherault's legal history; and to the American genealogical scholar, Andrew B. W. MacEwen, I am equally indebted for solving the problem of the relationship of the Buchanan chiefs to the dukes of Albany. I would also like to thank Professor William Matheson of the University of Edinburgh for his suggestion that the Clan Shaw's opponents in the famous Battle of the Clans at Perth in 1396 were not, as I had believed, the Cummins but the Clan Ghille-mhaoil or Macmillans from Lochaber. As a result of further research, there seems little doubt that his suggestion was right, and so I have amended the text accordingly.

An entirely new entry is MacArthur, based on recent research by two American clan historians, acknowledged by name in the text itself.

The Highland

North of the Forth and the Clyde is the true Scotland that once had her capital at Scone. This was the old Gaelic-speaking kingdom of Alba, later known in 'Scots' as Albany in rather the same way as Moscow-ruled Russia was known as Muscovy. This was Scotland as she stood before she assimilated the Cumbrian Welsh from the Clyde to the Solway and conquered the Northumbrian English from the Forth to the Tweed: before the wily lawyers and clerks of Glasgow and Edinburgh retaliated by getting their grips on the North and gradually eroding the Celtic culture and Gaelic language of their erstwhile conquerors.

Within the ancient land, there has never been quite such a clear-cut distinction between the highlands and the lowlands as has perhaps had to be made by many writers obliged to generalise. Tartan was worn in the lowlands as well as in the highlands, although of course highland dress was not worn in the lowlands as it is a hill dress. Everywhere the Scots are of mixed race: Picts mingled with Gaels from Ireland, Norsemen from Scandinavia, Britons from Strathclyde, Angles from Northumbria, Normans and Flemings and Franks from the Continent. The Hebridean clan of MacLeod is of Norse origin, the Sutherlands were Flemish, while in the conquered territory south of the Forth such families as Dundas and Dunbar (and probably Home) were Gaels. Intermarriage had already scrambled the Scottish genealogical egg by the dawn of our national history.

Moreover, there were always families who held land both in the highlands and the lowlands. While they were temporarily a younger branch, for example, the present line of the Frasers of Lovat made their principal home at Strichen in lowland Buchan, but they always held land also at Abertarff in highland Stratherrick. Again, the Wemyss family belong to the Clan Macduff, the oldest known of all our surviving Gaelic clans, and because they held lands in the highlands the then Laird of Wemyss appears on the parliamentary Roll of Highland Landlords in 1587. Yet they have held lands in lowland Fife since time immemorial, and have made their home there at Wemyss itself since the eleven hundreds. As late as the sixteenth century the Lords Glamis in Strathmore spoke Gaelic as well as English, and in the eighteenth century highlanders from as far afield as Glenmuick on Deeside took the surname of Lyon and acknowledged the Earl of Strathmore in the lowlands of Angus as their chief.

All the same, there was of course an ever-increasing difference. This appears for instance in the mediaeval historian Wyntoun's chronicle, in various Acts of Parliament too, and in the late sixteenth-century ballad lamenting the slaughter by Huntly of the bonnie Earl of Moray—'Ye hielands and ye lawlands, and whaur hae ye been?'. This distinction gradually became more and more marked as the Gaelic language retreated into the highlands and islands and as, after the Union of the Crowns, English gold was able to give the King more strength to control, through his Privy Council, his unruly subjects throughout the low country in Scotland. Blood feuds between the great lowland Names were stamped out, leaving clan warfare isolated in the highlands. King James VI was able to write from Whitehall that where his ancestors had been hard pressed to rule by the sword, he could rule by a stroke of the pen.

Although the original Scots were Gaels, yet 'Scots' is an English tongue. The blood of both was a mixture of Celt and Teuton: but the Gaelic-speaking mountain folk were increasingly thought of as a dangerous nuisance by the 'Scots'-speaking lowlanders. The well-armed hillmen had traditions and customs, a costume and a music all their own, and a language which seemed literally 'barbarous' to the businesslike burgesses and canny countrymen of the low ground.

Although heather, peat hags and bracken cover so much of the highlands today, in the old days vast tracts of the hill-country were wooded. Intensive efforts are now being made to revive forestry in the highlands, both by the Forestry Commission and by such timber-enthusiasts as Lord Dundee. Yet almost until modern times a great part of what is now moorland was covered by the eerie Caledonian Forest. A few remaining woods of this forest are to be seen in the Black Wood of Rannoch in the Robertson country in Glenstrathfarrar in the Lovat country and at Rothiemurchus in the Grant country (where reindeer – long extinct in Scotland, except for some obtained from Lappland in 1790 by the 4th Duke of Atholl, which did not thrive – have been reintroduced as an experimental research project by the Reindeer Council of the U.K., mainly in Glenmore Forest Park). In these and other patches are continued what was once the native woodland of the highlands, dominated by the true Scots fir, which has survived by reseeding naturally. But the rest of the huge Caledonian Forest had similarly regenerated itself century after century until, after the population explosion in the highlands during the seventeen and eighteen hundreds, vast areas were denuded by man.

There used also to be in the highlands deciduous forests of oak and alder. Oak in Rannoch was long used for smelting. But little attempt has been made to replant hardwoods because they grow so slowly. Forestry is now in the hands of either the Forestry Commission, who must have a fairly rapid turnover to justify themselves, or of the

The Fair City of Perth, long the capital of Scotland, and still her natural geographical centre. Here Parliaments were held, and the kings inaugurated on the Stone of Destiny (or later, crowned) in the old Pictish capital at Scone, a little to the north across the Tay. In the foreground is Moncreiffe Island, held by the Moncreiffes until the end of the last century. The two open spaces beyond it are the two famous 'Inches' of Perth, once islands in the marshes (Inch is from the Gaelic innis, an island). There is an unsubstantiated local tradition that they were given to the City of Perth in the fourteenth century, in return for the right to a family burial vault in St. John's Kirk, by the earliest known Provost of Perth: John Mercer of Aldie, M.P., Ambassador to England and France.

'Folk say the Mercers tried the toun to cheat,
When for twa inches they did win sax feet'.

We are reminded that Perth was then a leading seaport, for Provost Mercer himself was robbed when shipwrecked in England, as a result of which his son Andrew Mercer, Bailie of Perth, gathered a mixed fleet of Scottish, French and Spanish vessels, and raided the English coast until defeated in 1378 in a naval battle by Sir John Philpot, Lord Mayor of London. From the Mercers' heiress springs the present Lord Lansdowne.

It was an old Norse and Anglo-Saxon custom to fight 'Trials by Combat' on a special island called a holmgang, and the nearest holmgang to the mediaeval Parliaments at Scone or Perth was the North Inch: while our old parliaments (as opposed to councils) were most usually summoned when trials for high treason were impending. So it was on the North Inch that trials by combat were usually fought in Scotland. The most famous was the 'Battle of the Clans' in 1396, which the present writer believes was fought between the Mackintosh Shaws of Clan Chattan and the Macmillans: in the presence of King Robert III. One night in 1437, however, Sir Robert Graham swept down on to Perth at the head of a picked raiding party of his highlandmen, and slew King James I himself. Thereafter, Scone and Perth were less often the centre of Scottish national affairs.

Sir Robert Dalrymple, who married the Hamilton heiress of Bargany in 1707, and was son of Lord President Dalrymple of North Berwick. He belonged to one of the greatest and most powerful of the Lowland Whig families, but is wearing a tartan dressing-gown in his own home.

The Bonnie Earl of Moray's corpse, shewing his every wound in detail, taken by his mother's orders immediately after he was slain by the Gordons. He was surrounded at night in his castle at Donibristle in Fife by the Gordons under Huntly, who had a royal commission to arrest him. The castle was set on fire, but held out under the hereditary Sheriff of Moray (Dunbar of Westfield) while the earl made his escape. Unfortunately, the silken tassel in his cap took fire, and he was tracked down in the darkness. As Gordon of Gight (the poet Lord Byron's ancestor) slashed his face, the dying earl exclaimed: 'You have spoilt a better face that your own.' The earl's mother, Lady Doune (a Campbell of Argyll), extracted several bullets with her own hands from her son's corpse and ordered this portrait of the atrocity to be painted—it is referred to in a contemporary report by the English Ambassador—before dying herself of burns sustained in the fire. The picture is now at Darnaway Castle.

lairds, who must make a foreseeable profit in order to maintain the economy of their estates. So the highlands are now being re-afforested with conifers—particularly the larch. This was introduced into the highlands in 1737 when Menzies of Culdares brought three larches back from the Tyrol and presented them to Lord George Murray, who in turn gave them to his brother, the 2nd Duke of Atholl. 'At first they were treated as hothouse plants, which condition not suiting them, they were planted out in 1738.' The Atholl family encouraged the larch, about 20 million trees being planted by the 4th Duke; and in 1883 the 7th Duke of Atholl, visiting Japan, brought back seedlings of the Japanese larch which he planted near Blair Castle. Quite accidentally, these were cross-pollinated with the European larch and produced the hybrid larch which, being ideally suited to the Scottish climate, has become the standard tree for Scottish forestry.

Until late in the seventeenth century, wolves roamed the highland forests. Mary Queen of Scots was present at a hunting party in Atholl when, in addition to 360 red deer and some roes, 5 wolves were killed. The last wolf in the highlands is often said to have been killed by Lochiel in 1680, but in fact a female wolf with her cubs was slain in a cave in Sutherland perhaps as late as 1743. Now that the wolf has gone, the fierce Scots wild-cat remains as the largest savage wild animal in Britain. Felis catus has never yet successfully been tamed, and is quite unlike the domestic cat both in character and appearance. The present Farquharson chief has a striking sporran made from the pelt of a large wild-cat trapped at Invercauld. One of the rarest of all British mammals—the pine marten—is also still occasionally trapped by accident in the highlands. Such an unfortunate accident has at least provided a very fine pine marten sporran for the Mackenzie chief: Lord Cromartie. The capercailzie (the Gaelic 'old gaffer of the woods') became extinct in the eighteenth century, and was reintroduced successfully by the Marquess of Breadalbane. It is a purely woodland bird and so (contrary to recent uninformed opinion) nobody was 'cleared' to make way for its revival. Golden eagles still fly, and ptarmigan in the high peaks, while the rare osprey has returned to nest in Badenoch. But the blackcock and the 'moor-fowl' or grouse are above all the birds of the Highlands.

Life was primitive in the old clan days. The shallow soil of the highlands was broken with a crude spade-plough worked by foot, the cas-chrom. The main crops on the cultivated low ground were barley and oats, which provided bread and porridge, but potatoes became an important supplement by the second half of the eighteenth century. Flax was also grown. On the more level ground it was possible to use horse-drawn ploughs with four small horses abreast and a highlandman walking backwards between the centre animals to guide the plough from stones. The staple summer dish of the clans was a mixture of milk and whey, also oatcakes and porridge, augmented by fish caught locally. On the West Coast and in the Isles, whale and seal steak occasionally gave variety to the fish diet of the mainland: salmon, trout and pickled herrings. Geese and poultry were kept. Meat was eaten more in the winter, also salted butter, crowdie, and skim-milk cheese. The surplus in livestock formed the principal highland trade: cattle, horses (far more than is generally realised), sheep, goats and pigs. Indeed, the money obtained from the sale of hides, wool and especially of livestock in the Lowlands and the South was for centuries the Highlanders' constant source of income.

But the martial clans' prestige was based above all on cattle (like other pastoral warrior races as far afield as the Masai and the Watutsi). Many barrels of pickled beef were exported annually to the Continent: and a fascinating book has been written on the well-worn drove roads that carried the bestial through many a dangerous territory to such famous cattle-markets as the Falkirk 'tryst' and that at Crieff in Perthshire. The animals were normally pastured on the moorland near the cultivated land in the broad straths and narrow glens. On the higher ground, even highland cattle were only hardy enough to be loosed for a few summer weeks. The stone huts whose ruins are still to be found throughout the mountains were never permanent habitations, but were the summer shielings put up to shelter the women and children who enjoyed their annual outing as cattle herders. When the brief summer was over, they returned to their settlements around the small arable patches far below the high ground. At the onset of winter, beasts were slaughtered to provide barrels of salt meat, two or three households often sharing one carcase, and the making of haggis ensured that nothing at all was wasted. Even 'braxy' mutton from sheep found dead on the hillside was eaten. The cattle that were spared for breeding were bled alive to give the raw material—fresh blood—to be mixed with oatmeal for 'black pudding'. By Spring they were often so weak that they had to be manhandled out to pasture in the 'lifting time'.

Cattle always meant prestige. From ancient Celtic times cattle raids were looked on as a sort of sport or test of prowess. The highlanders saw little wrong in it, unless they had been paid tribute for 'protection'. The late W. C. Mackenzie put their viewpoint thus: 'The animals were made by God; they derive their food direct from God's pastures, on which man has expended neither labour nor money; therefore the animals are the common property of mankind. If we steal our neighbours' cattle to-day, our neighbours will steal ours tomorrow, and so we are quits; and as for the Sasgunnaich (Lowlanders), well, their country belonged to our forefathers, so it is a land where every Highlandman can take his prey.'

So cattle raiding was regarded by the otherwise very law-abiding Gaels as quite distinct from ordinary theft: it was simply up to the other side to try and prevent them from succeeding. Thus from pre-Christian times onwards the famous boroma or cattle tribute levied by the high kings of Ireland on the kings of Leinster was never handed over without a battle. And, in times when a certain amount of blood-letting was thought a reasonable show of vigour, the heir to a highland chiefship was expected to have led at least one cattle raid before his succession. This practice of cattle raiding added a word to the English language: ordinary 'mail' meant 'rent', so 'black mail' was the name originally given to the illegal levy made by highlanders on cattle raiders from other clans to allow them free passage through their territory—or alternatively, levied as 'protection money' on Lowland neighbours.

But life was not as primitive as all that. For the Gaels, being naturally resourceful, made full use of their natural resources.

The clansfolk usually built their own wee houses, and often made their own pottery and shoes. In all districts, there were of course carpenters, wrights, blacksmiths, armourers and weavers: hence surnames like Macintyre and Gow. Tailors and shoemakers used to travel, making suits or shoes in their patrons' houses. There were itinerant stocking merchants as late as the nineteenth century. There was a considerable linen industry, from home-grown flax and mostly for the home market. Beautiful 'waulking songs' remind us of the part played by the women in fulling the cloth.

The salmon fishing industry was and is still a valuable source of income to the eastern Highlands. From the Beauly, Spey, Ness and other rivers, the Frasers of Lovat, Stuarts of Moray, Gordons of Huntly, Mackenzies of Seaforth and the Gairloch, all exported smoked, salted or dried salmon to the Continent: the Inverness merchants who acted as middlemen sending the fish in Inverness-built ships as far afield as the Netherlands, France and Italy. Sea fishing was even more lucrative. The chiefs and chieftains usually put up the money to provide the fishing-boats, and the merchants generally bartered for the catch—cod, herring, ling, skate—with oatmeal, iron, wine, brandy, and tobacco.

Timber was floated down main rivers like the Spey and the Tay, and sold in the Lowlands. Oak bark was used for tanning, and much leather was sent abroad. Until Canada was opened up to the fur trade by the French in the seventeenth century, the Highlands exported to the Continent many thousands of furs annually: mostly fox, pine marten and weasel skins. The 12th Earl of Sutherland set up saltpans, and also started the coal-mining at Brora, early in the seventeenth century. About the same time, slate quarrying for export to the Lowlands was begun in Mull and elsewhere.

For local consumption, heather ale was brewed in the home from very early times. By the sixteenth century frequent mention is made of brogadh, 'the stimulation', a sweetened malt liquor whose production (anyway in Inverness) had to be repeatedly restricted to prevent a grain famine. About this time whisky, 'the water of life', began to take over in Inverness, and soon private stills were started by lairds and tacksmen all over the Highlands—suppressed from the eighteenth century onwards by harsh revenue demands that only led to illegal distillation. In the seventeenth century, the Islesmen had a dangerous 'stop-the-breath' whisky, four times distilled from oats, also a milder whisky, only thrice distilled, called trestarig (from the Danish words tröst, 'comfort', and arak, 'distilled spirit'). The chieftains and tacksmen drank a great deal of claret, but the Privy Council laid down a scale for them, anyway in the Hebrides, and strictly limited the import of wine. However, a late sixteenth-century writer tells us of the Islesmen: 'They boil the flesh with water poured into the paunch or skin of the animal they kill, and in hunting sometimes they eat the flesh raw, merely squeezing out the blood. They drink the juice of the boiled flesh. At their feasts they sometimes use whey, after it has been kept for several years, and even drink it greedily.'

The Macnab (1734–1816), by Raeburn. Francis Macnab, 16th Chief of Macnab, in his uniform as Lt-Colonel of the Royal Breadalbane Volunteers, to whom he used to give his commands 'in voluble and forcible Gaelic'. He courted a lady in vain, even though he 'told her as an irresistible charm that he had the most beautiful burying-ground in the world' (the Macnab chiefs are buried on the island of Inchbuie, 'the Yellow Isle' in the river Dochart, which is covered with Scots pines, larches, beeches and sycamores). So he never married, although he had thirty-two children and it was rumoured that several lasses in the district got 'the bad disorder' from him. He had his own distillery at Killin; and Heron, who toured Perthshire in 1792, wrote that The Macnab produced the best whisky to be found in Scotland.

The Highlanders were immensely hospitable. They loved their ceilidhs, which were held 'by the light of the peat-fire flame' in the townships on winter evenings. The same sixteenth-century writer says: 'Instead of a trumpet, they use a bagpipe. They are exceedingly fond of music, and employ harps of a peculiar kind, some of which are strung with brass, and some with catgut. In playing they strike the wires either with a quill, or with their nails, suffered to grow long for the purpose; but their grand ambition is to adorn their harps with great quantities of silver and gems, those who are too poor to afford jewels substituting crystals in their stead. Their songs are not inelegant, and, in general, celebrate the praises of brave men; their bards seldom choosing any other subject.' At the ceilidhs, poetry and legendary epics were declaimed by bards and story-tellers. There was also music and dancing, solo and collective singing. Their outdoor games were curling and shinty.

The ancient instrument of the Celt was the clarsach or harp. But although bagpipes are obviously very ancient in the Highlands, as with hill-folk in other countries, there is little mention of the pipes until the sixteenth century, when Alasdair 'Crouchback', 8th Chief of MacLeod (1481–1547), founded the famous College of Piping at Borreraig in Skye for the MacLeod chiefs' hereditary pipers, the MacCrimmons, the greatest pipers of all Gaeldom. It took between eight and twelve years to qualify at this college. A piper played during a raid made in about 1600 by the Stewarts of Atholl on Coupar Angus, and thereafter the pipes were so regularly used in battle as to be banned in 1747 as an 'instrument of war'. Sometimes the Highlanders danced reels or solo to the pipes or the Jew's harp.

Late mediaeval clarsach or harp of the Robertsons of Lude.

Part of a Processional Roll prepared for a herald's guidance at the State Funeral of George Gordon, 1st Marquis of Huntly, in 1636.

At other times they danced to 'mouth music' or, particularly during the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries, to the fiddle. The greatest were the Atholl fiddlers, Neil Gow (1727–1807) and his son Nathaniel Gow (1766–1831), who composed many strathspeys and country dances.

In the highlands, funerals have always been great ceremonies. Over 5,000 men, horse and foot, attended the 6th Lord Lovat's funeral in 1633. During the American War of Independence, in 1779, the celebrated Scots-American naval raider Paul Jones sailed into Loch Dunvegan, only to hasten back to sea again because he mistook a funeral procession for an armed body of clansmen marching to defend the castle. At Sir Malcolm MacGregor of MacGregor's funeral in 1879, the procession in Balquhidder was several miles long. At the conclusion of the 8th Duke of Atholl's burial service in 1942, after a motor procession from Dunkeld to Blair, Atholl Highlanders, Hillmen, Curlers and Freemasons, also men of the Scottish Horse and the Canadian Forestry Corps, filed round the grave, the masons dropping in sprigs of acacia and the Atholl Highlanders sprigs of juniper, while others drank to His late Grace and poured oblations of whisky. And a great gathering of Campbells attended the State Funeral of the 10th Duke of Argyll in 1949, when his coronet nearly fell off his coffin and his styles and titles were proclaimed by a royal herald wearing a tabard. In the old days, a coronach or lament used to be wailed by the women. Led by the principal mourner, the others then danced through the night of the 'wake'. Burials were followed by speeches and much drink—Charles Robertson of Auchleeks was drowned when he fell through the ice on Loch Tummel while returning drunk from a funeral, early in the eighteenth century.

Most of the chiefs and greater chieftains necessarily possessed a stone stronghold. A few of these still survive, much adapted or enlarged as their modern homes: Hebridean castles like those of Maclean at Duart and Macneil at Kisimul and MacLeod at Dunvegan—and on the mainland, those of Atholl at Blair, Sutherland at Dunrobin, Perth at Stobhall, Rattray at Craighall, Farquharson at Invercauld, the Cromartie Mackenzies at Castle Leod, the Campbells at Cawdor and the Ogilvys at Airlie. Picturesque ruins remain of such other strongholds as that of Clanranald at Eilean Tioram, Glengarry at Invergarry, MacIain of Ardnamurchan at Mingarry, Argyll at Inchconnel, the Gordons at Huntly, Lamont at Toward, McCorquodale at Loch Tromlie, Macfarlane at Eilean-a-Vow, Colquhoun at Rossdhu, Menzies at Castle Menzies, the Shaws of Rothiemurchus at Loch-an-Eilean and the Sinclairs at Girnigoe.

But a chief who lived at a sufficient distance from any unpleasant neighbours usually moved out of his tower. Whenever it was safe, he naturally preferred to live in a house. Chiefs therefore tended either to abandon or else to convert their strongholds as soon as it was possible for them to live more comfortably. In the seventeenth century, the Mackay chiefs lived in the charming House of Tongue. In the eighteenth century, Macneil of Barra moved out of Kisimul Castle into a modest Georgian house at Eoligarry. Achnacarry, the home of Lochiel, which was burnt by the Government troops in 1746, appears to have consisted of two stone gable ends with a wooden house built between them: though earlier chiefs had lived in the tower of Torcastle.

We are told in the Dewar MS. that in the age of King

The old 'Laird's House' at Pitcastle in Atholl, former home of the royally-descended Robertson chieftains of Pitcastle. Now roofless, it is the typical four-roomed house of a sixteenth-century 'bonnet laird'. On the ground floor was Pitcastle's sitting room, and a twenty-foot long public room that was partitioned to allow for a kitchen and passage. Carved fir panelling from these once painted partitions, together with the nail-studded front door with its triangular peep-hole, has been taken to Blair Castle for preservation: and probably dates from the time of Duncan Robertson of Pitcastle, who sat on a local assize with six more Robertsons and eight other Athollmen to try a Stewart murderer in 1602. An inside stone staircase led to Pitcastle's own bedchamber, but there is only an outside stair (shewn in the illustration) to the general bedroom, also on the upper floor.

James VI 'Macfarlane of Arrochar had a castle on the island of Inveruglas and another in Eilean a' bhùtha, but his dwelling-house was in Tarbert at a place called the Cladach Mor, Big Strand, at the side of Loch Lomond. . . . The house was but thirty-four feet long and thirteen broad, inside. It contained but three rooms: a kitchen, a sitting-room and a pantry, and the pantry was in the middle of the house. The kitchen-fire was on the middle of the floor and a hole right over it in the roof allowed the smoke to escape. The fire of the sitting-room was near the gable and a stone with a smooth surface behind it. A chimney-top made of twigs and daubed with clay was above the fire of the chamber to let out the smoke. The rafters of the house were about three feet asunder. Beams of cleft oak placed close together and covered with sods formed a loft above the laird of Arrochar. There was but a single window with six panes in the chamber. There was one window with four panes in the kitchen, on the front of the house, and there was a window-hole at the back, which was shut with boards when the wind blew through it. There was another window-hole in the pantry shut with boards, which was opened when anything was to be done there. The house was thatched with bracken.'

The tacksmen or leading gentlemen of the clan lived in pleasant but not very large houses. Nowadays they would often be considered mere cottages. For although the ordinary gentlemen were well educated and in many cases most polished, they lived close to their people and anyway could not afford grand houses. For instance, as a Baron, the MacLaren chieftain of Wester Invernenty had local powers of life and death, but he still went ploughing with the rest. In 1736, Stewart of Invernahyle wrote to Atholl's factor: 'Rob Roy's youngest son . . . came with a gunn and pistle to the Town of Drumlich where John McLaren, Baron Stoibchon and Wester Innernenty liv'd, and the said Baron with two of his neighbours being att the pleugh, this youngest son of Rob Roy's, called Robert, came to the pleugh, and without any provocation, as the Baron was holding the plough, shott him behind his back, of which wound he dyed that night.'

Simpler still were the 'black houses', which were thick-walled rubble cottages, often consisting of a single room with no window. Usually they had no gables, and their roofs were pitched at a low angle, supported by longitudinal beams over coupling timbers and usually springing from the inner part of the ledges formed by the tops of the four walls. The hearth was in the centre of the floor, and some of the peat-smoke could escape through a chimney-hole beside the roof-tree. Turf, rushes or heather were the usual thatching materials, although latterly straw was used. The custom was that the walls belonged to the laird, but the roofing to the cottar, who took it with him if he removed When the thatch had grown too old, it was used for manuring the infield. A clay and wattle partition often provided a second room, used to shelter livestock (who entered by the same door) in bad weather. Even Dunvegan itself was originally just a great long 'black house' surrounded by a curtain wall, and the late Macneil of Barra found the ashes of the mediaeval central hearth when he was restoring the ruined (and always until now, chimneyless) Great Hall of Kisimul Castle.

Dunvegan Castle, as it was in the time of Leod, name-father of the MacLeods, during the thirteenth century. The curtain wall and well still exist, as also does the sea-gate, which until the middle of the eighteenth century was the only entrance to the castle. The long-hall of those days was like a great 'black-house' (with a central hearth as at Kisimul), but has long since been replaced by an ever-changing complex of buildings. This reconstruction was drawn by Dr. Douglas Simpson.

Buchanan wrote of the Hebrideans in 1582: 'In their houses, also, they lie upon the ground; strewing fern, or heath, on the floor, with the roots downward and the leaves turned up. In this manner they form a bed so pleasant, that it may vie in softness with the finest down, while in salubrity it far exceeds it.' He adds that when they 'travel in other countries, they throw aside the pillows and blankets of their hosts, and wrapping themselves round with their own plaids, thus go to sleep'. It is recounted that when the great Sir Ewen Cameron of Lochiel (1629–1719) was snowbound on the open hills at night while out wolf-hunting, he kicked away a snowball which his heir had made up to rest his head on, asking angrily if his son had grown so soft that he could not sleep without a pillow?

Up to the sixteenth century, the bare-legged clansmen or 'redshanks' wore pleated tunics to the knee, usually dyed with saffron. They had great mantles or plaids, apparently of tartan, their favourite colours being purple and blue until the mid-sixteenth century, when dark browns became popular for camouflage. Mediaeval chiefs sometimes wore plate-armour under their armorial surcoat. But as late as the sixteenth century the chieftains tended to wear a distinctive 'yellow war coat', of thickly padded and quilted linen, and their followers' bodies were often protected by leather jerkins in place of armour. On the whole, however, their defensive armour consisted of a conical 'iron head-piece, and a coat of mail, formed of small iron rings, and frequently reaching to the heels'. They carried bows, with barbed arrows that were difficult to extract from a wound, Lochaber axes (with a hook at the end of the staff, for dragging an enemy from his horse) and long two-handed swords. These claymores or 'big swords' usually had quatrefoils ornamenting the end of their upward-sloping crossguards.

By the seventeenth century, however, these claymores had been cut down to form basket-hilted broadswords. A round Celtic shield of leather on wood, often with a central spike, called a targe, was carried on the left arm; and a dirk was held point downwards in the left hand. The Roll of Arms for the Earl of Atholl's following in 1638 appears to indicate some connection (perhaps only sufficient means) between the wearing of a targe and the ownership of a gun or pistol. One entry on that roll shows a Highlander still in possession of a coat-of-mail. But it was already rare, for the MacGregor chief's brother, who was killed at the battle of Glenfruin in 1603, was nicknamed Iain Dubh nan Luireach: 'Black John of the Mail-Coat'. Arm-pit knives were carried for practical use, but the black stocking-knife or sgian dubh is first illustrated in Raeburn's celebrated portrait of MacDonell of Glengarry, who appears to have a knife and fork together in his stocking; although Stewart of Ardvorlich has what he believes to be seventeenth-century examples of a similar knife and fork, flattened for the leg but now lacking the sheath. Its introduction into regimental uniform gave it its modern vogue. Bye-knives and forks were also often carried, side by side or one above the other, in the scabbards of dirks. The Highland pistol, of which the finest were made at Doune, is usually distinguished by a ball-trigger (a round knob in place of a normal trigger) and by having no trigger-guard. Screwed into the butt, there is often a pricker for cleaning the touch-hole.

By the seventeenth century, the ancient tartan mantle of the clansmen had developed into the great belted plaid, which was itself divided in the eighteenth century into kilt and short plaid, worn over a dyed shirt. Belted plaids were often cast off in battle, much to the horror of lowland or foreign foes, who called the highlanders ' naked savages '. This was hardly fair, as they tied their shirt-tails between their legs before going into action. From at least the sixteenth century, the King, great nobles and mounted chieftains wore ' short Highland coats ' over tartan trews which combined breeks and hose in a single close-fitting garment: the plaid being belted over all.

The antiquity of clan and family tartans is much in dispute. It seems certain that there were some in existence before the Jacobite Risings, possibly even from the sixteenth century (when the Macleans had an annual rent payable in ells of black, white and green cloth: the colours of their present tartan); and Garth implies that old war tartans existed. But if family or district tartans did exist so early, they were certainly not consistently worn. However, family or estate tweeds (such as the Atholl grey or the Dalhousie tweed) have existed for upwards of a century, but are certainly not worn constantly by those who have a right to them. The same applies to regimental tweeds, such as that of the Scots Guards which is already about a century old.

By the reign of Queen Anne, the Grants had a red and green uniform war tartan, but contemporary paintings show that they wore whatever they fancied in civil life. There are reasons for supposing that the Red Murray, or Murray of Tullibardine, hangings on a bed at Blair Castle have survived from the late seventeenth century; and what looks very like the same sett appears on the plaid of Norman, 22nd Chief of MacLeod (whose grandmother was sister of

The blade is older, and the silver mounting is inscribed ' Major Evan MacGregor, Aid de Camp to H.R.H. Prince Charles, Sept. 1745 '. Major Evan, whose son Sir John eventually became 18th Chief of Clan Gregor, was younger brother of Robert MacGregor of Glencarnock, Chieftain of the Children of the Mist, who commanded the MacGregors in the 1745 Rising. It was Evan MacGregor who, with a long gun (' she was so heavy that no man could carry her above a mile at once ') fired the first shot at Cope's army the day before Prestonpans. ' The Prince thought much of this, that we got the first blood of them.' Duncan MacGregor, who was present as an officer, wrote years afterwards to Evan's son, Sir John, about the MacGregor regiment at the battle of Prestonpans itself: ' Captain Duncan MacGregor was wounded through the thigh, Captain James Mor MacGregor was wounded thro' the thigh, Captain Malcolm MacGregor got his two legs broken, twenty-one private men were wounded and one shot dead upon the spot. We pursued the retreating army a mile and a half . . . The Prince came and took Glencarnock in his arms, and Captain Evan, and told them to gather the whole Clan MacGregor upon the middle of the Field of Battle. There was a table covered and the MacGregors guarding him at dinner, every man got a glass of wine and a little bread. Your Father and Uncle sat down with him, the rest of the Chieftains took it amiss that the MacGregors got this honour, but it was dear bought . . . ' the 1st Duke of Atholl and who was brought up partly in Perthshire), in his famous mid-eighteenth century portrait in the pose of Apollo Belvedere, by Allan Ramsay. And in 1768, Sir Robert Murray Keith wrote from Dresden, where he was British Envoy, for ' a plaid of my colours '. In his case, the tartan was probably regimental, and several clan tartans undoubtedly began as regimental tartans when chiefs raised clan regiments in the eighteenth century. The Gordon clan tartan, for example, was designed originally for the Gordon Highlanders by adding a yellow stripe (which their old rivals the Black Watch infuriatingly refer to as a ' yellow streak ') to the old Government or Black Watch tartan.

This illustration also shews the bye-knife and fork carried in the scabbard.

The distinguishing mark of kings or chiefs in many parts of the world, from Africa to America, is the wearing of eagle's feathers. Dr. Johnson wrote of the young Laird of Coll and his clansmen that ' He did not endeavour to dazzle them by any magnificence of dress: his only distinction was a feather in his bonnet '. The convention has long been established that a chief wears three eagle's feathers, the chieftains of cadet branches wear two, and the gentlemen of the clan may wear one feather. The Sovereign, as Chief of Chiefs, wears four. These distinctions are followed by the Royal Company of Archers (who used to wear tartan uniforms). Their Captain-General wears three eagle's feathers, their officers two, and the ordinary Archers of the Queen's Body Guard wear a single feather.

When chiefs went about, they were accompanied by a body of armed clansmen known as their ' tail '. Besides an adequate following of armed men, it included the bard or seanachaidh (historian), the henchman (the chief's personal body-guard, as Gold Stick is to the Queen), the bladaire or tatler (the chief's 'mouthpiece'), the harper or piper, and even a special man to carry their chief dry-shod over fords—the chief was as tough as they were (as witness the Great Lochiel), but they liked to do him this honour, shedding lustre on the whole clan. A great magnate like Atholl, just like his Lowland counterparts such as Douglas, was attended in Edinburgh by followers who wore his crest hung around their necks (rather like decanter-labels), as can be seen, for instance, in Chambers' eighteenth-century print of the Riding of the Scottish Parliament in 1685. From this there were evolved the modern clan badges, which consist of the chief's crest surrounded by a strap-and-buckle bearing his motto. These badges are usually made of silver, and have been worn in the bonnet since the nineteenth century.

The older badges were the lucky plants of the clans. The idea of a sacred plant is very ancient, going back to the Dawn Religion in the New Stone Age. Family plants are found as far afield as among the Japanese samurai. And there was an ancient Greek who, fleeing from a battlefield, came on a field of clover and stopped to be slain rather than tread on his family plant. The Hay mistletoe at Erroll is referred to in Frazer's monumental work, The Golden Bough. The Moncreiffe oak-leaves appear on a stone carving of the 12th laird's heraldic 'mantling' by 1634.

After the 1745 Rising, one of the Government witnesses at the trial of Lord Lovat gave evidence that 700 Frasers had paraded at Castle Dounie wearing the Jacobite white cockade and sprigs of yew in their bonnets. There is still a great yew in Stratherrick, where the Stratherrick Frasers cut their plant badges—the Frasers in the Aird got their yew badges from Tomnahurich, which was the main Fraser gathering-place. In the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, the Macdonalds marched to war behind a bunch of heather tied to a pole. In 1678 'the Glencow men were verie remarkable, who had for their ensigne a faire bush of heath, wel spred and displayed on the head of a staff'; and in The Grameid in 1691, James Philip says of the Macdonalds in Dundee's Jacobite host two years before: 'These all being chiefs sprung from the blood of Donald, they . . . carry into battle, as the emblem of their race, a branch of wild heather hung from the point of a quivering spear.'

Another interesting survival from ancient times is that certain 'beasts' have always been considered sacred, dedicated to that spirit of royalty which represents the whole symbolic feeling of the nation. For example, Edward II of England protected by statute the whole of the dolphin family, and also protected the sturgeon under the mistaken impression that it was a form of dolphin. That is why the sturgeon is the fish that most people think of as Fish Royal, and all sturgeons caught in English waters are sent to The Queen. But in the Celtic world, especially among the ancient Gaels, the salmon was the sacrosanct royal fish. When one Irish king overthrew another, he used to kill the salmon in his enemy's royal fishpond. Ancient Irish kings wore the salmon as a brooch. Even today the Duke of Argyll, his son Lord Lorne, and the Campbells of Lochnell, the branch who have long been the nearest heirs, are Velvet doublet of the present Mac Cailein Mor, Ian Campbell, Duke of Argyll, shewing as silver buttons the sacred royal salmon of the ancient Gaels, worn by the Argyll family as ultimate successors in the female line of the local Kings of Argyll: the 'Border of the Gaels'. regarded as having a special right to wear silver salmon as the buttons on their doublets. When the late Duke of Argyll as a young man went to stay with the late Duke of Atholl, the younger members of the Atholl family went up to his bedroom, cut off his silver salmon doublet-buttons and replaced them with real sardines stuck on to pieces of cardboard; thus continuing the ancient feud between the Atholl and Argyll families into modern times as what social anthropologists would call a 'joking relationship'. So salmon fishing was reserved to the Crown, whose revenues were thus augmented by the ability to grant charters of particular salmon fishing, like ordinary grants of land. Until the sixteenth century, too, the King of Scots was always accompanied by a live lion, the royal 'beast' of Scotland, and there was a Lyon's Den in every royal palace.

From the most ancient times known to us, it was perhaps one of the main purposes of ceremonial pageantry to inculcate religious concepts or ethical principles within the growing community. But after the Reformation (which in Scotland occurred in 1560) an extreme reaction against elaborate ritualism drove almost all beauty and colour out of Highland church life for a long time. It's sad, for instance, to realise that the lost pre-Reformation Scottish sacred music was famous throughout Europe. The lovingly carved statues of holy men (which is all that 'saint' actually means) were smashed, though now once again we have a statue of a holy man, John Knox, outside St. Giles' Cathedral. The popular emotional need for colourful ceremony found outlets in other ways, often secret. It was in the time of the learned theologian King James VI (who was himself made a mason in what is now Lodge Scone and Perth) that Freemasons began the process that led to the formation of purely speculative as opposed to operative Masonic Lodges: for Freemasonry inculcates the highest brotherly and indeed divine ethical principles through the beautiful symbolism of its ritual. The late Lord Macdonald, Chief of the great Clan Donald, was a past Grand Master Mason of Scotland, as was the late Sir Iain Colquhoun of Luss, Chief of the Clan Colquhoun.

A more sinister result of the suppression of all colour in religion after the Reformation, was a marked revival of the witch cult. People talk about 'witch-hunts' nowadays as if there never were any underground witches. But indeed there were, and many, though not necessarily always those unfortunates who were hunted out and 'pricked' as such. Of course, many vestiges of the Dawn Religion, the sacrificial cult of the divine king (that venerates the continuity of the embodied life-force), survive in Christian ceremonial: the magic of the old rituals being translated poetically to express new and more abstract meanings (see the present writer's Blood Royal). Other traces continue, such as touching wood, not walking under a ladder (Woden's sacrificial scaffold), or the keeping of an animal mascot. But in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries more sinister rites underwent a marked underground revival. It must be remembered that witchcraft was the primaeval religion, the fertility cult (that perceives divinity in the spark of life), with its symbolic worship of the Horned One, and that men as well as women could be witches: joining in the secret covens of thirteen grouped around the 'devils' (local priests of the Fertility Spirit) scattered throughout Scotland.

The Cloch Dearg or 'Red Stone', the charm of Ardvorlich. In 1722, the celebrated heraldist Nisbet reckoned the then Mac Mhic Bhaltair to be Chieftain of all the Stewarts of Balquhidder because he possessed this sacred Charm Stone. From forty miles around, the worried owners of sick cattle used to bring kegs of spring water to Ardvorlich. 'There the Lady of Ardvorlich took the Charm, dangled it by its chain in the water and swirled it round three times, reciting a Gaelic incantation the while. After the Charm was taken out of the water, it was necessary for the owner of the beasts to take his keg back to his animal to drink; and shortly afterwards it would recover. One other obligation had to be observed; the man carrying the keg was not allowed to enter any building with the keg on his way home . . .' It is a ball of rock crystal mounted in bands of silver with a Celtic pattern. It was probably part of a reliquary, and the family tradition is that it was brought back from a Crusade. Of course Ardvorlich's direct ancestor Alexander, 4th Steward of Scotland (1214–1283) was a Crusader, but any charm brought back by him would obviously have descended to the senior line of the Royal Stewarts. However, it could have been brought back from a much later Crusade. For instance, Sir Colin Campbell of Glenorchy went on a Crusade as a Knight of Rhodes (what is now called a Knight of Malta) in the fifteenth century, and brought back a similar charm stone, listed in a Glenorchy inventory c.1600 as 'ane stane of the quantitye of half a hen's egg set in silver, being flatt at the ane end and round at the uther and lyke a peir, whilk Sir Coline first laird of Glenurchy woir when he fought in battel at the Rhodes agaynst the Turks, he being one of the Knychtis of the Rhodes.' So it seems possible that Ardvorlich's more recent ancestor, whom King James III in 1465 called 'our beloved kinsman, James Stewart of Albany, natural son of the late James Stewart, son of Murdach Stewart, late Duke of Albany', accompanied Glenorchy in his 'caravan' against the Turks—or else took part in some similar Crusade—and brought back the blessed Charm Stone of Ardvorlich.

Men of the highest rank joined with the most humble in these pagan rites. The Lord Lyon King of Arms was burnt at the stake for witchcraft in 1569; while King James VI's cousin Francis Stuart, Earl of Bothwell, was the Devil of the North Berwick witch-coven in 1589, and used his occult power to plot the king's death. In the same year, Hector Munro of Foulis, Chief of the Clan Munro, called in some local warlocks and witches to save his ailing life by casting his approaching death on to his younger half-brother, George Munro of Obsdale, as a Substitute Victim. The principal witch, Marian McIngarrath, dug a grave in which the Munro chief lay down at midnight, wrapped in blankets, and was covered over lightly with green turf fastened down with withes, 'probably cut from a rowan tree, to guard the spot from evil spirits'. His foster-mother Christian Neil then ran the length of nine riggs (over a mile) to consult with the local Devil, and then returned; whereupon the witch Marian asked her if she had made her choice, and the chief's foster-mother spoke the grim doom that 'Mr. Hector was her choice to live and his brother George to die'. The chief then literally returned from the grave to Foulis Castle. That he was called 'Mr.' at this date implies that he had graduated at a University; and it seems clear that he had profited by his education, for his reliance on witchcraft proved sound. His brother George duly died in 1590, and he himself recovered from his long illness in time to stand trial for murder and witchcraft. Naturally he was acquitted, but his poor witch-doctor, the unhappy sorceress Marian McIngarrath, was strangled and burnt at the stake, with the rest of her coven, after duly confessing under torture. Her highly successful skill was derived from an Old Norse magic ritual of pagan times, that had lingered on underground through the centuries. The last Highland witch to be burnt at the stake was so executed in 1722, at Dornoch in Sutherland.

Today, perhaps our most everyday reminder of the gay witches' 'sabbaths' is the popularity of round reels. From the cave rites of the New Stone Age, and throughout aeons of time, on through the Bronze and Iron Ages into the eighteenth century, a basic religious ceremony continued all over Europe, and certainly in the Highlands. A mixed circle of both sexes danced round and round a central figure, who played on pipes or a flute, or sometimes (in more sophisticated days) even on a fiddle. This central figure was the Fertility Spirit's local priest and representative—a man dressed up full hairily in horns and a tail, Pan's living image. Nobody could deny there was something rather beastly about him. As the dance went on, the worshippers became gayer and gayer, in fact in their fine frenzy definitely abandoned. Perhaps that is why the poet Gray called them our 'rude forefathers'. Christianity had overthrown the newer gods far more easily than it conquered Pan and his beguiling pipes. So much so, that while all false gods were 'devils' to the Christians, yet it was the image of the Horned One himself that they usually depicted as 'The Devil'. The spirit of fertility became to ecclesiastical thought especially identified with Evil, and soon the catholic words 'sin', 'immoral' and 'licentious' took on a narrowed meaning that is perhaps behind many of our psychological, social and religious problems today. In 1489, the Inquisitors (who were all men) sensibly found that 'witchcraft is more natural to Women than to men, on account of the inherent wickedness of their hearts'. Nor is it surprising to find that Wine (or any intoxicant brew) and more especially Song were in exuberant demand at the witches' sabbaths. It is said that the witches, for instance, used to dance as late as the sixteenth century under the arches of the old bridge at Avignon: 'Sous le pont d'Avignon, on y danse tout en rond' still has a fine diabolical ring. But by the eighteenth century such dances survived in the Highlands only as popular reels. The eightsome reel in its present form was evolved out of the old round reels by two Murrays, the 6th Duke of Atholl and the 7th Earl of Dunmore (whose son the 8th Earl, by the way, won the Victoria Cross) in the nineteenth century. The innocent mainstay of every Highland ball, the dancers still circle round a central figure; and as each successive man jigs alone in the middle, he raises his arms crescent-wise like antlers above his head, in a Stone Age symbol of the Horned One. But that is all. The pipe-major's piercing pipes are not the pipes of Pan.

A contemporary of the Wizard Earl of Bothwell and of the witch Marian McIngarrath was the famous Brahan Seer, many of whose remarkable prophecies still await fulfilment. 'Second Sight' undoubtedly exists in the Highlands, in the sense that if the many witnesses to its existence were witnesses instead to a crime, somebody would be convicted on the overwhelming volume of their corroborative evidence. This also applies, of course, to the Loch Ness Phenomenon, better known as the Monster or 'Nessie'. We are told in a MS. History of the Campbells of Craignish, written c. 1717–1722, to cite but one instance, about 'the MacViccars being Rectors of it (Kilmun) but very lately before (1540), and from whom the old Parsons of Kilmalew, and Barons of Brenchellie, so famous for the surprizeing Gift of Prophesie inherent to that Race of the MacViccars for many ages'. It is hard to find the natural explanation for Second Sight, except perhaps on the basis of J. W. Dunne's Theory of Time.

It is easier, of course, to account for visionary dreams of past events, by the theory of Ancestral Memory. A moment's reflection will shew that a general 'folk memory' is impossible, for a man can no more inherit a memory from some unrelated person than he can inherit the colour of his eyes from him. But he does inherit the colour of his eyes, and indeed all his other basic features, mental and physical, in a jumble from his myriad ancestors: and every now and then things slip into a recognizable shape and someone is the 'spitting image' of some ancestor: as for instance the late ninth Baronet of Moncreiffe closely resembled the first Baronet of Moncreiffe, who was born in 1626. It does not seem impossible that in our subconscious mind we similarly inherit a jumble of memories, occasionally falling into shape in the same picturesque way. This would account for many of the emotional prejudices, not always attributable to environment, that sway individuals for apparently very ancient historical or religious reasons about which they nevertheless usually have never heard. An interesting Highland case of visionary dreams is that of the late James Fraser, cartwright in Beauly, who shortly before the Second World War related to Charles Ian Fraser of Reelig, the meticulously careful Highland scholar, a dream which often recurred to him, and of which Reelig sent an account to the present writer shortly before his death in 1963. The cartwright proceeded to give such an account of the fatal battle of Blar-na-Leine by Loch Lochy in 1544 (when Mac Shimi and almost all the Frasers were slain fighting the Clanranald) as very few scholars could have compiled. Some of his details, though obvious in retrospect, had not generally occurred to anybody before. Other details can be corroborated from certain obscure sources, but it seems improbable for various reasons that this particular cartwright or any friend of his could have undertaken the necessary research. And his description of the contemporary costumes, equipment, and methods of fighting could scarcely be bettered. Reelig, though naturally sceptical, was unable to resist the impression that he was telling the truth. The Fraser clansmen were much inter-bred in their own clan country, and James Fraser the cartwright probably descended over and over again (through cousin-marriages within his own ancestry) from a particular Fraser eyewitness of the battle: so that his recurring dream could possibly well be an example of Ancestral Memory.

Another survival from ancient times was the crois taraidh or 'Fiery Cross', the Scottish successor of the Old Norse 'fire arrow'. Two pieces of wood were charred at the upper end and then fastened together to form a Cross, to which was attached a rag dipped in sheep's or goat's blood. Being both burnt and bloody, the Cross represented Fire and Sword. In time of war, the chief or chieftain sent it in relays throughout every township and clachan in his territory. Each successive bearer, usually mounted on a garron pony, shouted out as he passed, a single word: the name of the Gathering Place. The normal gathering place of the Grants was 'Craigellachie', of the Campbells 'Cruachan', of the Robertsons 'Fea Choire'. Every able-bodied clansman thereupon seized his weapons and hurried to the appointed spot. Thus mobilisation was very rapid.

The Fiery Cross was used all over Scotland as late as the sixteenth century. Before the battle of Pinkie in 1547, when the English had invaded Scotland, 'the Governour of Scotland . . . caused certane herauldis and purscevauntes with all possible diligence pas throch all the partis of the realme with a fyrie croce bering fyre on the heid of it in thair handes, as the use of that realme hes bene in all gret extremiteis, chargeing all maner of man alswell spirituall as temporall of the aige betuix saxtene and saxtie bodin with armour in feare of wear to repair towart Mussilbruch with all possibill haist.' The last occasion on which the Fiery Cross called clansmen to war was in 1746, when Lord George Murray sent it out through Atholl in his attempt to retake Blair Castle from the advancing Hanoverians. But the Fiery Cross went out once again, during the General Election of 1820, and 800 Grant clansmen mobilised immediately and marched on Elgin to protect their Chief and his sisters, who had been blockaded in their townhouse there by an urban mob belonging to the opposite political party from that for which the Chief's brother was the candidate. The startled townsfolk gave no further trouble, except doubtless to vote as they pleased.

In time of peace, the chiefs gathered their clansmen periodically, to practise mobilisation and to make sure they were properly equipped and fit to fight. 'It was these ordinary people who formed the fighting men of the district in time of war, for the Scottish chiefs depended upon the loyalty and love of their own clansmen rather than on hired men-at-arms. Little countries of their own, the great districts were often at war with one another—but at least they knew their enemy and why they were fighting, and the casualties were nothing compared with those in the wars brought about by the existence of the vast agglomerate States of today.'

Gatherings called 'wapenschaws.' or weapon-shews were held both by highland chiefs and lowland lairds for the inspection of weapons, since they were responsible for the defence of their own territory and, in time of war, for the defence of Scotland. At these Gatherings, it was customary to hold Games at which feats of athletic prowess were performed by the local clansmen. For strength and alertness were prized by these warrior herdsmen. There were foot races and trials of strength, tossing the caber and putting the weight. Often, the opportunity was taken of driving the red deer for the great 'hunts', when young clansmen learnt to use country in a martial way while collecting in the deer to pass the cross-bows or guns in the butts. In 1715, at Aboyne on Deeside, the Earl of Mar held a famous hunting party which emphasised the dual purpose of highland gatherings: hunting combined with preparation for war. The great hunt was attended by many of the peers and chiefs and, as a result of their deliberations, their host gathered his men in the Braes of Mar, raised the Jacobite royal standard, and began the 1715 Rising.

In time of national emergency, such as the Jacobite Risings, harsh measures were employed by the authorities on either side to force out those few who hung back, just as is done by the State in modern conscript War. The present writer was distressed, during the Second World War, to sit on the court-martial that tried a gipsy deserter, who had been conscripted and sent most unsuitably to the Grenadier Guards. Nevertheless, the unfortunate gipsy had to be sentenced to a term of imprisonment, for the country was at war and the State had so ordained. After the 1745 Rising, many clansmen wisely pled that they had been forced out by threats of burning their roof-trees, and there is no doubt that such threats combined with public opinion to bring out some unwilling men on both sides. On the other hand, Stewart of Garth tells us (of such chiefs as Grant, who thought it right, and MacLeod, who thought it wise, to support the Government cause in 1745) that: 'The sound arguments that prevailed with the Chiefs, who could comprehend them, had no influence on their followers who were, in this instance, more inclined to follow their feelings than listen to reason. Of this, the behaviour of the clan Grant was an instance. Eleven hundred men pressed forward to offer their services, on condition that their Chief would lead them, to support, what they styled, the cause of their ancient Kings. Afterwards, when it was found necessary to pay a compliment to the Royal General [i.e. Cumberland] by meeting him at Aberdeen, all the Chief's influence could only procure ninety-five followers to attend him; a Chief, too, much beloved by his people. In the Isle of Skye, likewise, Sir Alexander Macdonald (father of Chief Baron Macdonald) and the Lairds of Macleod, Rasay, and others, had 2,400 men ready, when expresses arrived from Culloden. The former remained at home with his men, Macleod obeyed the summons of the President [Forbes of Culloden, Lord President of the Court of Session] whose arguments had such influence. Though Macleod is described by this great law officer as the only man of sense and courage he had about him, his influence over his followers failed so completely, when they discovered that his opinion was different to their own, that he could not command the obedience of more than 200 men, although upwards of 1,000 men, consisting of his own people, the Laird of Rasay's, and other gentlemen, were ready at Dunvegan Castle. These, and several circumstances which occurred at that period, are of themselves sufficient to prove, that the Highlanders were not those slaves to the caprice and power of their Chiefs that they have been supposed; and that, on the contrary, as I have already noticed, the latter were obliged to pay court, and yield to the will and independent spirit of their clans. These facts also refute a general opinion, that those who engaged in the Rebellion were forced out by their Chiefs and Lairds.'

A 'sheila-na-gig' figure, built into the wall of the late mediaeval church of Rodil on the island of Harris, once the burial place of the MacLeod chiefs. These very ancient fertility symbols were often incorporated in old churches. After Harris passed from the MacLeods of Dunvegan in the nineteenth century, it was held for some time by the Murray earls of Dunmore, cadets of Atholl, and the present Earl is a Gaelic-speaker and piper who keeps up his connection with the island. The then Earl of Dunmore built Amhuinnsuidh Castle in North Harris in 1868. But Lady Dunmore is said not to have entirely approved of the sheila-na-gigs at Rodil, and to have made her gamekeeper shoot at them.

King George IV, by Wilkie. He had a great respect for his Highlanders and, in 1822, was the first de facto Sovereign to visit Scotland since 1651. The present writer believes that he was also the lawful Jacobite Sovereign.

After the failure of the 1745 Rising, gatherings were frowned on for over half a century. But after the accession of King George IV, who wore the kilt (as did his brothers), had a special affection for the Highlanders and was the first Sovereign to set foot in Scotland for 171 years, local Gatherings and Games were held once more. His niece, Queen Victoria, loved the Highlands (where she made her own favourite home) and actively fostered the Games. At first, the authorities were a little worried, as when rowdyism occurred and swords were drawn at the Caledonian Society's gathering in Inver Park at Dunkeld in 1826. But although some, like the annual Atholl and Breadalbane Gathering, included processions of armed highlanders—the Lonach Gathering on Donside still does—the emphasis now moved more and more away from war and on to the Games. Nowadays, the old warlike training of the horsemen, 'tilting at the ring', is performed on motor-bicycle or jeep-back. Tossing the caber, putting the weight, and throwing the hammer, still continue. Piping and dancing were always features of these gatherings, and so the Highland Games once more became the annual meeting-place of the local community. It is sad that the smaller local Gatherings are now being quite deliberately taxed out of existence (by the decision of a former Tory Government) despite the vigorous protests of all lovers of the Highlands, at a time when special tax privileges are being accorded to an alien game of the English, called cricket.

Law and order was maintained in the highlands through two sorts of jurisdiction—the feudal power of the barons and the traditional authority of the chiefs. To some extent the two forms overlapped, as many chiefs were also barons. For example, Lochiel and Duart were baronies held of the Crown, as were Struan and Strathlachlan and Foulis. The Mackintosh was Baron of Moy under the bishopric of Moray, while other barons held their jurisdictions under the earldoms of Atholl and Erroll. A laird was a tenant-in-chief of the Crown, while a baron was somebody whose jurisdiction included powers of 'pit and gallows'. A barony was a unit of government and jurisdiction over a specified area, of which the baron was the local administrator. His duties in keeping the law included the powers of life and death for capital crimes, but his principal work was in day-to-day local organisation and social welfare.

The greatest Highland magnates even possessed the rights of Regality, with powers wider than those of the king's own Sheriff Courts (and they were usually the local hereditary Sheriff as well). For instance, the Atholl family had their Regality Courts at Logierait, where they were advised in a great council chamber by what amounted to a local parliament of nearly a hundred Atholl gentlemen, 'many of them of great landed property'. Stewart of Garth tells us of this Atholl 'feudal parliament' that it assembled in 'a noble chamber of better proportions than the British House of Commons'.

The feudal laws, which the barons themselves had enacted in Parliament, obliged them to provide certain facilities, such as a mill for their people, and to see that their heirs received adequate education to fit them for their baronial duties. A specified number of times each year, a baron had to hold a Baron Court. Those who held directly of the baron, called the 'goodmen', were divided into assizes which assessed the guilt or innocence of those brought before them. Over the Court there presided the baron himself, or more usually the Baron Bailie appointed by him. If the assize found somebody guilty, the sentence or doom was pronounced by the Deemster. The baron himself could sit in the court instead of his Bailie but could only be there as the judge, not as part of the assize or jury. He could however mitigate the sentence. A witch found guilty by an assize at Slains in 1597, for instance, was nevertheless freed by the 9th Earl of Erroll who was presiding; though the poor woman was later re-arrested and burnt by the less kindly burgesses of the City of Aberdeen. The assizes at the Baron Court also determined questions of local administration, such as 'should the Lang Craig be laboured, or should it lie fallow?'.

The jurisdiction of the chiefs as such was very different from that of the barons. By ancient custom, the chief was father and head of the family of all his clansmen, who therefore accepted his patriarchal rulings. His influence extended not only to the younger branches of his family who had acquired territories of their own elsewhere and still looked to him as patriarch, but also to individual members of the clan who had settled outside clan territory, and to the 'broken men' who had given him their calp (a bequest of their best beast) or who had adopted the chief's clan surname to secure his protection.

Lochiel's cromag or crook. The patriarchal chiefs were regarded as the shepherds of their people, and indeed the Gaelic expression for the Lord of the Isles was the Shepherd of the Isles: Buachaille nan Eileanan.

In view of the chiefs' traditional powers, the Scots Privy Council was wont to hold such of them as it officially recognised, responsible for the actions of all people of their clan or name. In this case, the Crown styled them, e.g. the Laird of MacGregor, even if they were not tenants-in-chief, the theory being that they held their clan, though not their lands, directly of the Sovereign. In the sixteenth century, the Government took hostages from them. In the seventeenth century, it made chiefs find cash security for their clansmen's good behaviour. By the eighteenth century, a 'bounty' or pension was sometimes paid by the Government to chiefs, in return for the task of keeping their clansmen under control. In 1714 the MacGregors, then a chiefless and broken clan, even went so far as to elect a remote cadet as 'Chief', simply in order to get the pension for them, with a secret agreement that he should split a third part of any pension received among the three chieftains—Roro, Glengyle and Bracklie—who each really claimed the true chiefship.

Often clansmen went to their own chief with a problem, and accepted his jurisdiction or arbitration, even if he did not have a legal title to his lands and they themselves were living elsewhere. A chieftain like MacDonell of Keppoch lived on lands which were not properly held of the Crown, nor at times by any good charter, yet his influence carried far beyond the bounds of his territory. In 1744 Cameron of Lochiel entered into an agreement with the MacDonell chiefs of Glengarry and Keppoch to deal with crime among their clansmen 'within proper districts of our estates (or where our authority among our followers and dependents will extend and reach)', and in accordance with this agreement, for example, Lochiel appointed a depute to deal with any offenders among the Camerons who had settled far away in Ardnamurchan, although it was former Clan Donald country then long in Campbell possession and nominally subject to Campbell jurisdiction.

Clan discipline was sometimes rather summary. The following incident occurred during the 1745 Rising. 'When (MacGregor of) Glencarnock and (Cameron of) Lochiel were at breakfast in the morning, they heard shooting on the brow of the hill, Lochiel said to Glen "What shooting can be in the hill?" Glencarnock answered "I shall tell you that the Camerons are shooting sheep on the hill".

"God forbid" said Lochiel "it is the MacGregors". Says Glen "I shall lay forfeit one hundred guineas that it is not the MacGregors". With this the two left breakfast, and drew their pistols and vowed if they were Camerons that Lochiel would shoot them and if MacGregors that Glen would shoot them; and by great fortune, passing the head of the avenue, there was a Cameron with a sheep upon his back; Lochiel fired at the fellow, and shot him thro' the shoulder, there he fell, the two went on a good way further but they got not a MacGregor yet.'

Lochiel could not have shot the man in his capacity as Baron of Lochiel, because he would have had first to call the case before his own Baron Court to obtain a conviction and give sentence before punishment could be administered. He was simply shooting him as his Colonel and as the chief of his clan, and the tough Camerons in general accepted that he was doing right: they knew 'the Gentle Lochiel' well enough to know that though it was rough, in time of war it was justice. In the Government Army at that time, such an offender, if not shot to death instead, could have been given several hundred lashes of the cat-o'-nine-tails on successive days and would doubtless often have died under the torture.

Before the North of Scotland came to be considered as in some way different from the South, the Gaelic world had itself been divided by the quarrel between the Stewart kingdom, the heartland power, and Macdonald's realm, the western coastal power, which had originally been a local kingdom under the high king of Norway. Macdonald still regarded himself as King of the Isles under the Scottish high-kingship, but was regarded as Lord of the Isles by the mainland power. Moreover, Macdonald was also Earl of Ross and therefore held much of the northern mainland of the Highlands. Although this division between Macdonald and Stewart spheres of influence is blurred, it gave rise to a fairly well-defined social distinction between systems of land tenure adopted under the two régimes.

The parts of the highlands always held directly of the King of Scots, like Atholl, were feudalised at the same time as the rest of Scotland. Land was then held on a feu (the word is the same as fee) which implied security of tenure. A chief like Robertson of Struan, holding land feudally of the Crown, often feued some of it out to his own cadets, who in turn thus acquired security of tenure—and so on downwards. Eviction from land held feudally was impossible except on such grounds as rebellion. An even more outright concession to a cadet was to grant him lands in 'ward', which 'primarily involved service in the field without any regular payment whatsoever. But when a vassal was a minor the superior drew the whole profits of the lands. This was a most valuable perquisite, though, of course, its yield was uncertain. But ward had one disadvantage in the highlands. Custom entitled a chief anyway to the support of his clan; thus, in making a grant to a cadet, he was really giving away something for nothing.' But clansmen with ward-holdings were as secure as the feuars, in fact more so.

But Macdonald of the Isles had held the Hebrides and the earldom of Ross, a vast highland area including what is now called Inverness-shire, as an almost independent realm until nearly 1500. In these wilder highlands, a chief like Macdonald of Clanranald would usually grant to a younger son not a feu but a tack, which was a form of lease. The tack was often given for life. More usually it was for three generations. When this time was up, the then tacksman could try to buy the land in if his branch had done well enough and prospered. Sometimes this was accomplished by way of wadset, when his chief 'pawned' the land for a capital sum and did not redeem it. Otherwise, he was shifted to a smaller tack, but was nevertheless provided for within the clan country. As a result, the more distant a tacksman's relationship to the chief, the less land he held, unless he had managed to make and save enough to buy it in for himself; for there were always younger sons of later generations pressing for the land. However, until the end of the seventeenth century, this system encouraged the feeling of clanship; and the members of the clan did expect the chief ultimately to provide for them.

Indeed, the chief administered a clan 'welfare state'. Thus, when the 21st Chief of MacLeod died in 1707, twenty-six widows were receiving pensions from the Dunvegan rents, and his successor took over the duty of looking after 'the widows and crippled folk of the clan'. Again, we are told of Macneil of Barra in 1695 that: 'When a tenant's wife in this or the adjacent islands dies, he then addresseth himself to the Macneil of Barray . . . Upon this representation, Macneil finds out a suitable match for him; and the woman's name being told him, immediately he goes to her, carrying with him a bottle of strong waters for their entertainment at marriage, which is then consummated. When a tenant dies, the widow addresseth herself to Macneil in the same manner . . . If a tenant chance to lose his milk-cows by the severity of the season, or any other misfortune: in this case Macneil of Barray supplies him with the like number that he lost. When any of these tenants are so far advanced in years that they are incapable to till the ground, Macneil takes such old men into his own family, and maintains them all their life after.'

When the Lordship of the Isles was overthrown and the Earldom of Ross also annexed to the Scottish Crown, all Macdonald's grants of land to the native inhabitants became invalid. This, as also the system of tacks in those parts of the Highlands which he had ruled, enabled the triumphant Scottish government to make attempts at dispossessing ancient but troublesome clans by unfairly granting feudal charters of their lands to strangers. The charters themselves were all right, and gave security, but often to the wrong clan. Also, some chiefs were deliberately forced or inveigled into debt and their lands then foreclosed on, under the Scottish legal system that was incomprehensible to them and to their clansmen. The Campbells of Argyll in the West, and the Gordons of Huntly in the East, were the main instruments of Government policy at first. Then came the Jacobite forfeitures of the eighteenth century. Later, 'progressive' schemes to modernise the highlands by putting in sheep farms were helped by the same system of tacks which made evictions easy. Those highland families who had feus of their lands could not be evicted, providing they were held securely in feu by charter confirmed by the Scottish Crown. Therefore the Clearances were only completely possible in those parts of the highlands that had never been properly feudalised down to a fairly low level.

Of course, small holdings were never feudalised anywhere in the highlands. The tacksmen sometimes sub-let crofts to smaller tenants who were called mailers because they paid mail or rent. Later these mailers tended to become crofters holding their land directly of the Laird. Often these were joint tenants (see, for instance, the Judicial Rentals of the MacLeod Estates 1664, of the Macdonald Estates 1733, and the Mackinnon Estates 1751). Joint leases of up to three hundred acres of moorland and a little green pasture were often held by townships of tenants. These townships usually also divided annually by lot their much smaller arable acreage which was in 'runrig'. The infield was kept manured, but the outfield was simply ploughed until it was exhausted and then left to recover under grass. Such tenant families would keep two to twenty milk cows, several garron ponies and from twenty to two hundred sheep or goats.

In peacetime, the gentlemen of the clan had duties in attendance on their chief. In wartime, they officered its fighting force. In Islay, for example, each merkland maintained one gentleman in 'meat and cloth', who did no ordinary manual labour but had to be in constant readiness as one of the laird's household, ready both with service and advice. But, contrary to much woolly thought in modern times, the land was always theoretically the chief's or laird's, subject to customary obligations, for 'the idea that "there is no partnership in women or land" is of long standing in the highlands: cha bhi bràithreachas mu mhnaoi no mu fhearann.'

In times of war, the ordinary tenants formed the bulk of the chief's fighting force. Many were true clansmen whose genealogies went back at least nominally to the forefather of the whole clan. To the crofters this was important, because the chief and his branch chieftains accepted the usual Celtic moral obligation to ward off famine from their kindred and to provide a share in the ancestral lands for every descendant of the common ancestor. The system lasted until a Whiggish statute of the Scottish Parliament in 1695 eventually brought about the end of runrig tenure of the land. 'Nor is it difficult to date from the passing of this Act that break-up of the Clan system in its agrestic character, not reached, in its patriarchal aspect, until after 1746.'

The rest of the fighting force was made up of new-comers who had sought the chief's protection. For example, when the MacGregors massacred the MacLarens, slaying their chief and temporarily breaking the clan, many MacLarens went to the neighbouring chieftain, Campbell of Glenorchy, and offered him their calp. This was the best beast or steed in each clansman's possession at the time of his death, in return for which he and his heirs were protected, provided they followed that chief or chieftain. Calp was abolished by statute in 1617.

Attached to the tacks and crofts were usually a number of cottars who helped to labour them in return for a couple of cows and sufficient land of their own to sow a boll of oats. They were originally not true members of the clan but incoming 'broken men' or else descendants of the once unfree nativi, doubtless mostly of Pictish stock, who were attached in ancient times by 'direction of labour' to the soil of the country. But they too intermarried with the clansmen and other followers of the chief and, by the end of the seventeenth century, the whole of the chief's following was so much inter-related that everyone had come to be regarded as a member of the clan. This communal spirit was reinforced by the custom that the chieftains had of boarding out their own children to foster-parents, so that they were brought up to share the everyday lives of their people in the households of ordinary clansmen. But, by the middle of the seventeenth century, fosterage had begun to become honorary, and some chiefs nominally fostered their sons with honoured members of the clan, who took on certain financial or other obligations to the child without actually having to bring him up in their homes.

Yet, curiously enough, fosterage was originally a royal custom from pagan times, when a king was expected to be slain as a sacrifice by his successor. For the concept of clanship goes far back into the Celtic world, particularly into ancient Ireland. Each community was a little kingdom, for it was thought quite natural that there should be local kings acknowledging greater kings, indeed several grades of king. But it was the local king who actually administered his own local kingdom: the paramountcy of the greater kings being a matter of prestige rather than of government. Ancient Ireland contained a hundred, and Norway about thirty, little kingdoms. In what is now Scotland, there are said to have been seven kingdoms, excluding Argyll, the Orkneys, and everything south of the Forth and Clyde. There were Kings of Atholl, Kings of

The Royal Footprint carved in the rock at Dunadd, in the sacred inauguration place of the ancient Dalriadic dynasts who were Kings of Argyll. At his inauguration, each successive king placed his own foot in this footprint of his royal ancestors.

Strathearn (Fortrenn), Kings of Moray, Kings of Argyll and Kings of Strathclyde. We still talk of the Kingdom of Fife. There is no reason to suppose that people were less happy when they enjoyed local autonomy and were able to know their sovereign personally, as in Monaco and Liechtenstein today. The Benelux economy does not require that the Kingdom of the Belgians and the Grand Duchy of Luxembourg should be merged politically in the Realm of the Netherlands. But it seems that only very sophisticated people can distinguish between economic and political union: and so the greater kingdoms gradually swallowed up the little ones during the Middle Ages.

Whether Celtic or Norse in origin, the pagan kings were sacred beings. At his inauguration, each king had to go through various religious rituals, as a result of which he and his people felt that the Lucky Spirit of the community entered and dwelt in the king's body. This is what was meant when it was said that the royal families descended from the gods. Since this Lucky Spirit's human casket could not be allowed to decay, such kings were periodically sacrificed or slain by their rightful successors. Christianity, with its emphasis on Our Lord being the once only and final sacrifice, put an end to open king-slaying, although in practice Celtic kings went on being slain by their successors up to the eleventh century. Indeed, of the MacCarthy of Muskerry branch of the ancient royal house of Munster, we are told that 'the MacDonough MacCarthys kept up the custom of family murders' apparently as late as the sixteenth century. 'The attempt by each heir on the life of the successive dynasts of Muskerry seems to have been looked on with the religious fervour accorded by the Romans to the arena and by moderns to boxing contests. When the then Lord of Muskerry was slain by his heir in the sixteenth century, the murder was described as his being "slayne by his cosen Donaghe McOwen who had the best challenge to Muscrye".' A similar state of affairs can be observed among the Kings of Scots, until the sons of Saint Margaret ganged together against all comers, and put a stop to it.

After the adoption of Christianity, the kings continued to receive the awe that had rightly been accorded to their sacrificial position, for it was felt that they still symbolised the Spirit of their people. As the supreme patriarch, the High King, whether in Ireland or in Scotland, was regarded in the Gaelic world as head of the whole national family: the Chief of Chiefs. In Ireland, the local kings of the Gaels were gradually brought under the English Crown. In 1515, a report to Henry VIII observed that 'ther byn more than 60 countryes, called Regyons, in Ireland, . . . some region as bygge as a shyre, some more, some lesse; where reygneith more than 60 Chyef Capytaynes, wherof some callyth themselffes Kynges, some Kynges Peyres, in their langage, some Prynceis, some Dukes, some Archedukes, . . .: and every of the said Capytaynes makeyth warre and peace for hymself, and holdeith by swerde, and hathe imperiall jurysdyction within his rome, and obeyeth to noo other person.' Although even the Macdonalds had stopped styling themselves kings by the sixteenth century, the situation in the Highlands was not so far different: and it is important for a proper understanding of the clans to realise that their chiefs, like the 'Chyef Capytaynes' of Ireland, were also of dynastic origin. Indeed, the seventeenth-century Wardlaw MS. tells us of the Highlands that 'all our chiftens derive themselves from kings and princes'. The Lord Lyon will still only allow crest-coronets (which are in fact open crowns) to Chiefs.

This royal background is of great importance in understanding Highland pride. For the clan were the 'children' of the chiefs, and the chiefs were the scions of the prehistoric Blood Royal. By the Middle Ages, the local kings had become earls or mighty lords, like the Earl of Strathearn who reigned 'by the Indulgence of God', or the Lord of the Isles, who was called the Shepherd of the Islands (Buachaille nan Eileanan). Nobody was ever made an earl in mediaeval Scotland, who was not either a king's son or cousin, or else married to a king's daughter or cousin, except in the case of local dynasts also of royal stock. The earls created between Flodden and the Union were equally drawn from the old nobility. Until the late seventeenth century, only earls (and the newer ranks of marquess and duke) wore coronets or open crowns, as 'cousins of the Sovereign', and had the royal ermine on their robes: and the full ceremonial style of an earl, proclaimed for instance at state funerals in the old days, is 'Most Noble and Puissant Prince'. When the Queen makes an ex-Prime Minister an earl, she is making him an honorary cousin of the Royal Family, and it would of course be a meaningless honour if, for example, Her Majesty's own brother-in-law were not also made Earl of Snowdon. There was no need to create the Duke of Edinburgh 'Prince Philip', since all dukes and earls are princes. That is why royal princes are called after their dukedoms or earldoms as soon as they are bestowed on them. It is only because we have nobody called 'prince' who is not already an earl, outside younger sons of the Royal Family who have not yet been given peerages, that the idea has gained ground that 'prince' is a separate (supposedly higher) rank than duke or earl.

The local dynasts' younger branches, in the male or female line, were settled in appanages. Their heads were the 'captains' or chiefs who held the actual thanages, often converted into baronies in feudal times. The word 'chief' is Norman-French, and was introduced into Scotland by the chiefs of great Norman families like the Bruces and Hays and Lindsays. It has long been used to translate the different words by which at various periods the Highlanders have designated the heads of their clans, although the earlier translation was 'captain' in the sense of headman (from Latin caput, a 'head') and still survives in the formal style of two of the greatest chiefs: the Captain of Clan Chattan and the Captain of Clanranald. (These should not be confused with the captains of castles, such as the Captain of Dunstaffnage.) In very early charters, the head of the clan is called the toiseach which was then translated into English as 'thane', and his territory (the clan's appanage) was called a thanage. Also, in some fourteenth-century charters, there appears the ancient Erse style ceann-cineal: head of the cenel or cineal, an older word in normal use than clan. The Cenel Conaill, for example, were the kindred of St. Columba and the ruling dynasty of Tirconaill ('Conall's Land', conquered by their ancestor King Conall Gulban in the fifth century) in Ireland. Similarly, before 1256 the last of the male line to hold the earldom of the old Earls of Carrick (a branch of the ancient Princes of Galloway) nominated by a special charter his brother's son Sir Roland of Carrick to the position of 'kenkynol' (ceann-cineal) of the old dynastic clan of Carrick—a position inherited from Sir Roland by the powerful Kennedy chiefs who were locally known as late as the sixteenth century as the 'Kings of Carrick'. When the gypsies first came to official notice under their celebrated Faa' or Fall dynasty, King James V granted the then Faa' a charter with a jurisdiction of life and death over all the 'Egyptians' in Scotland, and styled him 'Earl of Little Egypt': so it is perhaps interesting that the Privy Council in their turn styled him 'Captain of the Egyptians' as though he were a Highland chief.

The title 'chief' is now applied by custom only to the head of a whole Name—with certain exceptions, notably the heads of the principal branches of the royal Clan Donald, also sometimes those of the royal clan of Stewart, and the head of the Clan Fraser of Lovat, long separated from his Lowland kindred. The heads of branches are called 'chieftains'. Where chieftains held their lands directly of the Crown and not of their own chiefs (e.g. Campbell of Breadalbane or Maclean of Ardgour), they did not always follow their chief in political matters—but usually branches of the same surname acted collectively in matters affecting the affairs of their clansmen. This was true of the Lowlands, too, up to the seventeenth century; but continued in the Highlands until after Culloden.

A great Irish chieftain in his national dress: Sir Niall O'Neill, 2nd Baronet of Killeleagh, Lord Lieutenant of Armagh, who was mortally wounded as the Colonel of O'Neill's Dragoons, fighting for the Jacobite Cause at the battle of the Boyne in 1690. His portrait by J. M. Wright in 1680 (now in the Tate Gallery, though a slightly different version of it is at Dunrobin Castle) is unique, in that it depicts a great Irish noble in the Erse costume of that period; with his 'wild Irish' fringed cloak, curious but beautifully adorned Erse apron, long red hose, pointed brogues, Celtic dirk, basket-hilted broadsword, great oval shield of studded red leather, gold-tipped black javelin, and elaborately-tooled red leather conical cap with the flowing plumes of an Irish chieftain. Sir Niall descended in the direct male line from King Domnall 'the Young Ox' O'Neill, elder son of Aodh 'Athlone', King of the North of Ireland (1030—1033), whose younger son Anrothan was ancestor of the Highland chiefs of Lamont, Maclachlan, Macneil, MacEwen and other clans of Cowall and Knapdale in Scotland.

Kildrummy Castle, mediaeval centre of the great highland Earldom of Mar, that included Deeside and Donside, territory of the Forbes, Gordon and Farquharson clansmen. The Earldom of Mar is the oldest surviving peerage in Britain, dating from before peerages were created by the Crown, and the family of the present Countess of Mar are simply styled, e.g. 'Lady Janet of Mar'. It has passed through several heiresses over the centuries. But the Erskines, who had inherited the earldom through an heiress in 1438, were unjustly deprived of it by the Crown until 1565, as a result of which the head of the Erskines in the male line has been recognised as also holding a separate earldom of Mar from 1565, and is now styled the Earl of Mar & Kellie. The two peerages of Mar should, however, not be confused.

Sir Iain Glas Campbell of Glenorchy, Mac Chailein mhic Dhonnachaidh, afterwards 1st Earl of Breadalbane, known to his enemies as 'Slippery John'. The identification of this portrait has been disputed, but for various reasons the present writer does not doubt it. This is perhaps the earliest surviving painting of a highland chieftain in his national dress, and was taken by J. M. Wright c.1680 as a companion picture to that of Sir Niall O'Neill, the Irish chieftain. 'Slippery John' bought up the debts of the childless 6th Earl of Caithness, got a bond from him of his titles and estates, and after the earl's death managed to get a charter recognising himself as Earl of Caithness in 1677. The rightful 7th Earl opposed him in force at the head of the Sinclairs, so he and 700 of his Campbells marched north, invaded Caithness, and defeated the Sinclairs in battle. As his own men were dressed like him, in belted plaids, while the Sinclairs preferred to wear the trews, the Campbells of Glenorchy mocked the Sinclairs for their costume—and before the battle Glenorchy's piper, Finlay MacIver, taunted them with his specially composed tune Bhodach nam Brigeis: 'Gaffers in Trousers', now known as Breadalbane's Salute. The Sinclairs continued resistance, and King Charles II intervened. 'Slippery John' gave up the Earldom of Caithness, and in 1681 was created Earl of Breadalbane and Holland instead.

Younger sons were settled within the appanage that formed the clan territory. Their children in turn settled there, and thus the clan took roots. For the word clan simply means 'children', and originally each clan was made up only of the immediate descendants of the man after whom it was named. Thus the Clan Donald were the actual descendants of King Donald, who was a Lord of the Isles in the thirteenth century; and the Macnabs, 'Sons of the Abbot', were the family of the hereditary Abbots of Glendochart. As there was little emigration, and as it was considered the moral duty of the chief to provide a portion of land within the appanage for every genuine member of his clan, generation after generation the land was divided up, with the smaller portions going on the whole to the more remote relations. These naturally intermarried with the other inhabitants of the district, and so the whole people of each territory gradually came to feel themselves related to the chief. Although this feeling was often fictional in the male line, it was usually very real in the female line. So, by 1746, MacDonell of Keppoch, a chief of the Blood Royal of the Isles with an ancestry going back to the gods, could refer naturally to his armed tenantry (in his dying words at Culloden) as 'the children of my tribe': clann mo chinnidh.

People often speak of 'old families'. In fact, of course, no family is older than any other, and what is really meant is that the particular families called 'old' have managed to maintain their identity and retain records of their past longer than the majority of other folk (to cite the present writer's Scottish genealogical introduction to the 1952 edition of Burke's Landed Gentry). People also speak loosely of 'blood running thin', as though a long-recorded family had in truth a longer descent than an unrecorded family—and sometimes they talk about 'new blood', when what they refer to is just as 'old blood' as anybody else's but happens to be (for better or maybe for worse) of unknown origin. It's also fashionable to talk about 'the accident of birth', as if it were by some accident that the nuptials of Mac Cailein Mor produce a typical Campbell, and not a Macdonald nor even a baboon. It is no accident that Winston Churchill was not a Russell, that Bertrand Russell is not an Alexander, or that Field Marshal Alexander is not a Churchill: indeed, their fathers would have eyed their wives' friends suspiciously had they turned out so. But it is, however, a true accident of birth that Sir Winston Churchill was not Duke of Marlborough, that Bertrand Russell was not Duke of Bedford, or that Field-Marshal 'Alex' was not Earl of Caledon: for it was by chance that elder brothers existed and survived. Similarly, it must not be forgotten that ultimately the true Highland clansmen descended just as much from their dynastic name-father as the chief himself did. When King George II asked to see a Highland soldier, two Black Watch privates, Gregor McGregor, 'commonly called Gregor the Beautiful', and John Campbell, son of Duncan Campbell of the family of Duneaves in Perthshire (a cadet of Glenlyon), were sent to London. 'They displayed so much dexterity and skill in the management of their weapons, as to give perfect satisfaction to his Majesty. Each got a gratuity of one guinea, which they gave to the porter at the palace gate as they passed out. They thought that the King had mistaken their character and condition in their own country.' For Private Gregor McGregor was as much a descendant of the original chief, Gregor of Golden Bridles ('Royal is my Blood'), as was the then Chieftain of the Children of the Mist; and Private John Campbell could trace his descent from Great Colin as easily as could the Duke of Argyll himself.

Prince Charles Edward's rescuers, Miss Flora Macdonald and her attendant Neil MacEachan, were just as much the descendants of Somerled, King of the Isles, as were Clanranald and Sir Alexander Macdonald of Macdonald themselves. And the tremendous vigour of the old kings burst out repeatedly in the humblest of their scions. Neil MacEachan's son, for instance, born in exile, became that Alexandre Macdonald, Duc de Tarente, whom Napoleon made a Marshal of France. But it was an advantage to them psychologically, that the main line of their chiefs always held on, with their family records, in the old clan country: for it enabled all of the clan to feel part of a continuous and traceable history, to have the knowledge of belonging to a truly historic family—abroad too often limited to a narrow upper class, but in the Highlands the prerogative of all. Even the famous Macfie race of tinklers bear 'one of the oldest and most interesting Gaelic personal names we possess'. Furthermore, a man's daughter is just as much his child as his son is—and a descent in the female line is still a descent: nobody could have been born at all if any single one of his myriad ancestors had died in infancy. The present writer doubts whether even one of the gallant clansmen who fought at Culloden could ever have been born to be there at all, had King Kenneth mac Alpin been strangled in his cradle. 'Butcher' Cumberland might well have reflected that this would have been an excellent thing, were it not that His Royal Highness also descended, many many times over (through cousin-marriages within his own ancestry), from the same King Kenneth mac Alpin.

Descents link downwards in the social scale. Kings married across the oceans, nobles across the counties, but until modern times ordinary folk married near to home. So the likelihood, for example, of a particular Mackay clansman of today descending from a particular Clan Donnachaidh clansman of the fourteenth century is infinitely remote. But it is not at all unlikely that the same Mackay clansman should descend from King Robert Bruce. If he had any descent in the female line (with so much intermarriage in Strathnaver) from Niall 'of the Bass', Chief of Mackay in 1433, he would therefore also descend from Niall's mother Elisabeth of the Isles, daughter of Macdonald himself, and her mother was in turn a daughter of King Robert II, grandson of King Robert Bruce. Similarly, the likelihood of a particular Clan Donnachaidh (Robertson) clansman of today descending from a particular Mackay clansman of the fourteenth century is equally remote. But it is most improbable that the same Robertson clansman would not descend (through local intermarriage in Atholl) from the prolific Stewarts of Garth, whelps of the Wolf of Badenoch, himself a son of King Robert II, the grandson of King Robert Bruce. Indeed, it is most improbable that there is any Highland chief today who does not descend from King Robert Bruce, nor any other Highlander who does not descend from King Kenneth mac Alpin, who united the Picts and Scots. It is the royal stock that is genealogically as well as politically the unifying force that makes all Scotsmen true kinsmen. So the royal style was patriarchal not territorial, for it embraced Scotsmen everywhere into the national family: not 'King of Scotland' but 'King of Scots'. Today the Queen, the reigning descendant of Queen Victoria and Mary Queen of Scots, of Robert Bruce and Malcolm Ceann-mor and Kenneth mac Alpin, as also of the ancient dynasts of the Picts and Scots, the Norse and Britons, is the head of this national family: the Chief of Chiefs, who freshly incarnates the Spirit of Caledonia.

Cruachan, the famous mountain at the head of Loch Awe. Now it has a reservoir storing eight million units of electricity; and two-thirds of a mile inside Ben Cruachan is an underground power station of four hundred megawatt capacity, inclined shafts rising through the mountain rock from the power station to the reservoir. Surrounding mountain peaks can be seen rising through the mist behind Ben Cruachan. The ancient Campbell gathering-place, however, was at another Cruachan, a village opposite Innischonaill Castle on lower Loch Awe.

The clans are thus simply the historic branches of this national family. So it is not surprising that the Highlander, whose clan can be traced back to one of the ancient royal houses of pre-Christian times, and whose nostalgically-remembered territory was an appanage—the clan's special portion of an immemorial realm—and not a purchased estate, usually has a great pride in his ancestry and a deep love of his homeland. This feeling is by no means for the Highlands in general. When Burns wrote 'My heart's in the Highlands' he was expressing no Highland sentiment. A Highlander would feel, my heart's in Appin, or in Atholl ('cam' ye by Atholl?'), or in Lochaber ('maybe to return to Lochaber no more')—but historically speaking, he might have been only too willing to take Fire and Sword to the neighbouring districts. 'Cruachan' means nothing to a Grant, nor 'Craigellachie' to a Campbell: but reversed, their significance is intense. For each branch of the national family—anyway in the Highlands—prefers its own home ground.

Chiefs were called most usually after the namefather of the clan, e.g. MacGregor, 'the Son of Gregor'. In English, from at least the sixteenth century onwards, there was a tendency either to call the chief 'the Laird of MacGregor' or else 'MacGregor of that Ilk'—treating his clan as if it were his estate, which indeed the Crown did when it took hostages from him even when he wasn't a Crown tenant—a style which in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries got Englished still further into 'MacGregor of MacGregor' (luckily, to avoid confusion, the present chief has the Christian name of Gregor, and is easily remembered as Sir Gregor MacGregor of MacGregor). In popular conversation, chiefs are often called 'The' in English: the first reference to the Clan Gregor chief as such appearing in the seventeenth-century Black Book of Taymouth, 'although not righteous heir to the MacGregor'. A MS. of the reign of James VI tells us 'How the MacLeoid of the Lewes was with his whol trybe destroyed', and The Chisholm appears in the Inverness Council records of 1654, as soon after does The Dallas. A rather more modern example is an entry in Sir Frederick Ponsonby's Game Book for 23 August 1911: 'Moy Hall. 7 guns. The King, The Mackintosh, Ld. Tullibardine, Ld. Lovat, Sir C. Cust, Angus Mackintosh and F.P.—1009 grouse'. But sometimes chiefs were called in English after their appanage, e.g. Lochiel or Glengarry, though in that case they always had a Gaelic patronymic too. Lochiel was Mac Dhomnuill Dhuibh, 'the Son of Black Donald'; and Glengarry was Mac Mhic Alasdair, 'the Son of the son of Alexander'. The Robertson chief was called Struan (or sometimes Struan Robertson, to distinguish him from the Murray laird of Strowan), but the Perth Hunt were perhaps unnecessarily emphasising his position as chief when the then Robertson of Struan was entered in their minutes on 30 September 1862 as 'The Struan'.

The surname of the dynastic clan spread only gradually throughout their territory. For example, the Earls of Lennox were mighty rulers, sprung from ancient royal stock. They had a younger branch, who received as their Walking stick presented by the Prince of Wales (afterwards King George V) to The Mackintosh in 1909, to the inscription on which was added the bag of grouse on each successive later Royal Visit to Moy. The King held at least one Privy Council at Moy, and Lloyd George held a Cabinet Meeting there, while staying with The Mackintosh, Lord Lieutenant of Inverness-shire.

appanage Arrochar in the Lennox. The head of this branch in the early fourteenth century was called Bartholomew. So his descendants were naturally called Macfarlane, which (of course) means 'Son of Bartholomew'. They became chiefs of the ruling clan in the Arrochar district. Their younger branches were also settled there. They too came to be called Macfarlanes. To repeat, more and more of the people in the district intermarried with them until—although they might not actually all be called Macfarlane—they all regarded themselves as belonging to the clan and as being related to the chief, in whose country they were living and of whom they were holding their own homes.

The ordinary highlanders did not necessarily have the same surname as their chief, although they often adopted it latterly. Indeed, until a late stage, most highlanders did not take fixed surnames at all. When they did, some clans like the Campbells, Cummings, Frasers and Mackenzies encouraged them to take the name of the chief's family. All the same, clan surnames were not nearly as widely adopted as many people suppose. For example, the mass of the ordinary people who made up the clan regiments in the '45 had very different names from the clan surname. The officers mostly did have the same name as the chief, but they were usually tacksmen and therefore almost certainly relations.

Thus there is only a half-truth in the popular idea that all the people in a given area had the same name and belonged to the same 'tribe'. Certainly they felt that they belonged to the local clan: and, for instance, highlanders who lived in the Robertson country would have Robertson relations and would tend to hold their land of Robertson lairds. But the clan was not a great tribe of people all called Robertson living from prehistoric times in one area and electing a chief called Struan. Quite the opposite, the area was held by Struan, descendant of its ancient dynasts, and he threw his branches like roots downward. They radiated out and gradually absorbed everyone else. Just as the system was becoming really tribalised—when Keppoch referred to his clansmen at Culloden as 'the children of my tribe'—it was broken.

When the Whig revolution took place in Britain at the end of the 1680's, its strongest opponents were the Irish and the Highlanders. Although perhaps they had suffered most from the Scottish Crown in the past, they showed enormous loyalty to it in adversity and fought like fiends. They defeated the Whig army at Killiecrankie, although it was commanded by a Highlander, Lord Reay's cousin General Hugh Mackay of Scourie. Seeing what a great danger the military organisation of the Highlanders could be, the Government (inspired not so much by the Campbells as by the Dalrymple Master of Stair) attempted to teach them a lesson of terror with the massacre of Glencoe. But the action boomeranged. For it was so horrifying that the propaganda worked against those who had attempted to make use of the massacre as an 'object lesson' to the clans. In the upshot, Sir Thomas Moncreiffe of that Ilk, as Clerk of the Exchequer (i.e. permanent head of the Treasury) signed a special authorisation for compensation to be paid to the surviving Macdonalds of Glencoe.

In 1715, the Government felt the power of the highland broadsword to such an extent, that they began to realise that the Highlanders had to be subdued in order to bring them within the organisation of the rest of the British Isles. Forts were built at Fort George in Inverness, halfway down the Great Glen at Fort Augustus, and at the south-western end of the Great Glen at Fort William, all three called after members of the Hanoverian royal family. Block-houses were erected, garrisons installed, and General Wade, a humane and charming man who got on very well with the Highlanders, started building roads and the delightful hump-backed 'Wade bridges' as his lines of communication through the Highlands. Officially, Highlanders were disarmed after the '15 Rising, but they concealed their weapons in the thatch of their houses and wherever else they could. Again in 1745 (as it seemed to the English) these gibbering aborigines, speaking an alien tongue, dressed in strange garb, bearing the sort of shield their ancestors might have borne against Julius Caesar, came rushing down, albeit in comparatively small numbers, but this time as far as Derby, chasing everybody before them. The Central Government was now so disturbed that it took a great deal of trouble to lessen the power of the Highlanders ever to do such a thing again.

In 1747, the heritable jurisdictions of the great chiefs were abolished by Parliament, against the votes of the majority of Scottish members of both Houses and contrary to the express terms of the Treaty of Union (which surely should only lawfully be modified by a majority of the Scottish representatives: else what was the point of negotiating the Treaty at all). It is said that this freed the people, but in fact the disappearance of the Baron Courts removed their traditional share (as members of assizes) in local government and turned the former units of administration into ordinary estates. And it is not clear why a local bailie appointed by the Duke of Atholl, who was dependent on local feeling, and was administering local customary law, should always be supposed worse than a sheriff substitute politically appointed by the Crown without local knowledge. Certainly, when the troubles came, the Government sheriffs took little account of local popular feeling. These old local jurisdictions would of course have died a natural death in the nineteenth century, but for quite different reasons.

The century following the overthrow of the clans in 1746, saw an unparalleled population explosion in the Highlands, that led inevitably to great hardship. Excluding Orkney and Shetland, which are outside the Highlands, the 'Crofting Counties' are Argyll, Inverness-shire, Caithness, Sutherland, Ross and Cromartie. Their total population in 1755, i.e. at the time of the overthrow of the clan system, was 216,952. Today their total population is slightly larger: at the 1961 census it was 241,389. But the chaotic period of population explosion in these counties was in the first half of the nineteenth century. In 1801, before the 'Clearances' it had risen to 255,993. In 1851, after the Clearances, it had risen by about another thirty per cent to the unprecedented figure of 334,475. These figures, coming at a time when the Industrial Revolution was changing the whole economy of the country, give some idea of the problem with which Highland estate administration was faced at this period. Different lairds tried to meet the situation in different ways. But whatever method was tried, the situation remains the same. Cattle economy on the high ground is no longer economic. Sheep failed when the Napoleonic Wars' blockade came to an end. Except for some subsidised crofters, folk no longer live in the narrow glens, whether 'cleared' or not, but are settled in the broader fertile straths or in the coastal districts. However, industry never took root in Highland hearts so long as they were rooted in the Highlands. Men of Highland descent flourish in great cities from Glasgow to Toronto. But in the Highlands they could not accustom themselves to urban life. Burghs like Inverness were planted by alien merchants; and even a cathedral town like Dunkeld was never a large place.

Emigration took away only a part of the expanding surplus population. At first the chiefs and chieftains, feeling their clansmen belonged to the Highlands, tried to dissuade their people from emigration. Burns, who did not really understand Highlanders (though his romantic sympathy for them is even more lyrically moving today than ever) attacked Lord Breadalbane for trying to discourage his own people from emigrating from the glens to the New World. Later, as the population explosion continued, some lairds, who found the pressure of economics made them unable to give their surplus population an adequate subsistence, assisted emigration out of their own pockets. As the Highland economy staggered from crisis to crisis, harsh measures were as ineffectual as the old ways in dealing with the situation. Mr. John Prebble, perhaps the most recent authority on the worst Clearances, suggests that if the hard-pressed lairds had followed the wise advice of Sir John Sinclair of Ulbster, greatest and best of the chieftains in Caithness, a 'slow and considerate change' could have made the conversion to sheep a benefit to the small tenants, with 'native shepherds among the Highlanders' acting as herdsmen in common to joint townships pooling their holdings and capital. It is an historically emotional disaster that this was not tried: even though retrospective commonsense tells us that it, too, would probably not have worked. A further and postponed disadvantage is that 'sheep monoculture in the Scottish Highlands has been slowly destroying fertility for the last 150 years or more, by eating out the finer grasses, leaving coarser grasses and bracken to predominate'. As it was, when cattle proved uneconomic, Lowland-run sheep farms cleared the higher straths—not only to fail in their turn, but actually to encourage a further increase in the population who had been shifted to the lower ground.

Colonel David Stewart of Garth (himself a whelp of the Wolf of Badenoch) wrote in 1822: 'While the country was portioned out amongst numerous tenants, none of their sons were allowed to marry till they had obtained a house, a farm, or some certain prospect of settlement, unless, perhaps, in the case of a son, who was expected to succeed his father. Cottagers and tradesmen were also discouraged from marrying, till they had a house, and means of providing for a family. These customs are now changed. The system of throwing whole tracts of country into one farm, and the practice of letting lands to the highest bidder, without regard to the former occupiers, occasions gloomy prospects, and the most fearful and discouraging uncertainty of tenure. . . . Having now no sure prospect of a permanent settlement, by succeeding to the farms inherited by their fathers, nor a certainty of being permitted to remain in their native country on any terms, they marry whenever inclination prompts them. The propriety of marrying when young, they defend on this principle, that their children may rise up around them, while they are in the vigour of life, and able to provide for their maintenance, and that they may thus ensure support to their old age; for no Highlander can ever forgo the hope that, while he has children able to support him, he will never be allowed to want. . . . If a poor man's family are under the necessity of going to service, they settle among themselves which of their number shall in turn remain at home, to take charge of their parents, and all consider themselves bound to share with them whatever they are able to save from their wages.'

During this difficult century, some estates felt obliged to reintroduce (until 1886) the old pre-Culloden convention in the form of an actual prohibition to marry on the estate without leave, properly granted on evidence of economic ability to support a family. The lairds of course applied a rather similar rule to their own children in the 'cut-him-off-with-a-penny' Victorian mode: as happened to the late Cluny Macpherson's father. Today, perhaps only young officers of the Brigade of Guards are still thirled in such a way. For example the present Lords Lovat, Bute, Forbes and Ogilvy, the Master of Lovat, The Menzies, Maclean of Duart, Colquhoun of Luss, Rattray of Rattray, MacGregor of MacGregor (and for that matter, the present writer) have all, while subalterns in the Scots or other Foot Guards, been obliged to apply for permission if they wanted to marry; a permission that is by no means automatically granted.

When the Clearances came, some of the wholesale evictions were caused by avarice, some by economic pressure on the debt-burdened lairds, yet others (what is the worst of all) by Good Intentions. To this last and nastiest category belonged the notorious Sutherland Clearances, ordained and expensively paid for out of his own pocket for purely doctrinaire reasons by an English liberal 'planner', the Marquess of Stafford (later created Duke of Sutherland) who was horrified to find his wife's 'tenantry' living like Afghans in their huddled huts up the glens, and zealously removed them against their will but 'for their own good' to light industries in the coastal areas. The population of Sutherland increased during these Clearances from 23,117 in 1801 to 25,793 in 1851, but the methods adopted (unknown to the Sutherland family) by the factors in carrying out this 'redeployment' of 'local labour' were unnecessarily insensitive and bitterly oppressive. There is nothing such a planner understands less, nor is annoyed by more, than heart-felt 'sentimental reasons' for passionately wanting to go on doing what he in his Olympian certainty considers non-utilitarian, uneconomic or irrational. Scotland's loss was the Commonwealth's gain, as we are reminded in Andrew Dewar Gibb's Scottish Empire (London 1937). Mr. Ian Grimble, a sensitive and up-to-date researcher into these particular Clearances, said in a recent speech that Karl Marx had found them 'very much to the purpose as he rummaged about in the British Museum piling up evidence for Das Kapital'. The present writer, when he worked in Russia in 1946, observed Stalin's brutal 'Clearances' of whole nations like the Volga Germans and the Crim Tatars as an irony of history, since they were brought about ultimately by Marx.

Sir Gregor MacGregor of MacGregor, Chief of the Children of the Mist, a skilled mechanic and parachutist.

The Clearances in general took several forms. Some were not total evictions (and the distinction is not always sufficiently made in works on the subject) where the dispossessed had to leave the district for ever; but were instead examples of planning within a district, people being moved from black-houses in glens and resettled in other accommodation on another part of the same estate—rather like the 'slum clearances' carried out by modern town councils, often with equal harshness in the case of old folk naturally attached to their old homes, however decrepit. In other cases, chiefs who had struggled not to evict their clansmen fell so much into debt in the effort, that their creditors did it for them. Thus Lord Macdonald, a kindly chief who adhered to the patriarchal school, who had 'spent all his resources on the relief of destitution' among his people during the Potato Famine of 1846, found himself in the hands of his creditors, who formed themselves into a body of Trustees and forced him to clear part of North Uist: though he insisted on remitting arrears of rent, taking crop and stock at valuation, and himself paying to assist the resulting emigration. Another Clan Donald chief, MacDonell of Glengarry, who had been obliged by the Highland economic collapse to sell Invergarry and emigrate to Australia, wrote from the Antipodes during the Potato Famine to remit until better times all rent from his remaining tenants in Knoydart, for he looked on them 'less as tenantry than as children and followers': but his hard-faced Sassenach widow, less MacDonell-minded but equally hard-pressed for cash, afterwards went back on his wishes. Tragically enough, none of the coercion was really necessary, for the people would eventually have gone anyway, as they have done equally from the estates that never cleared.

In many cases, clansmen emigrated together, often led by a chieftain or even sometimes by their chief himself. Thus, in the middle of the eighteenth century, some of the Mackintoshes of Borlum (descended from the 16th Chief of Mackintosh) led 200 clansmen in an organised emigration to Georgia, where they were settled south of Savannah along the north bank of the Altamaha River, to act as a buffer between the English colonists and the Spaniards of Florida. From one of their leaders (through a later marriage to a charming Creek squaw) descends Waldo E. McIntosh, present Principal Chief of the Creek Nation: 20,000 redskins in Oklahoma and Indiana. A Macneil chieftain emigrated from Vatersay off Barra at the head of 370 Barra men in 1802, settling in America, whence his great-grandson returned as the then Chief of the Clan Macneil to restore their ancestral sea-girt stronghold. The Macnab, having negotiated with the Canadian authorities for a tract of some 81,000 acres in the New World, emigrated at the head of his clan to Canada. Here things went wrong tribally speaking, through his ignorance of Canadian as opposed to Scots law, when it came to the obvious point when a particular 'clever' clansman had to take him either for his natural patriarch or else for a 'testy tyrant'; indeed, much controversial research might be required to determine whether it was ever possible to transplant something of the pre-Culloden clan system to the New World, but commonsense tells us that it was doomed everywhere in its pristine forms. But a cousin and later chief, Sir Allan MacNab (1798–1862), became Prime Minister of Canada.

However, many reactionary chiefs and chieftains were horrified altogether by the Clearances. Struan Robertson refused to clear: now his heir has no land in Scotland and has to live in Jamaica. Mackenzie of Cromartie (heir of the forfeited Jacobite earl) not only refused to evict anyone—the County of Cromartie was formed from the family estates—but also sheltered and settled as many refugees as he could from the local evictions over his border (the 'Ross of Balnagowan' laird of his day was an interpolating Lowlander called Ross—ultimately 'de Roos'—in no way related to the old chiefs of the local Clan Ross). By an ironic somersault of history, the present talented and socially-conscious Countess of Sutherland is the descendant of the Cromartie who sheltered the victims of those Clearances. Other chiefs, like Lord Lovat, who disapproved of the clearances, improvised temporary shelter for refugees from elsewhere, until they could provide more permanent accommodation for them on another part of their estate. But in the end, nobody would endure the hardships of the high ground in a modern world, and the mountain-tops were left to their oldest inhabitants: the red deer and the ptarmigan.

Other clans met the economic crises in what can only be called a truly clannish way. The MacLeods typify this. In the late eighteenth century the whole MacLeod economy was in a state of collapse, for chief and clansmen alike. The 23rd Chief tried desperately to persuade his impoverished clansmen not to emigrate: 'besought them to love their young chieftain, and to renew with him the ancient manners . . . and promised to do everything for their relief which in reason I could'. They did love him, and the tacksmen of the clan came forward of their own accord and entered into a voluntary obligation to pay a 7½ per cent increase in rent, 'in the hope that it may enable MacLeod and his Trustees to re-establish his affairs and preserve the ancient possessions of his family . . . on condition that, as our principal motive for coming under the voluntary obligation is our attachment to the present MacLeod, to the standing of the family, and our desire of their estate being possessed entire, we shall be freed therefrom if we shall have the misfortune to lose him by death, or if any part of the estate be sold'. This just enabled the estate to be maintained, and they then made provision for an allowance to the MacLeod chief himself, but he would not accept it, preferring instead to join the Army and seek his fortune in prize money at war. He raised personally the 2nd Battalion of the Black Watch, becoming its first Lieutenant-Colonel, and soon rose to be Second-in-Command of the whole Indian Army, where he had many adventures. Thus had the clan saved their chiefly heritage.

The other side of the same coin was shown two generations later. The 25th Chief of MacLeod ruined himself 'in 1846 in his efforts to succour his people in the great Potato Famine. The potato was the staff of life of the greater part of the population of Skye at that time; and when the crop entirely failed for two years, more than two-thirds of the inhabitants were destitute. MacLeod of MacLeod and his wife laboured to help and encourage his people. He beggared himself in providing food and work for them, so that at the age of thirty-seven he had to take a junior post in the Home Office in London in order to support himself and his family; and it was only in his old age that he was able to live in Skye'. Meanwhile, Dunvegan Castle was 'stripped of all that could be sold, pictures, plate and furniture', to raise funds to feed his starving clansmen. Although he had had no legal obligation to do anything, Norman MacLeod of MacLeod had acted as a true Chief, and the Skye folk have never forgotten him.

Disaster after disaster struck the Highlands. For a while, in the first quarter of the nineteenth century, it seemed as though kelp might save the Western Isles and the mainland coastal districts. Kelp was the seaweed industry, introduced in 1765. Seaweed was exported to England as a rich fertiliser. Seaweed was also at first cut and burnt to produce soda. After 1823, when the Leblanc process was discovered in England, kelp was still used to produce iodine. It had subsidiary uses in the manufacture of soap and glass: and indeed the algae industry has been revived in the Hebrides today by Campbell-Preston of Ardchattan and Lochiel's brother, Colonel Charles Cameron—among the many modern by-products being, the writer understands, lovely red cherries for cocktails. The disadvantages of the kelp industry 150 years ago are said to have been that the seaweed was all taken up for industrial purposes, when previously it had been an essential source of agricultural manure, and that labour was similarly diverted from agriculture: but in fact when kelp failed, agriculture proved to be no adequate substitute. For a while, the Hebridean economy boomed. Macdonald of Clanranald (who has rather unfairly been accused of 'clearing' when in fact he moved some black-houses to another part of the estate in the course of landscape gardening) became prosperous enough—at one glorious moment, £18,000 a year in solid golden sovereigns—to join White's and to be fêted as 'Clanronald Macdonald' in Almack's: London's most exclusive night-club ever. Suddenly, he was broke. All had to be sold. He was gone. The new landlords began clearing at once. A sad saying was blown away in the wind: 'To whom shall I make my complaint, and no Clanranald in Moidart?'.

For, when the tariff protection that was saving the coastal economy was removed in the Whiggish interest of Free Trade, the last buttress of Hebridean life collapsed. Nearly two centuries before, the Brahan Seer had predicted that Nuair a bhitheas maor nan ordagan mora agus dall nan ceithir-meoraibh-fichead comhla ann am Barraidh, faodaidh MacNeill Bharraidh 'bhi deanamh deiseil na h-imirich: 'when the big-thumbed Sheriff-Officer and the blind man of the twenty-four fingers shall be together in Barra, Macneil of Barra may be making ready for the flitting'. And so it came to pass. The irascible General Roderick Macneil of Barra went bankrupt when the kelp industry failed as a result of the Government's Free Trade policy, a big-thumbed sheriff officer crossed over from South Uist (sharing the ferry with a well-known but decidedly unwelcome blind man who had twelve fingers and twelve toes) to serve the writ upon him, and in 1838 the island of his forefathers was taken from him and sold to absentee proprietors. Nothing the chiefs or the clansmen could do would suffice against the forces of economy when the Government (however objectively) was on the other side.

All this might have been the end of the clan idea, had not Pitt the Elder realised that the Highlands held an enormous reservoir of well-behaved martial men who were not being used. More than a century earlier, the Mackay chief Donald, 1st Lord Reay (commemorated in the beautiful MacCrimmon pibroch Domhnall Dual Mac Aoidh, 'Donald the Real Mackay') had raised a regiment of several thousand Highlanders first for the Danish Service, and then for the Swedish Service, to assist the Protestant Cause in the Thirty Years War. There was a Gaelic saying:

Na h-uile fear a theid a dholaidh
Gheibh e dolar o Mhic Aoidh

'Whoever is down on his luck, can still get a dollar (thaler) from Mackay.' The exemplary character of these Highland mercenaries is perhaps not sufficiently remembered. Monro's Expedition (London 1637) has many anecdotes shewing that their good conduct when billeted on civilians was as remarkable as their courage. At this period, the senior general of the Scottish mercenaries in the Swedish Service was one of the present writer's favourite forefathers, Field-Marshal Sandy Leslie, afterwards Earl of Leven (his mother was a Stewart girl in Rannoch), 'the old, little, crooked souldier' who issued and rigidly enforced a proclamation 'forbidding the firing of any dwelling-house, hewing down fruit trees, killing a yielding enemy, outrages on women, &c., and stating that "murther is no less intollerable in the time of War than in the time of Peace".' Throughout the rest of the seventeenth century and the first half of the eighteenth century other Mackays officered the Scots-Dutch Brigade in the service of the Netherlands, doubtless recruiting many of their men from their own clan territory. From 1704 to 1712 the Scots Guards had a Highland Company, who wore tartan and belted plaids, spoke Gaelic and were stationed at Inverness. This Highland Company Scots Guards was the first unit in the British Army to have a piper on their authorised establishment.

'The first quadrille at Almack's'. Left to right: the Marquess of Worcester, the Countess of Jersey, Clanronald Macdonald and the Marchioness of Worcester. Genealogically, the dancing figures are interesting, since three of them were natural scions of Blood Royal in the direct male line. Lord Worcester, though surnamed Somerset, was really a Plantagenet, sprung from Fulk of Anjou, King of Jerusalem, through King Edward III, knight-armoured victor of Crécy and Poictiers. Lady Worcester, surnamed FitzRoy, was a Stuart, ultimate outcome of King Charles II's sport with the Duchess of Cleveland. 'Clanronald Macdonald' (as Harriette Wilson calls the third dancer in this picture) came of a race less sophisticated but also more anciently royal, the line of Somerled, King of the Isles, slain by treachery in the twelfth century. Reginald George Macdonald, nineteenth Chief and Captain of Clanranald, was like Lord Worcester a member of White's and of Parliament.

By the Regency, Almack's (they say it was an anagram and that its founder's real name was MacCall) had become 'the seventh heaven of the fashionable world'. At ten golden guineas each, tickets for the weekly balls were almost unobtainable, as their distribution was determined by 'a feminine oligarchy less in number but equal in power to the Venetian Council of Ten'—Ladies Castlereagh, Jersey, Cowper, Sefton and Willoughby d'Eresby, with the Princesses Esterhazy and Lieven—the capricious lady-patronesses, who black-balled gaily and daily. This unbridled committee of women, two foreign ambassadresses among them, met weekly in their special 'blue chamber' at Almack's, to twist to their liking the social lives of such gentlemen as were in London during the season. Their coveted vouchers of admission were so much the talk of their generation, that in 1822 when Canning was given the Foreign Office with as ill a grace as possible by his reluctant king, George IV, the new Foreign Secretary compared it to receiving a ticket for Almack's, and finding written on the back, 'Admit the rogue'. And Captain Gronow of the First Guards, apparently himself in favour with the lady-patronesses, noted with some satisfaction that of the three hundred officers serving with the Foot Guards in 1814, only about half a dozen managed to secure tickets of admission. On one occasion, the Iron Duke of Wellington himself was turned away for trying to enter in trousers, sans culottes.

The great Atholl fiddler, Nathaniel Gow, greatest of Highland violinists, was often booked with his band to play at Almack's weekly subscription balls, where 'the highest life in London' danced reels and Scottish country dances to such tunes as Hamilton House and the two De'ils; while popular engravings of Raeburn's old Neil Gow (Nathaniel's father), fiddling briskly in his tartan trews, were hung up in several English country-house lavatories. Nathaniel Gow composed many lively or melancholy airs himself, and half a dozen collections of Scottish country-dance music published in the last century are prefaced by the advertisement 'As danced at Almack's'.

But towards the end of 1814, two new dances were introduced from the Continent: the waltz by Countess Lieven (thought at first rather shocking, as the partners were clasped in each other's arms instead of jigging separately, as in the old country dances and in popular present-day dances), and the quadrille by Lady Jersey. In that year, at the age of twenty-nine, the plain-spoken Lady Jersey (who had forty thousand a year) was at the height of feminine fashionable power; and it is significant of the extent to which Highland valour and Macpherson's Ossian and Sir Walter Scott's romances had made their mark on the world of fashion, that Lady Jersey should have been dancing her own special dance with Clanranald himself at what was to her perhaps one of the most important moments in her personal history.

Later, but still early in the eighteenth century, half a dozen Independent Companies, attached to no regiment, policed the Highlands as a Watch, called Black from their dark tartan to distinguish it from the ordinary redcoats: and in 1740 they were embodied together into the famous regiment still known as The Black Watch.

After the suppression of the 1745 Rising, Pitt saw the opportunity of raising Highlanders for military service in the wars abroad. Between 1757 and 1762, when peace was concluded with France, nine new Highland regiments were raised. Although penniless and landless, the Master of Lovat, for instance—styled only Fraser of Lovat since his father's execution but still Mac Shimi to his loyal clansmen—was able to raise 600 men of his own within a few weeks; his neighbours raised more men; and in 1757 'Colonel Fraser of Lovat' sailed for America in command of 1,460 men of the 78th Fraser's Highlanders, whom he led up the Heights of Abraham to the taking of Quebec, where Wolfe himself died in the arms of a Fraser Highlander. Ironically, the conquest of Canada removed the French menace from the American colonists, and thus indirectly led to the American War of Independence. Once again, the Government appealed to the Fraser chief, now 'General Fraser of Lovat' and restored to his ancestral lands; and in 1775 he raised 2,340 men for the 71st Fraser Highlanders, six other chiefs (including Mackintosh of Mackintosh himself) being amongst his officers: this regiment wore the red hackle long before the Black Watch established it as their own exclusive privilege.

A son of Colonel the Honble. Archibald Fraser of Lovat, wearing tartan about the time his father (with Lord Graham) had secured its restoration by Parliament in 1782. Late in life, Colonel Fraser of Lovat, the 18th Mac Shimi, formed the impression that he had become a turkey and, on arrival in his carriage on a visit to the Grants of Rothiemurchus, could not be induced to leave it as he was sitting on some eggs. However, like any other bird, he left them for a moment to relieve the calls of nature, whereupon the eggs were broken and some five chicks placed among them. Finding the eggs apparently hatched on his return, Lovat relaxed and was happily persuaded to enter the Grants' house.

Among the clan regiments to survive longest were the Seaforth Highlanders, raised in 1778 in Ross-shire and the Hebrides by the Mackenzie chief: the Cameron Highlanders, raised in 1793 in Lochaber by the Cameron chieftain of Erracht; the Gordon Highlanders, raised in 1794 in Badenoch and elsewhere by the Marquis of Huntly (some would say by the kiss given to each recruit by his mother, the fetching Duchess of Gordon); also the Argyll Highlanders, raised in 1794 in Argyllshire by the Campbell chief, and amalgamated in 1881 with the Sutherland Highlanders, who had been raised in 1800 in Sutherland and Ross-shire by the Countess of Sutherland's cousin, General Wemyss of Wemyss: this last regiment formed the gallant 'Thin Red Line' at Balaclava. These regiments were so much family and clan affairs, that between 1793 and 1827, for example, no less than eleven officers of the Cameron Highlanders were the sons, brothers, nephews or grandson of General Sir Allan Cameron of Erracht who originally raised the regiment.

The Government, however, continually broke its engagement promises to the private soldiers. This sometimes led to what the English called 'mutinies', usually settled by the good sense of the clan officers being combined with their chiefs' possession of what was then known as 'interest', that is the power to be heard by the officials of the Central Government. A typical example is perhaps that of the privates of the 2nd Battalion of the Black Watch, whom the Government (contrary to the terms of their enlistment) proposed in 1786 to draft into other units in India. Their Commanding Officer, the 23rd Chief of MacLeod, wrote immediately to the Commander-in-Chief: 'I have to observe to Your Excellency that this is the first time ever that this regiment was drafted, and that we were raised upon the idea of being exempted from that misfortune. My own Company are all of my own name and Clan, and if I return to Europe without them I shall be effectually banished from my own home, after having seduced them into a situation from which they thought themselves spared when they enlisted into the service . . . I must entreat Your Excellency to allow me to carry them home with me, that I may not forfeit my honour, credit, and influence in the Highlands, which have been exerted for His Majesty's service.' MacLeod's firm request was granted, but the rumours of Governmental ill-faith can have done no good to future recruiting.

When tartan and the kilt were banned—by the hated Dress Act of 1747, repealed through the efforts in Parliament of Montrose's and Lovat's heirs in 1782—only Government soldiers were allowed to wear Highland dress: though a number of civilian portraits shew us that the Act was not rigidly enforced after the first few years of Southron panic. Perhaps it is from those martial days that there still exists a convention that only black (and never brown) shoes are worn with the kilt. So far, the last of what might be called clannish regiments were the Lovat Scouts and their rivals the Scottish Horse, raised and commanded by Lord Lovat and by the Duke of Atholl's heir during the Boer War. The present Duke of Atholl's father was killed commanding the Scottish Horse in Italy during the Second World War; and the Scottish Horse regimental tie is black with gold stripes in threes, based on the gold and black paling of the Atholl coat-of-arms.

The achievements of the Highland regiments did much to win the Highlanders a national respect that has never waned. All the same, inter-clan feeling at the end of the eighteenth century was still vicious and bitter. Macdonalds hated Campbells, MacLeods feuded with Macdonalds, Mackenzies with MacLeods. Then came Sir Walter Scott, to whom Scotland in general and the Highlands in particular owe more (psychologically) than it's now fashionable to acknowledge. Sir Walter commanded the respect of Europe, indeed of the whole civilised world, and he used this position to make what had seemed squalid really picturesque. His magic made a silk purse out of our sow's ear. In his heroic prose—then a most unusual novelty—he suddenly took the meanness out of old Scottish feuds, and made them seem romantic in retrospect.

Sir Walter Scott was backed by King George IV, whom it is now so smart to mock, but who as our most sympathetic Sovereign since the seventeenth century gave Scotland back her rightful place at last. Everybody felt that somehow the King was the heir of the Jacobite as much as the Hanoverian tradition. And they were more right, even from the strictly legalistic point of view, than is now perhaps generally realised. Up to the Wars of Independence, it had been possible to be a 'man' of two or three different realms simultaneously; but by the fourteenth century it had become settled law (in both England and Scotland) that a person who was not born in the liegeance of the Sovereign, nor naturalised, could not have the capacity to succeed as an heir—he was in the strictest sense 'illegitimate', though not of course born out of wedlock. This legal incapacity of aliens to be heirs applied to all inheritances, whether honours or lands. The effect of the succession opening to a foreigner in Scotland was that, if he had not been naturalised or if his case was not covered by some special statute, the succession passed to the next heir 'of the blood', who thus became the only 'lawful' heir. It was of course always open to the Sovereign to confer an honour or an estate on a foreigner; the rule of law merely prevented aliens from being 'lawful heirs' to existing inheritances. In Scotland, this law was modified in favour of the French from the sixteenth century, but was otherwise rigorously applied until the Whig Revolution of 1688, after which it was gradually done away with by the mid-nineteenth century. It was precisely because of this law that Queen Anne found it necessary to pass a special Act of Parliament naturalising all alien-born potential royal heirs under her Act of Settlement of the throne. But of course, from the Jacobite point of view, no new statute could be passed after 1688, and the old law remained static until the death of the Cardinal York in 1807. At that time, his nearest heir in blood by the old (and therefore continuing Jacobite) law was not—as is sometimes supposed—the King of Sardinia, for the royal Sardine had not the legal capacity to be an heir in Scotland, unless naturalised (e.g: by marriage to the Sovereign) which he was not. The nearest lawful heir of the Cardinal York in 1807 was, in fact, curiously enough, King George III himself, who had been born in England (and therefore in the technical liegeance of James VIII). It is ironic that poor good King George, who has recently been proved not to have been mad at all, but to have suffered from an unusually acute form of a rare physical (and not at all mental) malady called porphyria that was unknowingly maltreated beyond the human breaking-point by his doctors, appears (according to even more recent research) to have inherited that disability from his Stuart ancestors, who fortunately suffered from this painful bodily toxin in a much milder form. However, his descendant, our present Queen, is the lawful Jacobite sovereign of this realm: as was Queen Victoria (who made her favourite home in Scotland) and King George IV before her.

The former bitterness of the old feuds became a 'joking relationship', and the revived War Gatherings became colourful Games. They were neither ignored nor suppressed, but simply changed from backwardness and bitterness into pageantry and fun. Those who seek to detribalise Africans in the beneficial interests of modernising their standard of living, might perhaps also consider their pride and, as Sir Walter did for us, adapt rather than abolish 'quaint' customs. Men will die for the Colours, but not for an extra ten bob a day. Nobody is burnt alive any more at the pagan fire festival still celebrated on All Hallow E'en, but the English get a lot of fun out of burning the effigy of poor Guy Fawkes (who shared the present writer's views about the value of Parliament) on the nearest available date. No longer is it an issue whether a job should go to a Macdonald or a Campbell, but each clan still enjoys its historic identity and cultivates its own roots. The annual Argyllshire Gathering at Oban makes no distant clan tremble lest the Campbells are Coming, but is instead an opportunity of visiting the Campbells and their former Maclean foes in surroundings of gaiety and colour.

The characteristic form of Scott's novels—the historical background, the straightforward hero, the kindly folk who help him, the lack of sex, the girl whose hand is eventually won like a school cup—has been continued by a series of Scottish writers through R. L. Stevenson, S. R. Crockett, Neil Munro (so closely related, we are told, to the ducal house of Argyll), D. K. Broster, John Buchan, Compton Mackenzie, and so to Nigel Tranter. Throughout their works, honour and decency are preferred to slickness and cynicism: and the Spirit of Caledonia is never debunked merely in order to lend the emphasis of shock to some ephemeral point. These are not, of course, ordinary portrayals of real everyday life: but stones on the cairn which represents so many many honourable Scotsmen, Highlanders and Lowlanders alike.

Sir Iain Moncreiffe of that Ilk, as Albany Herald and an Advocate, leaving the Parliament House in Edinburgh after attending a special sitting of Lyon Court.

By the second half of the nineteenth century, the clan as a method of social organisation had disappeared from Scotland. Opinionated judges, confronted with the simple question whether somebody inheriting a particular estate was a member of the Clan Chattan—a question as easily to be solved by any qualified expert as whether somebody belongs to the Transport & General Workers Union—waffled for a long time about clan warfare (as if 'children', which is what clan means, didn't equally exist in time of peace) and then held that the whole clan concept was no longer known to the law. But there was life in the old clans yet. Indeed, Lyon Court regards anyone who takes a clan surname as being as it were 'naturalised' into that clan, so that if he is granted Arms (the symbols of the Name) they will always allude to the basic coat borne by its chief. Clansmen at home sometimes tend to take their history for granted. But clansmen far afield in Glasgow or Birmingham, Toronto or Brisbane, Chicago or Wellington, can find in their history those roots that give them identity and distinguish them from being merely numbered ants in some enormous, though enormously useful, urban ant-hill.

In England and on the Continent, the feeling of belonging to a great historic family is too often confined to a limited aristocracy. Not so in Scotland. As the Countess of Erroll, hereditary Lord High Constable of Scotland and Chief of the Hays, wrote in 1964: 'In too many countries the great historic families are separated from the mass of the people, but in Scotland we have been fortunate in that pride of Name has never depended on wealth and rank, and in that the clan tradition has always prevented class barriers from arising to divide our proud nation. The fact that the Grahams have a ritual head in the Duke of Montrose and that Lords Huntly and Aberdeen are Gordons, in no way makes a Graham or a Gordon superior in class to their fellow Scots. In the same way, all the bearers of great Scottish Names share alike in their ancient traditions. It is this brotherhood within clan or Name which links all Scots together and is so marked a feature of our countrymen wherever they may be. We are all one family of Scots, the branches of that family being the clans and Names, and the Chief of Chiefs our Queen.' And Dame Flora MacLeod of MacLeod wrote in the Clan MacLeod Magazine that 'her dear clan family' is 'beyond and outside and above divisions between nations, countries and continents. . . . it takes no note of age or sex, rank or wealth, success or failure. The spiritual link of clanship embraces them all'.

The effective expression of this continuing clan sentiment was the establishment of the Clan Societies and the Clan Associations, a world-wide list of which many will be found in the World Directory of Scottish Associations (Johnson & Bacon, London, 1979). At the apex of this vast clan pyramid there is the Standing Council of Scottish Chiefs, which meets annually in the capital, and with whom the Queen, as Chief of Chiefs, had luncheon during a Royal Visit to Edinburgh some years ago. There are today about 1,700 Scottish Societies and Associations, with many branches at home, in Canada, Australia, New Zealand and the United States—indeed all over the World. An Comunn Gaidhealach keeps our Gaelic poetry and song alive in its Mod. The Scottish Tartans Society, with their Tartans Museum at Comrie in Perthshire, seek to gather under one roof all authoritative information about tartan; and the Lord Lyon King of Arms has an official Register of Tartans recorded by the various chiefs and chieftains. The 1745 Association keeps alive the memory of the gallant Jacobites who lost all for what they believed to be the rightful Cause. While overseas Scotsmen in general tend to join the local Caledonian Society or St. Andrews Society, those of Highland descent also belong to their own Clan Society—and recollect wherever they are the proud traditions of sea-wrack or heather, peat-fire or droving, feud or massacre, that gave their very names to the hills and glens where their forefathers made Highland history. In this way, the clan society fulfils a social and indeed emotional function. For it transcends religion and politics, class and status, success and failure, bringing as their natural right to all clansmen everywhere all the regal pride and historic colour that so justly surround the tartan.

Decanter specially designed by a craftsman of the Scottish Crafts Centre and presented by Sir Edward Reid to the Clan Donnachaidh Society. It is engraved with the coat-of-arms of Struan Robertson, Chief of the Clan Donnachaidh. His supporters, the Serpent and Dove, allude to the clan's belonging to the Kindred of St. Columba, through their descent in the direct male line from King Duncan [slain by Macbeth], son of Crinan, hereditary Abbot of Dunkeld.

-oc (later -og and -ag). This was commonly used in Old Irish in forming diminutives and the custom was followed in Scots Gaelic, but the surviving examples are few in number. (See under -an.) -oc was masculine originally but now -ag, its descendant, is feminine only. From the Old Irish period -oc, borrowed at an early stage from Welsh -awc, is common in the affectionate forms of names of saints, especially in reduced forms, e.g. MoChoemoc from Coemgin. Final -oc in early mss. has sometimes been misread -ot.

ou. In Gaelic border names ou is for English w, as Macouat for Macwatt.

s. Initial s in Gaelic names is eclipsed by t of the definite article, as in Mac an t-saoir "Macintyre," Mac an t-sagairt "Mactaggart."

th. In Gaelic names th is often a mere phonetic device for dividing syllables, as cathag "jackdaw," pronounced ca-ag. Latharn or Latharna, Lorne.

The Surnames of Scotland
Their Origin, Meaning, and History

By George F. Black, Ph. D.

AASIE, AASSIE, diminutives of Oswald and Asmund, are now represented in Shetland by Hosea in the surname HOSEASON, q.v., pronounced Osieson or Ozieson.

ABBIE. A surname derived from the office or title of lay-abbot of a monastery. In the early Middle Ages the abbot of a monastery usually belonged to a leading family of the district, and in that family the office was hereditary. "In course of time this system gave rise to great abuses; the monastery grew rich in lands, and the energies of the abbot, or some other leading officer, were directed to temporal rather than spiritual management. In fact, latterly, he became a mere layman, holding the abbacy in his family by direct descent, and, delegating his clerical duties to a monk, he himself took to rearing a family in which the monastic lands were hereditary" (Macbain, Scoto-Celtic studies, p. 69). That these 'abbots' were considered as merely laymen is shown, e.g., in the charter by Turpin, bishop of Brechin, referred to below, in which the prior, Bricius, at the time really a clerk, has precedence over Douenaldus (Donald) Abbe. This Douenaldus Abbe de Brechin witnessed a charter by Turpin, bishop of Brechin, c. 1178–1180 (RAA., I, p. 134), and sometime between 1204 and 1211 he gifted the 'Dauach qui vocatur Balegillegrand' to the Abbey of Arbroath, which grant was confirmed by William the Lion (ibid., p. 49, 50). Maurice Abbe of Abireloth or Abereloth appears as witness in charters by Gilchrist, earl of Angus and of John de Mountfort between 1201 and 1214 (ibid., p. 29–32, 47). The family of this Maurice must have taken its origin from the lay abbots of a Celtic monastic foundation near by, "probably established by St. Drostan, with whose name the primitive Christianity of the district is associated" (PSAS., LXV, p. 118). Between 1211 and 1214 Johannes Abbe with the advice and consent of his son Morgund granted to the monks of Abirebroth (Arbroath) permission to take charcoal from 'nemore meo de Edale,' now Edzell (ibid., p. 48). Among the witnesses are 'Morgundo filio meo, Malcolmo fratre, Johanne filio meo.' The same John Abbe and Morgund his son were present at the perambulation of the boundaries of the lands of the Abbey of Arbroath and the barony of Kynblathmond in 1219 (ibid., p. 163). Nicholas Abbe appears as juror on an inquest in 1250 (ibid., p. 190), Simon del Abbeye, Scottish merchant, complained in 1370 of being plundered by English wreckers (Bain, IV, 164), and Arthur Abbay, shipmaster of Carrail in 1613, was probably the father of John Abay, skipper of Carrail in 1635 (Wedd., p. 237; RPC., 2. ser. VI, p. 572).

ABBOT. Alexander Abbot is in record as a witness in Glasgow c. 1290 (REG., p. 200). In the year 1306 Sir John Abbot, dean of Fife and Fothyrrife, was ordered by the bishop to sequestrate the fruits of the provostry of Aberdeen (Bain, II, 1822). Alexander Abbot witnessed an instrument of sasine in Leith in 1548 (Soltre, p. 113), and another Alexander Abbot signed the Band of Dumfries in 1570 (RPC., XIV, p. 66). It is probable that in some instances this name is a shortened translation of MACNAB, which in Gaelic means "son of the abbot" (Mac an aba).

Bardsley says that in England Abbot and Abbott are from Abb, diminutive of Abraham with additional diminutive suffix -ot, and that "it is all but certain that the majority of our Abbotts, although bearing a conventual title, are thus descended." As a diminutive of Abraham the name is found in Ireland at least as early as beginning of fourteenth century (Woulfe), but I have found no instance of such use in Scotland.

ABBOTSON. A sept said to be connected with the clan Macnab. If so the name is merely a translation of MACNAB, q.v.

ABBOTTOUN. Gilbert Abbottoun in Tippartie, parish of Fordoune, in 1619 (St. Andrews), doubtless derived his surname from the lands of Abbottoun (1625) in Kincardineshire.

ABE. Diminutive of Ebenezer, in Roxburghshire pronounced Ebé.

ABEL, ABLE. This was a not uncommon personal name in the Middle Ages, derived from the Biblical Abel, Hebrew Hebhel, a name of uncertain meaning, but usually interpreted "breath." Master Abell, clericus regis, was one of the members of a mission sent to England to ask restoration of the earl-

1 - "By tradition [this family] originated in Wales. The name is Cornish-British, which is a dialect of the Celtic, Belgic or Cambrian formerly spoken throughout Cornwall." (a)

2 - "In the roll of early New England settlers occurs in 1640 the name of David Selleck. It is claimed that the first provision for a free school in the western world, by direct tax, was made in Dorchester, Mass., in 1639. David Selleck ... was one of the subscribers to a petition to that effect. David and Susanna Selleck, his wife, were members of the 1644 First Church of Boston, and the births of their children are recorded in that ancient town. Among the antiquities of Boston is found the 'David Selleck home lot description.' Mr. Selleck was engaged in trade between the Colonies and the Barbadoes. He died while on an expedition, in 1654, to Virginia." (a) "When he died in 1654, he left 'a fair estate in sum, yet very little beyond debts.'" (b)

3 - "Went to the Barbadoes" (a) "Probably continued [his father's] Caribbean trade, for there is a record of his being in Barbados in 1663." (b)

4 - "He became a wealthy ship owner and captain, and was extensively known in early days. He was taken prisoner by the French [on one of his ocean trips [to England (a)]] in May, 1689, but his estate, which was large, was not settled until 1708." (a)

(a) Norwalk, Rev. Charles M. Selleck, 1896, Doc. Sec 39-Leg 407

1- "Isaac Selleck 2nd, father of the present (Selleck Brothers) was a man of exceptional physical power. In his younger days he assisted Henry Selleck in laying the still seen foundation walls — lane and house — of the latter's East Avenue (now Osborn) brick dwelling, and made no point of coming from and returning to New Canaan before and after his day's work. He industriously served his generation and earned his enjoyed later life rest. With his cousin Henry he was of strong New England stock, and lived to a good age. Both Westchester men chose Norwalk for their home, where they left families" (a)

2- Of Blair, Nebraska. Had a child who died young and a daughter Gertrude. (a)

3- Sarah Waterbury Selleck "was the grandmother of the recent (Selleck Brothers) (Isaac, Geo. W., Henry S., a firm of Norwalk business repute) and Frank, and great-grandmother of the late young Clarence (son of Geo. W.) Selleck, whose art sketches and published letters while abroad were indicative of present attainment, and argued much of promise for the future." (a)

1 - "Clarence ... was a young man of high promise. He was fond of foreign travel, and his published correspondence, as well as clever art reproductions of scenery abroad, stamp him as having been a youth of rare tastes and accomplishments. His early demise was greatly lamented, but his noble character is a grateful remembrance."

1- Entered Emanuel College, Cambridge, 1613; received A.B. in 1616 and A.M. in 1620. He soon thereafter received orders and became chaplain in a family that was connected with the Bacons and Townsends of Norfolk and continued in that position three years. He was afterward settled as a colleague with Mr. Price at King's Lynn in the same county. He remained three years at Lynn, but complaints being made to the Bishop of Norwich of his nonconformity in administering the services of the Church, he removed to the Rectory of Skirbeck, near Boston. Here his nonconformity was also complained of, and this led to his emigration to the American colonies. He arrived in Boston, Mass., on May 26, 1636, and in the following November went to Lynn, Mass., where he was the minister until his death there. (c)

2- William Whiting says: "By his first wife he had two sons and one daughter. His wife and sons died in England, his daughter was subsequently married to Mr. Thomas Welde, son of Rev. Thomas Welde of Roxbury [Conn.]." (d)

Dear Dave,

Your letter came to Port Ludlow, WA, via Minneapolis as planned yesterday. As usual, I couldn't wait to see if I had anything. I really didn't think I would have anything, especially here. Most of my other genealogists' lines are in Minneapolis. However, I looked at what I had and found nothing. I haven't worked on my Whiting line for some time and couldn't remember any Josephs. Well, I was really amazed to find a Joseph who just might turn out to belong to Virginia!!! Wouldn't that be a thrill - for me too!!

Virginia Selleck

I am sending you pages from my book, History of Billerica, Massachusetts, by the Rev. Henry A. Hazen, A.M., 1883. Although nothing is conclusive, I think you will agree that this Joseph Whiting is a distinct possibility. First of all, his birth date corresponds to the "guessed" date for him. Then the insert that he was out of the province in 1718 when his father's estate was settled, makes it possible for him to be living in Conn. Another hopeful sign is that there is a William Haile (Hail, Hale, Haill, all used in same book). That name could have ended up Halley. Unfortunately, William died without issue, but he might have had relatives around. He married Anna Case in Charleston, MA. Might look for Hailes there.

I am sending you other materials, including the pertinent sheets that Josie Cobb sent me when she was able to connect my Ziba Whiting, b. 25 May 1764, clear back to Samuel[1] and his father, John. Please note: In the book, Samuel[1] is actually Samuel[2] in my pages. As you see, the book calls my Samuel[1], Rev. Samuel Whiting of Lynn. It is also confusing about John Whiting, esq., mayor of Boston, in England, and brother of..., since the Rev. Samuel Whiting of Lynn had both a father and a brother who served as mayors of Boston, Eng. I hope I am not confusing you. I think this entire paragraph of the book is misleading and takes some real sorting out.

There is nothing more in the book about Joseph, just as there was nothing more about my Ziba. Luckily, I already had Ziba's complete birth date, and the anme was so unusual that I had a positive link. But it does give you a new place to search the records. A marriage record would certainly be nice, wouldn't it? I will send all the pages in the Geneal. Register from the book, in case I am missing something. I am not going to copy concerning the coming of the Rev. Samuel Whiting to be the pastor of Billerica, etc., unless you find this is the correct Joseph or unless you want it. The book is in the Minn. Historical Society Library(and at the university library too, I believe). The reprint, which I have, is available. It is 590 pages, large print, $55 plus $1.00 postage. 10 weeks allowed for deliver, as book is hard-covered bound at time of ordering. HIGGINSON GENEALOGICAL BOOKS, 14 Derby Square, Salem, MA 01970. MC & Visa, if interested. I will be happy to xerox, but if things work out, this is an intriguing book.

Virginia will be extremely ofrtunate if this is her line. There is much material on Samuel[1], b. 20 Nov 1597 as he was a prominent minister.

If you find you want what I have, let me know. It is his wife, Elizabeth St. John, whose line is proven back past Charlemagne and William the Conqueror. I have that book at home also. The title is something like Sixty Colonists. It is only in the last edition that the line was absolutely proven when they followed a different ancestry. I also have the lines for Dorcas Chester, further than Leonard Chester, I think.

Anyway, David, I thought I should send you what I had available now. We have two sets of company coming, and I am going back to Minneapolis for a friend's wedding in between. So I need to stop everything to get ready. My trip will be hurried to Mineapolis, and I don't think Iwill have time for anything extra. But, be assured that I will find what I can for you as soon as possible. At least I have given you something to search for - a new area. Incidently, Josie Cobb has given me all she has on the Whitings, so I can see that you get all you need without bothering her.

Good luck on the genealogy. Let me know if you find anything, and I will see how I can help.

Best regards,

Sue (Lucile A. Slocum)

Lucile Adamson Slocum

(I'm still Sue as far as you are concerned, but I thought I would sign off as I do with other genealogists. They would have a hard time finding Sue Slocum in any genealogy, and I don't want to confuse anyone.)

My line is: John Whiting, Mayor, Boston, Eng.
Samuel^{1} Whiting Sr.
Samuel^{2} Whiting Jr.
Oliver^{1}
Oliver^{2}
Jonathan
Ziba
Samuel Bowers Whiting
Frederick Shearer " Fred Shearer "
Helen Hope Whiting (Adamson)
Lucile Adamson (Slocum)

By the way, I enjoyed getting Virginia's full line. My least complete line is Ziba. I have some dates, the name of his wife, Anna Bowers, but have no names of children except for Samuel Bowers. I did finally find a census record for Maine and Pennsylvania, so I know something about the size of their family. But I am not complaining. I feel very lucky.

Maybe estate records of Samuel^{3}, b. 19 Jan 1662-3, could give some more information on Joseph???

Dear Sue,

That was a most exciting and prompt letter you wrote, and I must respond right away, even though I haven't absorbed it all and analyzed everything carefully. I really think you are right and that the Joseph you discovered is the one we're looking for. But, of course, that will have to be confirmed with other records.

In my first reading of the History of Killeria pages I note that the Whitings did have Connecticut connections. Duncan Chester was born in Wethersfield. At any rate, as you said, I have some new directions to go in my research. I'll keep you informed of my discoveries I make.

That's all I have time for now, but I wanted to thank you and let you know the material arrived safely.

Yours sincerely,

Dave

Dear Sue,

I thought you might be interested in the enclosed item about Slocums I came across in the Devon Family Historian. No doubt some of Stanley's relatives are in her records.

I'm also enclosing some U.K. stamps, in case you don't have any to send to Mrs. Beard.

Hope all is going well with you and Stan this summer. We're looking forward to a visit from John and Virginia and their 1-yr. old daughter Rebecca over the Labor-Day weekend.

Sincerely,
Dave Witheridge

Tree Talks Vol.23 No.3 September 1983 CNYGS 35

During the summer of 1982 a survey was made of some libraries and historical agencies which were noted as having special genealogical collections. This survey was limited, in the main, to central and western New York counties. All replies received will be reported in Tree Talks. Absence of a report from an individual or institution does not mean that a reply was withheld; it may indicate an oversight of the surveyor. Additions are welcome and will be reported in future issues of Tree Talks.

Questions in the survey letter were: what kinds of records can researchers use if they come to your facility; what services, if any, can they write for; and what are charges for services, if any.

NIAGARA COUNTY

County Historian's Office, Civil Defense Building, Niagara Street, Lockport, NY 14094. Richard Reed, county historian.

Records: inventory of county cemeteries; poorhouse account books; almshouse inmates; town tax records; school district records 1817- ; state and federal censuses 1790-1892; voluminous indexing including some 55,000 vital records taken from newspapers, diaries, letters, church records, etc.

These census records have been transcribed and indexed in the historian's office: federal 1810, 1820, 1830, 1840, 1850, 1860, and state 1855, 1865, 1875 and index to 1892.

Niagara County Genealogical Society, 2650 Hess Rd., Appleton, NY 14008.

An active group founded in 1979, it publishes Niagara County Genealogical News, $5.00 per year. Cannot research for non-members but will help members with genealogical problems. Printed a resume, "Information Available in Niagara County." Now indexing Glenwood Cemetery (1982).

ONONDAGA COUNTY

Local History and Genealogy Department, Onondaga County Public Library, 335 Montgomery St., Syracuse, NY 13202. Gerald J. Parson, head.

Records:
State census: 1825 Cortland (on cards), Jefferson (typed ms.); 1855 Broome, Cayuga, Delaware, Jefferson, Madison (index), Tioga, Yates; (incomplete: Chautauqua, Chemung, Chenango, Franklin, Niagara, Steuben, Washington); 1865 Chenango, Onondaga (part missing -- Camillus through DeWitt); 1875; 1892; 1905; 1915 (part missing); 1925 Onondaga Federal census: 1800-1880 Connecticut, Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Vermont; 1830-1880 New Jersey; 1790-1880; 1890 special census of Civil War veterans and widows; 1900; Soundex for 1880 New York

Revolutionary War pension records: National Archives selected records
Pioneer index of over 30,000 persons in Onondaga County before 1850
Cemetery records, almost complete for Onondaga County and Cayuga County Directories: Syracuse 1851 to date; Onondaga County 1868, 1878, 1881, 1887, 1891, 1896, 1899, 1917 (business and/or farm directories)
A few towns, mostly 20th century
Various church records
Index to magazine articles, mostly genealogical Vermont vital records to 1870
30,000 cataloged books and manuscripts
9,600 local New York state histories
Mortality schedules for New York State 1850, 1860, 1870 (on microfilm)
Index in preparation to all cemetery inscriptions appearing in books, magazines and the department's manuscript collection.

Services: open 8:30-4:30, Monday through Saturday. Visiting researchers have first priority. Genealogical research cannot be done, but certain indexes will be checked. Mail is very heavy and there is always a backlog.

Mr. Parson, long-time head of the department, is a Fellow of the American Society of Genealogists and revised the chapter on research in upstate New York for its new edition of Research Methods and Sources I.

George Arents Research Library, Syracuse University, Syracuse, NY 13210. Ms. Carolyn A. Davis, manuscripts librarian.

The purpose of the Manuscripts Division is to "process materials and make them available to graduate students and professional researchers."

Records: Methodist Manuscript Collection covers Methodism in central New York State 1808 to 1916. It includes records of six conferences: Black River, Central New York, East Genesee, Oneida, Wyoming and immorality trials of Oneida Conference ministers 1830-1870. Fifty-three manuscript volumes contain records of individual churches and clergymen, e.g., James Erwin's Circuit Book 1855-1865, Owasco Methodist Church Register Book 1840-1881.

Some records from other denominations are held, notably: First Dutch Reformed Church of West Glenville 1814-1953; First Presbyterian Church of Auburn 1802-1912; First Baptist Society, Groton, no dates.

Inventory of collection runs to many pages of which the above are merely samples. Inclusive dates of the collection are 1799 to 1947.

Services: open 8:30 - 5:00, weekdays. You are urged to call ahead for appointments (315-423-2093). If you wish to write, the staff does no genealogical researching, but if you send a name or the name and location of a church, a quick check of the main files will be made. No check of all inventories can be made. There is no complete index to church registers.

Charges: no charge for a "quick yes or no answer."

Onondaga Historical Association, 311 Montgomery St., Syracuse, NY 13202.

Records: extensive holdings of records of county towns, churches, schools, cemeteries, businesses, etc. Indexing of printed and manuscript material. Now handicapped by lack of staff and space. In the process of moving part of its collection. Researchers hope that the Association will find a way to make its rich resources again available.

ONTARIO COUNTY

Ontario County Historical Society, 55 North Main St., Canandaigua, NY 14424. Mrs. Jessie Terwilliger, genealogy researcher.

Records: marriages and deaths from local newspapers 1790-1880; many collections of family papers, business and association records, governmental records such as justices' dockets, tax lists, Civil War records; school militia records; and much more.

Services: open 1-5, Tuesday through Saturday. At present (1982) Mrs. Terwilliger will research without charge in various indexes: wills, deeds, immigration records; census if town is known for 1850 through 1892; marriages and deaths noted above; cemeteries, if town is known; files of biographies, correspondence and miscellaneous records.

OSWEGO COUNTY

No records or services from county historian in 1982.

Waterloo Library and Historical Society, Waterloo NY, 13165.

The correspondent says that they will research for you as "[o]ur material is scattered and housed in several different areas." They must insist on postage and reimbursement for any copying, and a donation is always appreciated. Located at county seat.

Seneca Falls Historical Society, 55 Cayuga St., Seneca Falls, NY 13148.

Records: material pertaining to families, over 300 surnames; local newspaper, with partial surname index to marriages and deaths; papers of Diedrich Willers, local historian, which contain correspondence with local families to gather genealogical backgrounds.

Services: open 9-12 and 1-4, weekdays except Wednesday. Call before you visit to be sure someone is on hand (315-568-8412). The museum welcomes researchers.

Editor's note: This was used to help plan an Ash family reunion in the Pittsburgh area, most likely in summer 1979 (based on my presence with Virginia Selleck; we weren't married yet. Also see Virginia Holland, who had a "baby due 7/79"). Tom Witheridge, July 26, 2021 (DEW added "See Se 42" to document calendar 1,59b at the entry for this document. See also Se 30.)

houses, one of which he built, in Wilkins township, with two and a half acres of land. He has served as inspector of elections, and is now school director, and acts with the republican party. He and Mrs. Church are members of the M. E. Church, and he is associated with the following benevolent orders: I. O. O. F., K. G. E. and K. P. Jan. 1, 1855, Mr. Church married Mrs. Annie Rogers, who died in 1867, leaving five children, of whom four are now living: Annie L., wife of David Gilchrist, of McKeesport; Charles R., of Turtle Creek; Emma L., wife of John McKeever, of Reynoldton; Harry, Turtle Creek, and Carrie, who died at four years of age. In 1868 Mr. Church married Mrs. Hannah Dempsey, who bore him two children—Jacob O. (died when three years old) and Susan Melinda—and died June 5, 1873. Mr. Church next married Maggie Vaughn, and they have one son living—William Alexander McIntosh.

SAMUEL MCGOGNEY, M. D., Castle Shannon, was born Feb. 20, 1856. His grandfather, John McGogney, came to Jefferson township, this county, in an early day, and attained the age of one hundred and three years and three months. His son, David, the father of Dr. McGogney, was born in 1800, and died in 1871. He married Margaret Bradshaw, who survived him, and they became the parents of twelve children. Of these Samuel, the youngest, was educated in this county and at Washington and Jefferson College. He read medicine with Dr. C. H. Black, of McKeesport, attended lectures at Jefferson Medical College in Philadelphia, and graduated in the class of 1879. He located in Castle Shannon, where he has built up a good practice. The doctor married Nannie C., daughter of William Young, and they have three children: Jessie May, William H. and Paul R. Dr. McGogney is a member of the I. O. O. F. and K. of M; he is a republican.

THOMAS B. BRIDGES, contractor, Homestead, was born Nov. 25, 1853, in Pittsburgh, Pa., a son of Robert Bridges, a native of Ohio. Robert was an engineer on the Ohio river, a popular and highly esteemed man, was considered one of the most skillful engineers of his day, and regarded as an authority. Thomas B. was educated in Pittsburgh, and at the age of nineteen engaged in teaming, dealing in building material, and contracting, in Braddock, which he has followed successfully to the present time. He came to Homestead in 1881, and entered upon the same business here. In Braddock he married Lena Eisenberger, and they have five children: Oliver, Rosa, Adda, Helen and Florence. He is a member of the R. A., and is a republican.

WILLIAM GRAPER, itinerant merchant, postoffice Carrick, was born in October, 1836, in Uchte, Hanover, Germany, a son of John Graper. He came to America in July, 1860, and for a time worked at whatever he could find to do, draying for a time in Pittsburgh. In 1864 he turned his attention to huckstering in this county, and during the last twenty years has lived in Baldwin township, where he has a property of thirty-six acres, upon which he has built a very pretty home. Mr. Graper here married Dorothea Yoshert, a native of Germany, and they have four children: Elizabeth (wife of Emil Schultz), Minnie (wife of Walter Hays), John H. and Harry F. Mr. and Mrs. Graper are members of the Lutheran Church. He is a republican, and has been a successful man.

CHRISTIAN H. GASS, farmer, postoffice Perrysville, was born July 18, 1843, in Allegheny City. His grandfather, Jacob Gass, a native of Switzerland, and a gardener, immigrated to America in 1812 with his wife, Elizabeth, and seven children: Jacob, John, Fred, Sebastian, Elizabeth, Anna and Sally. He was a member of the Smithfield Street G. L. Church. Jacob Gass, Jr., was a farmer, a carpet and coverlet weaver, and farmed and gardened where the P. & Ft. W. R. R. depot in now located in Allegheny. He married Amelia Bittenbring, and became the father of eight children: John, Jacob, Christian H., Mary, Margaret, Elizabeth, Sarah and Caroline. Of these Christian H. was educated in Allegheny, learned gardening and farming, and now owns a farm of fifty-six acres. He married Rachel E. Huch, and has four children: Henry, Amelia, Edward V. and Oliver. Mr. and Mrs. Gass are members of the Presbyterian Church, of which he is trustee. Politically he is a republican.

CHARLES JEFFERSON SELLECK, gardener, postoffice Hulton, was born Jan. 1, 1838, in Erie, Pa., a son of Joseph Whiting and Mary Ann (Casper) Selleck. His father was born in Syracuse, N. Y., Dec. 14, 1799, and died in 1858; he was one of the old pioneers of Erie, and for many years was a teacher of music, day school and penmanship, in his last days following gardening. His mother was born in December, 1812, and died in 1876. They were members of the Episcopal Church. Mr. Selleck was educated in the Erie Academy and the west ward school. At the age of twenty-one he enlisted in the U. S. navy, on the ship Conestoga, carrying six guns. He served one year, and the next year enlisted on the Silver Lake, and participated in the battle of Nashville; he was discharged Aug. 19, 1865. Returning to Erie county, he learned the cooper's trade, which he followed twelve years at Erie, Oil City, Titusville and Pittsburgh. Since then he has been engaged in the garden business in Verona. He was married, in 1868, to Mary R. Shade, of Coleman, this county. They have seven children, named as follows: Charles Francis, Harry Vincent, George Whiting, Emma Blanche, Milley, Willis and Ralph, all at home. The family are members of the M. E. Church; politically Mr. Selleck is a republican.

MRS. MARY E. KINKAID, farmer, postoffice Elizabeth, is a daughter of E. E. and E. E. (McKnight) Barter, and was born in Iowa. She removed with her parents to

Dear Sir or Madame:

A relative of mine, Joseph W. Sellack (a gardener and later a teacher) and his wife, Mary Ann (Casper) Sellack, lived in Erie in the 1800's. We are not sure, but we think they both died in Erie. The death of Mr. Sellack is given in one record as Jan. 3, 1868, and in another as 1858. The death of Mrs. Sellack is given as Jan. 14, 1876.

If you have copies of Erie newspapers from that period, I should greatly appreciate your checking to see if there are obituaries for either or both of these persons. Enclosed is a $2.00 check to pay for copies if you find them. I am also enclosing a stamped, self-addressed reply envelope. Thank you very much for your assistance.

Yours sincerely,

be obtained in the district school where he resided and from select schools in the village of Holland, which he attended in the autumn, between the terms of the summer and winter district school. May 11, 1874, he commenced clerking in the store of Morey & Stickney, where he worked three months for his board, after which he received $10 per month for some time, and by strict attention to business he received promotion. Mr. Morey retired in two years and Mr. Jackson borrowed $1,000 and formed a partnership with Mr. Stickney, under the firm name of Stickney & Jackson, which partnership continued for seven years, when Mr. Stickney became superintendent of the Erie Penitentiary, selling his entire interest in their two stores, one at Holland, the other at Protection, N. Y., to Mr. Jackson. In 1888 Mr. Jackson suffered the loss of his Holland store by fire, but nothing daunted, he immediately opened up business in the large dining room of the Lowry House, closing out the stock rescued from the fire and continuing there until his large store was completed and ready for occupancy. Since then, by his energy and thrift, he has helped to inaugurate a sound system of water works in Holland, by taking about one-third of the capital stock of $10,000. He is now president of the company and largely through his efforts the Bank of Holland was established, he having been president since its organization in 1893. He was postmaster four years under Harrison's administration. In 1895 was elected to the office of supervisor for two years and re-elected in March, 1897. Mr. Jackson is a prominent Mason, Odd Fellow, Maccabee and a member of the Order of the Iroquois. He is largely interested in real estate, owning property in Holland, Colden, pine lands in Mississippi and a large farm in South Dakota. He is also interested in the Rochester Loan and Savings Association. January 12, 1881, he married M. Zina Vaughan, step-daughter of John O'Riley, and they have three daughters, Mabel, Isabel and Annabel.

Kimball, Delos W., Holland, son of James and Esther (Wheelock) Kimball, was born in Holland, N. Y., May 13, 1831. James Kimball, father of Delos W., was a native of Vermont and was one of the early settlers of Erie county, coming to Holland in 1816, when there were no roads and the country was an unbroken wilderness. Delos Kimball received his education in Holland, after which he was married, in 1853, to Lucretia Davis. In the spring of 1854 he, with his young wife, moved to Illinois, where he was in the employ of his uncle, Mr. Wheelock, who was the proprietor of a large paper mill, and remained there two and a half years. September 9, 1855, a son, Frank, was born to them, and Mrs. Kimball died in the November following. In the fall of 1866 Mr. Kimball returned to Holland and settled on the farm he now owns, and in 1865 he married Mrs. Hall, a widow lady living in Holland. Mr. Kimball is the owner of 340 acres of well improved land and makes a specialty of dairying; he is also a large grain grower, and one of the most progressive farmers in Holland. Mr. Kimball has served six years as assessor of the town of Holland; he was elected first in 1887; his first three years as assessor must have been satisfactory to the taxable inhabitants of Holland or he would not have been liable to have gained his re-election in the year 1890.

Selleck, Horace E., Holland.—The paternal grandfather of Mr. Selleck was Thaddeus Selleck, and the maternal grandfather was Moses Randell, born in Massachusetts, and died in Holland, N. Y., in 1871, aged eighty-one years. The father of Mr. Selleck was Jonas Selleck, born in Warren county, N. Y., and died in Holland in 1886, aged seventy-four years. His wife was Annie E. Randell, born in Warren county, N. Y., in 1832, by whom he had three children: Achsah A., born in 1849 and died in 1872; Horace E., born May 2, 1851, and Randell J., born in 1883. Mr. Selleck received his education in the common schools of Queensbury, Warren county. He moved to Holland in March, 1868, and commenced business for himself, purchasing a part of the Humphrey farm of sixty acres, where he resided for three years; he then purchased a lot containing a planing mill, built a house and manufactured garden rakes, hoes, forks, planing and matching lumber, etc. He is a member of Holland Lodge No. 631, I. O. O. F. For his first wife he married Delilah Hunt, born in Holland in 1853 and died in 1889, by whom he had two children, Belle and Frank. Belle married William W. Spalding. Mr. Selleck married for his second wife Catharine Losell, who was born in 1864. Mr. Selleck represents the following fire insurance companies: the Ætna, Orient and Phœnix of Hartford, and the Niagara of New York.

Stanton, B. M., Holland.—The Stantons trace their genealogy back to Thomas Stanton, the first one in America, in 1635; the progenitors were from England. B. M. Stanton's grandfather, Samuel Stanton, was a native of Mt. Vernon, Pa., and his father, Abel Morse Stanton, was born June 30, 1805, at Mt. Pleasant, Pa., and died March 24, 1852, at Hamlinton, McKear county, Pa. Abel Stanton married Sarah Scott (born in September, 1819) in 1837, and they had six children: Wilbur Fisk, born in 1839, died in 1841; Alpha Seaver, born October 6, 1840, died August 5, 1891; Beverly Milton (the subject), born July 9, 1842; Almond Fletcher, born in 1844, and died in 1846; Clarence Welborne, born April 25, 1846, and Helena Calista, born August 16, 1851. B. M. Stanton was reared on a farm and at the age of nineteen, May, 1861, enlisted in Co. F, 35th Regt. N. Y. Vols., and served two years, being discharged June 5, 1863. After the war was over he worked in Steuben county, N. Y., and Blossburg, Pa., until 1876, when he moved to Holland, N. Y., where he is now engaged as engineer for A. Rumsey & Co., and the U. S. Leather Company. He is a member of six secret societies, having held prominent offices in several. January 1, 1864, he married Adeline Monroe of Rathbonville, Steuben county, N. Y., and they had one daughter, Carrie M. Stanton, born September 19, 1866, and died January 11, 1879, in Holland, N. Y.

Savage, Dexter, Holland, is the son of John and Sarah Savage, who were natives of New Hampshire, and came to Erie county in 1838, settling in Holland. Mr. Savage received his education from the district schools, and at the close of his school life engaged in moving buildings, which he followed for a number of years. In 1847 he married Ruth Colby, and they had fourteen children, ten of whom are now living. Mr. Savage manages his large farm of 180 acres and is engaged principally in dairying. In political choice he is a free silver Democrat.

Riley, Philip D., Holland, was born in Litchfield, Conn., April 24, 1810, and was the youngest but one of a family of six sons, three of whom are still living. His father, James Riley, was born in New Jersey, his mother, Anna Osborn, in Connecticut, and were both of New England Puritan stock. The family while living in Litchfield was a regular attendant, and the mother a member, of Dr. Lyman Beecher's church. In 1818 the family moved to the town of Sheldon, then a part of Genesee which he now owns and where he resides. He married Mary, daughter of William Nellis of Palatine, by whom he had five children: Laurence, Eli, Elijah, William, and Irving. Three of the sons are at home with their father.

Smith, James A., was born in Middlefield, Otsego county, N.Y., January 25, 1827, and settled in Cameron with his parents in 1836. He is a son of Richard and Sarah (Bristol) Smith and the oldest of eleven children: James A., Ceylon, Margaret, Eliza, Mary, Richard, Marcia, all living, and Hannah, Doane, Amanda, and Jane, deceased. James A. married Maria Hallett in 1851, who died December 12, 1890, leaving five children: Mary Burrett, John R., Rogene, James A., jr., and Frank H. James A. enlisted in the Construction Corps, under E. L. Wintz, in 1864 and went to Chattanooga on railroad work. September 19, 1864, he enlisted in Co. F, 189th N. Y. Vols., and was promoted at Washington to regimental quartermaster and served until the end of the war. He was at Appomattox Court House when Lee surrendered. Mr. Smith has been justice of sessions for five years, justice of the peace for a number of years, deputy sheriff, collector, and constable. He is the oldest Mason in the town and belongs to Cameron Mills F. & A. M., Lodge No. 542, and has held every office in the lodge except master.

Selleck, Zeno C., is a son of Zeno C. Selleck, who came to this county in 1822 and married Weltha, a daughter of Capt. Samuel Baker, who settled in Howard in 1812. Capt. Samuel Baker was in the war of 1812 and also in the Revolutionary war and was taken prisoner and carried to Montreal, where he was exchanged. He had a family of six children: Daniel, Arbane, Phebe, Travis, Weltha Selleck, Cynthia McDuffy, and Eveline Miles. Mr. and Mrs. Selleck, sr., had twelve children: Noah, Phebe, Cole, Samuel D., Margaret Loid, Cynthia, Weltha, Zeno C., John, Weltha Jane, Pembleton, Milton, and another. Zeno C. married Marinda, daughter of Willard and Elizabeth (Eddy) Bailey, by whom he had four children: Edwin, Aurilla Harrison, Zeno, and Emma J. Rowen. He is a farmer and owns a farm of 157 acres. Mr. Selleck and family are members of the Baptist church. He is a Mason and belongs to Cameron Mills Lodge No. 547.

Smith, Warden, was born in Campbell, August 17, 1838. Avra Smith, his father, was a native of Chenango county, and came to the town of Campbell in 1825, and settled near what is known as Cooper's Plains. He married Clarice White of Chenango county, N. Y., by whom he had eight children: Amos, Austin, Lucinda, Jane, Warden, Isaiah, who was killed in the late war; Clarice, Almetia. Warden Smith is a manufacturer of chairs, and makes a specialty of office and hotel chairs, and also conducts a farm of seventy-one acres. He married Jennie, daughter of Mary Richards, by whom he had two children: Freddie and Chester, who are at home with their parents. He is a member of the K. of H., also a member of the Baptist church, and in politics is a Democrat.

Switzer, Mary A.—Jacob Switzer was born in the town of Bradford, January 16, 1820, son of William Switzer, who was a farmer. Jacob Switzer was also a farmer, and in 1847 he settled on a farm now occupied by his widow, Mary Switzer. He died October 25, 1874, aged fifty-four years. He married Mary A., daughter of Daniel Clark of Campbell, by whom he had six children: Byron, Wallace, Melvin, Ella, Clara, and Emma. In politics Mr. Switzer was a Republican.

Sherwood, Henry F., was born in Tioga county, Pa., in 1849. Orrin Sherwood, father of Henry F., was born in Cameron, Steuben county in 1822, and is one of five children born to Benjamin Sherwood, who was also a native of Cameron, born in the latter part of the eighteenth century, and was a farmer and preacher of the Freewill Baptist doctrine, and would often walk ten miles through the woods to preach on Sundays. He died in Pennsylvania, at the home of his son, Orrin. His wife was Hannah Rice, who died in June, 1895, aged ninety-eight years. At twenty-one years of age Orrin Sherwood went to Tioga county, Pa., where he purchased 130 acres of timber land, which he cleared. He later added seventy acres, the homestead of his wife's parents, where she was born, where they now reside. He married Lucy, daughter of Harvey and Fannie Seeley, by whom he had five children: William H., of Hornellsville; Camelia; Henry; George; and Cassie. Henry F. Sherwood remained with his parents until he was twenty-one years of years, when he engaged in the meat business in Bath, and two years later he embarked in the hotel business which he followed two years. In 1875 he removed to Pulteney and purchased his farm of eighty acres, where he has since resided, doing a general farming business. He is a member of the K. O. T. M., Pulteney Lodge, of which he is chaplain. In 1874 he married Mary, daughter of Nathaniel and Lydia (Brush) Rice, of Pulteney.

Sullivan, John W., was born in Pulteney, N. Y., February 11, 1860. His grandfather, John Sullivan, was a native of Ireland, who came to the United States with his brother Peter about 1820, coming direct to Pulteney, where he located on wild timber land and lived under a bridge the first month while he built his log cabin. He cleared two lage farms, raised and dealt in stock, and became wealthy, and lived to be over eighty years old. His brother Peter was 101 years old when he died. Henry Sullivan, father of John W., was born in Pulteney, N. Y., in 1824. He began life as a farmer, but later owned and operated a flour and grist mill in Prattsburg for ten years, after which he removed to Pulteney and engaged in grape culture, in which business he spent his remaining days. He married Laura J. Cole, by whom he had four children: Laura, wife of William H. Taylor, of Pulteney; Sarah, wife of Frank Miller, of Pulteney; John W.; and Fred M. His wife died in 1864, and he died in 1888. John W. Sullivan, when fourteen years of age, engaged in the flour and grist mill with his uncle, with whom he remained until he learned the trade. In 1881 he returned to Pulteney and engaged in farming for a year, and from 1882 to 1885 was interested in the grape culture. In 1885 he purchased his present farm of 160 acres, with four acres of vineyard, which he has successfully operated since. He is a member of the I. O. O. F., Pulteney Lodge, No. 573, and has filled several of the offices. In 1881 he married Alice, daughter of Ira Brownell, by whom he had two children: Floyd and Jennie.

Selleck, John H., was born in Rathbone, N. Y., son of Zeno C. and Wealthy (Baker) Selleck, both natives of New York. The maternal grandfather, Samuel Baker, fought in the Revolution. He spent his last days in Cameron. Zeno Selleck was a farmer and lumberman. John H. Selleck is engaged in farming and lumbering and owns a farm of 350 acres, eighty acres of which is known as "Rathbone Flats." He began life poor but is now the second largest tax payer in the town. In 1855 he married Martha, daughter of Jonathan Pierce, of Westfield, Pa., by whom he had three children: Silva, wife of Moses Allen, of Cameron, and mother of four children, John Benedict.

36. Capt. BENJAMIN[5] (Caleb,[4] John,[3] John,[2] Thomas[1]), b. Oct. 21, 1755, New Canaan, Ct.; m. Mar. 27, 1775, Elizabeth, dau. Abijah Gilbert, who d. Nov. 25, 1838. "Capt. Benedict removed to So. Salem before 1776, and finally settled at Patterson, near the close of the last century. Here he became a member of the Presb. church, and held the office of Deacon for many years. During the Revolutionary War he performed considerable service in the American army. He served at least one enlistment in the Continental army, in the campaign of 1777, on the northern frontier; but the most of his service was rendered in the county of his residence (Westchester). Living near what was then called the 'lines,' or 'neutral ground' between the British army in N. Y. city, and the American armies in the interior, they were constantly in danger from the raids of the British army, and the depredations of 'Cow-boys,' as they were called. He belonged to a company of organized militia, called 'minute-men,' who were obliged to be in readiness to march at a moment's notice, and in this capacity did much service. He was a member of the guard over Major Andrè, during a portion of the time of his confinement, trial and execution." He was appointed Ensign, May 4, 1780; Lieut., June 24, 1786, and Captain, March 8, 1791. He d. Patterson, Oct. 17, 1832. His ch. all b. So. Salem.

Recently I learned that there is a town named Selleck in Washington (King Co.) and wrote to the postmaster asking for information on the age of the town and how it got its name. Mr. Cecil Hunter was kind enough to answer my inquiry and he gave me the following t hree names in order that I may get answers to my questions:

Bob D. Selleck 7742 31st N.W.
Clyde E. Selleck 4723 NE 55th
E. K. Selleck 2415 42d E.

My husband's grandfather, Charles Jefferson Selleck, was born in Erie, Pa. and after serving in the navy during the Civil War located in Oakmont, Pa. and died there approximately 1927 at the age of 88 leaving six sons and two daughters. His father's name was Joseph.

Mr. Hunter informed me that the town was named for a man who had a saw mill some 70 - 80 years ago and he thought the man's name was Frank Selleck. Would you be able to tell me more about the man ~~wh~~ for whom the town was named and where he had come from? The name Selleck is uncommon both here and in Pa. I would be most grateful for any information you can supply me. Thanking you, I am

Sincerely yours

To Mr. Hunter I wrote: (May, 1972) Thank you for writing and ~~XXXXX~~ giving the information I asked for. It was certainly kind of you and I do appreciate it. I am writing to the three persons whose names you gave me to see if they will answer.

Sincerely you

Mrs. J. R. Selleck

Mrs J. R. Selleck.

The town of Selleck was named after a Mr Selleck who had the first saw mill here. I believe the first name was Frank but of that I am not sure. He had a small saw mill located in what is now part of the Seattle water shed.

About the age of Selleck I am not sure but it must be 70 or 80 years old. There is not much left of the original town. The sawmill which belonged to Pacific States Lumber Co. was built here quite a while after Mr Selleck was forced to close his mill by the City of Seattle. The Pacific States mill was closed by bankruptcy and has been torn down.

If it would interest you, there are a number of families in Seattle by the name of Selleck. I will give you their names and addresses.

Dear Mrs. Selleck:

Please excuse my delay in answering your letter of May 24th. I have been attempting to get more information regarding Frank Selleck. My father recently returned from a business trip in the East and was able to give me some sketchy information.

My grandfather, Willard Franklin Selleck, was born in 1887 and died in 1962. He was one of six children of Willard Franklin and Celia Selleck. Only one of these six children survive -- Marion Goodman. Aunt Marion would be much more qualified to fill you in on the details of the family. I have given her your name and address.

To the best of my knowledge, my great-grandfather was born during the Civil War in upstate New York, his father being killed in the War. Great-grandfather Selleck was a teacher and moved to Minnesota where he had several teaching jobs before moving to Yakima, Washington in 1904 with his family. The family made their home there for the remainder of their years, although the children moved about and scattered about the country. My grandfather, Willard Franklin Selleck, Jr. married Irene Palmer, also of Yakima, and my father is their only son, born 1921.

My father, Willard Palmer Selleck, spent most of his childhood in Yakima until the early 1930's when his parents moved to Wenatchee, where he has resided ever since and where I was born.

To the best of my father's knowledge, the Frank Selleck you mentioned in your letter was a uncle or cousin of my grandfather's. We are not certain of the exact lineage of the family. To the best of our knowledge the other two Selleck's you mentioned in your letter who reside in Western Washington are no relation, except maybe very distantly.

Marion Goodman's address is as follows:

11701 - 16th N.E.
Seattle, Washington 98125

I would suggest writing to her for further information. I only wish I could be of more help.

I am very interested in following family geneologies. My grandmother, Irene Selleck, did a very comprehensive study of her side of the family a number of years ago and did some investigation into the Selleck side of the family also. It appears that this branch of the family is pre-Revolutionary, as was my grandmother's family (Palmer). I would be very interested in hearing from you any information you gather that might connect our families. It seems to be the plague of the Selleck family that they are very non-communicative, and as a consequence, I know very few members of the family or really anything about them.

Wishing you success in your inquiry --

Sincerely,

Elizabeth Kaye Selleck

Dear Miss Selleck:

Thank you for your interesting and informative letter. Mr. Clyde E. Selleck also wrote to me and we were surprised to learn that your family was not connected. He gave me quite a lot of information and it seems that his family were longtime residents of Illinois, his grandfather having settled there in 1859 after he left his birth place in Vermont.

Because your great-grandfather was born in upstate New York, this will be of interest to you and I quote from Mr. Selleck's letter: "There is a Selleck Corner - a small town in New York State. Also there is a David D. Selleck, 19 Sligo Rd., Yarmouth, Me. whose father Henry Selleck was born in Buffalo, NY and who is deceased and buried at Arlington".

Some day I hope to do some searching and find the origin of this branch of the family but at present this is all I know. Joseph W. Selleck, a music teacher (born 1799), married ___?___ and lived in Erie, Pennsylvania, raising two daughters and one son, Charles Jefferson (1838-1926) who married Mary Rebecca Shade (1850-19 36) after his discharge from the navy following the Civil War. They lived in Oakmont, Penn and raised Charles Francis (1868), Harry Vincent (1870), George Whiting (1872), Emma Blanche (1874), Mary Mildred (1876), Willard Gilbert (1880), Ralph (1884) and Raymond (1889). They are all deceased and there are only three surviving males; one in Florida, one in Ohio and my husband here in Illinois, and combined those three have four sons, two of which are our boys 19 and 21, and two of the Florida resident (Clayton Selleck) with whom we have no contact and cannot say where his sons live. That last sentence bears out your statment that the family is non-communicative, a trait evident in this branch also.

You may be interested to know that one Silas Selleck is mentioned as a "photographic artist" in San Francisco in "The American West" a book published by Dutton and authored by Beebe and Clegg.

If I ever find anything which would be interest to you I will certainly send it along.

Sincerely yours,

Jean Selleck (Mrs. J.R.)

Dear Mrs. Selleck:

This will acknowledge your letter of May 24th which I found most interesting, as had not been aware that there were Sellecks at Mattoon, Ill. or knowledge of this Penn. branch of the Selleck family.

My branch of the family are long timeresidents of Illinois, my grandfather who was born in Brandon, Vt. in 1841 came to Ill. in 1859 and purchased land from the IC Railroad near Buckley where I was born and raised. My sister Mrs. Clement Ikins (Alice Joyce Selleck) lives in Onarga, Ill. also my aunt, Mrs. M. L. Wright (Alice Selleck) who is 86 and the last member of my father's family. He is the Cecil shown on the genealogy sheet enclosed. There were 6 children in my family - 4 boys & 2 girls. None of we boys have male children.

I am enclosing copies of the materials I have been able to collect over the years on the Selleck family. The 2 books mentioned in the Prefaces to the Selleck & Peck Genealogy are in the permenant library of The Union League Club, Chicago. I was permitted to read them but not not purchase as I had desired. Wm. E. Selleck the author was one ofthe founders of The Union League Club. The Selleck Crest - copy enclosed was taken from this book.

We moved to Seattle 3 years ago from the Chicago Area and also have been interested in the history of Selleck Washington. When my sister Mrs. Ikins and her husband visited us this past February, we drove out to Selleck and talked to Mr. Hunter and some of the other residents. However, were unable to secure much information. The copy of the News story enclosed is all the local library had to offer.

There is a Selleck Corner - a small town in New York state. Also there is a David D. Selleck, 19 Sligo Rd., Yarmouth, Me. whose father Henry Selleck was born in Buffalo, NY and who is deceased and buried at Arlington.

If you have any other information that would fit into the picture I would appreciate having it.

Sincerely,

Clyde E. Selleck

Dear Mr. Selleck:

Please excuse my delay in answering your most informative and interesting envelope of material. We were vacationing. I can't begin to tell you how much we appreciated your letter and the various copies received. I only wish we had something interesting to add but, unfortunately, we do not.

Recently a Miss Elizabeth K. Selleck (2415 - 42d Avenue East) wrote saying that the Frank L. Selleck for whom the t own is named was a relative of her grandfather. We were surprised to learn that you r family was not connected inasmuch as the name is rarely heard and of course we did not know you were originally from Illinois.

Joseph W. Selleck (bor n 1799) married ? and lived in Erie, Pennsylvania, raising two daughters and one son, Charles Jefferson (1838-1926) who married Mary Rebecca Shade (1850-1936). They lived in Oakmont, Penn. and raised Charles Francis (1868), Harry Vincent (1870), George Whiting (1872), Emma Blanche (1874), Mary Mildred (1876), Willard Gilbert (1880), Ralph (1884) and Raymond (1889). You may be interested to know that one Silas Selleck is mentioned as a "photographic artist" in San Francisco, in The American West, a book published by Dutton and authored by Beebe and Clegg.

Some day I hope to search the archives in Erie and find, if possible, the origin of this branch of the family.

Thank you for writing me and if I ever find anything which would be of interest to you I will send it along.

Sincerely yours,

Mrs. J. R. Selleck

We each had a birthday this year as usual, and our ailments have sort of kept in step. Both of us toddle around quite smartly now, no canes or crutches. Took a Pan Am Jet in May from Dulles to Paris where Major Selleck met us, and with Dolly entertained us for a month in Beaugency, with trips to Bavaria and many interesting places around Orleans.

Drove to Watertown in July, and stayed several weeks with Jo Anne while she made preparations to move to Oklahoma City, Oklahoma. We came home via West Point where we had a very pleasant visit with the new Superintendant, General Lampert, whose father was a 1910 classmate.

To the Selleck Family

ABOUT three years since, I published a book of eighty pages, with the view of establishing the lineage of the Selleck and Peck families. I succeeded in tracing both lines to 1633 and 1637, respectively, and found some very important direct ancestors, of which I gave biographical sketches. The book was well received and was purchased by a number of Public Libraries and Historical Societies

No question but what David Selleck was the originator of the name in this country, and it is almost certain that all of that name now here came from him.

Since then I have made a search of collateral ancestors, and was surprised at the result. No question but what any Selleck can show a relationship with some, if not all of the following.

George Washington
Henry W. Longfellow
John Dryden
Percy Bysshee Shelley
Aaron Burr
Commodore Oliver Hazzard Perry
Anne Hutchinson
John Alden
Priscilla Mullins
Rev. Jonathan Edwards
Arch. Edwin Sandys
Maj. Nathan Gold
Rich Law
Benjamin Silliman

With these facts before you there are strong grounds for you to become familiar with your pedigree and learn just where you come in. If you have not the time, or the reference books at your command a genealogist assisted me in my search and is familiar with it. He is in a position to easily complete the line of almost any Selleck, and his charges are very reasonable. His familiarity with the subject enables him to make an estimate of the cost, on receipt of what information one has of his ancestry during the past five generations and during the Colonial period.

His card will be sent on request.

The book has 85 pages, well bound, and printed in the best manner. Has 26 illustrations, 12 coats of arms and 28 charts.

There are a few of the "Selleck and Peck Genealogy" left, will furnish either or both books at three dollars ($3.00) each, which is about one-half the cost of publication.

The Selleck family have too strong a lineage to ignore its existence, and should learn the position they hold.

Respectfully,
Wm. E. Selleck.

Union League Club
Chicago, Ill.

To the Selleck Family:—

About a year ago I published the Selleck and Peck Genealogy.

The fact that it has been ordered, and received favorable comment by a number of Public Libraries and Historical Societies is evidence that it has more than ordinary merit.

The Selleck family have a Historical Record from "early settlers" through the Colonial and Revolutionary times, that any member can be proud of.

David Selleck came here from England in 1633, and nearly, if not quite all of the name, can trace their ancestry to him. He was a prominent man in his day, and was one of the number that established the first Public School in this country.

The marriage connections with other families add materially to the record. Rev. Chas. M. Selleck in his History of Norwalk, Connecticut, says: "The Hooker, Law and Gold is one of the strongest family combinations in New England," add to this the Sands, Kilborne, Silliman and Peck and the strength is materially increased. All these families are shown to be inter-married with the Sellecks, and the prominent ones, some of world renown, came from Selleck blood.

There never was any expectation of profit when the book was published. If the entire edition had been sold, when it was decided to offer the same at $3.00 each, the proceeds would not have covered the actual printer's cost, say nothing of time expended in collecting what is shown, and in offering what few copies that are left, it is more with the hope of stimulating the members to take the proper interest in their lineage than to sell the books.

D. H. Van Hoosear, of Wilton, Connecticut, Genealogist Searcher and Genealogical Editor of the Norwalk Weekly Hour, has been able to connect several with the line, thus making them entitled to the use of the Selleck Coat of Arms. Each examination he makes serves to help future ones, and a letter addressed to him will meet with proper consideration.

The book contains thirteen illustrations, is printed in the best manner and worthy of a place in any library.

The New York Genealogical and Biographical Record, in referring to the book in their January number, says: " * * * A line of descend from David Selleck, who, arrived probably from Bristol, England. The record is well prepared, and the illustrations are well selected and printed. Other families who have a place in the book are Kibby, Law, Gold, Sands and Silliman. General Gold Selleck Silliman, son of Ebenezer and Abigail (Selleck) Silliman, was Brigadier General of Militia in the Revolution and served throughout the war, taking efficient part in the battles of Long Island, Harlem, White Plains, Danbury and elsewhere. * * *"

To any one who feels interested the book will be sent on receipt of $3.00 as long as they last.

Dear David:

We were very pleased to receive the family info and thank you for it. Please keep track of the expense you are incurring and we will reimburse you. I know we can never pay you for your time.

Sorry to say I cannot furnish you with a copy of the Ash family sheet as the only one I have has so many notes added, front and back, that I am scarcely able to decipher it my self. If my sister Marge wasn't in Florida she could probably furnish us with another copy but she won't be home again until Easter. However, we will try to get another to you somehow.

The parents of my grandfather (Charles H. Ash) were Thomas Ash Jr. (b. 1804 Ireland -d. 1847 Alleg.Co.Pa.) and Mary Cullen (b. ? Pgh.Pa. -D. 1886 Alleg.Co.as Mary McNeal). According to a letter of attorney dated May 5, 1827 in Ireland Thomas Ash Jr. was sent to Pittsburgh(along with a cousin Daniel Dogherty of Seacash, Antrim Co.,Ireland) in connection with the estate of Ellen Loughry deceased. His parents were Thomas Ash and Mary Loughry Ash "of the Cross, County of Antrim, Kingdom of Ireland".

I have no information further back concerning the Ash family and I do not have all the recent data and corrections necessary to bring this up to date.

Virginia reports that they enjoyed your visit very much. Sounds like you folks have been having a lot more winter than we've received, but it is fine with Jack and me.

Thanks again for all your efforts and I will try to furnish you with the Ash record. Give our best to Elizabeth.

Cordially,

Jean and Jack

Dear Sir or Madame:

A relative of mine, Joseph Whiting Sollock, was born in Syracuse on Dec. 14, 1799. I do not know the names of his parents. In his obituary he was said to have been an Episcopalian.

Do you have any birth records of Syracuse or Onondaga County for that period; and, if so, is his birth listed? I should be very grateful to receive a copy of the entry.

If these birth records are not in your possession, could you give me the name and address of the Episcopal church that would have been in Syracuse at that date, so I could write to them about their baptismal records?

If the Sollock family is mentioned in any early history of Onondaga County, I should like to have a photocopy of any pertinent references.

Enclosed is a stamped, self-addressed envelope and a check for $2.00 to cover the cost of copying any information you may find. Thank you very much for your assistance.

Yours sincerely,

David E. Wittenridge

Dear Reverend Witheridge,

I am writing with regard to your request for copies of the obituaries of your relatives Joseph and Mary Ann Selleck.

Enclosed please find a copy of the obituary of Joseph Selleck taken from the Erie newspaper of January 7, 1858.

Your check for the amount of $2.00 is adequate to cover any research and copying costs.

Sincerely,

Joseph W. Selleck, cause of death "dropsy of the heart"

Erie, Pa., newspaper, Jan. 7, 1858

The senate canvass will be open to-day morning.

Mrs. Senator Douglas Franking Documents.—"I called on Senator Douglas last evening for a short time, and found him busy in his study franking copies of his speech all over the Union. Diligently engaged in directing the speeches as they were franked was Mrs. Douglas, radiant and beautiful in her elegant evening attire. She wrote rapidly a bold, firm hand which evinced energy and decision of character, while she carried on a part of the conversation at the same time. She is truly a very beautiful lady in form and figure, with a countenance expressive not only of intellect and energy, but affection and pure womanly sympathies. She has evidently the mind to investigate and comprehend questions of politics, for some of her remarks exhibited considerable feeling concerning the position of Kansas affairs. A gentleman had just brought in some three hundred names of citizens of Cincinnati, and she proceeded at once to direct each a copy of her husband's speech, while Mr. Douglas added his frank. Those who receive the speeches will, therefore, have a specimen of the chirographs of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas."—Wash. cor. of the Cincinnati Enquirer.

Who is Commodore Paulding?—Hiram Paulding comes honestly by his skill in arresting unlawful expeditions. His father was that celebrated John Paulding, the Peekskill farmer, who was one of the three captors of Major André. Hiram was born in Westchester county and early in life entered the navy, had passed through the grades of Midshipman, Lieutenant, Commander and Captain. He has ever been one of the most efficient and valued officers in the service; and government a short time since showed its appreciation of the fact, by appointing him to the command of the Home Squadron, which he now holds.

We observe the Mobile Mercury intimates that the Commodore "exceeded his instructions" in so promptly capturing Walker. The same complaint was made by Arnold's friends against John Paulding. Nevertheless, history and public opinion justified the one and will justify the other.—Albany Evening Journal. 28th.

Charles Fenno Hoffman.—We observe a notice going the "rounds" of the Press that Charles Fenno Hoffman, the celebrated Poet, who has for some time been an inmate of the Pennsylvania Hospital near our city, is lying dangerously ill.—We are requested to state by Dr. Curwin, the efficient superintendent of the above named institution, that the report is without foundation. Mr. Hoffman, so far from being ill, is in the enjoyment of most excellent health, and hopes are entertained that at no very distant day, with the treatment now observed, the distinguished gentleman may be restored to that position in society of which he was

PETER C. BORSARI

"My privacy and Tom's were invaded," complains Robert Selleck (with wife Martha and son at the Golden Globes).

TOM SELLECK AND HIS DAD APPLY MAGNUM FORCE IN A LEGAL WAR AGAINST THE TABLOIDS

His alter ego on Magnum, P.I. usually takes matters of justice into his own hands, but Tom Selleck has deferred to a higher authority in his latest dust-up. On Feb. 3 in Los Angeles Superior Court, Selleck, 38, slammed the National Enquirer with a $36 million lawsuit for libel. In a statement released through his agent, Selleck accused the tabloid of "contriving entire articles where there is absolutely no factual basis." The Enquirer vowed to "defend this lawsuit vigorously."

Under dispute are three 1982 articles that outraged Selleck. The first charged that the notoriously sedate actor was a secret swinger "complete with flashy clothes, beautiful women and a furious lifestyle." The second described his "blockbuster" romance with Dallas star Victoria Principal. According to Selleck, who was divorced last October from model-actress Jacquelyn Ray, his wife of 11 years, he had never met the purported object of his passion until last month's Golden Globe Awards, and at the time of the alleged romance he was in Yugoslavia filming High Road to China. Principal says she was in Hawaii, and adds, "I would be happy to go to court on his behalf." The third alleged that the TV star threatened the creator of an unauthorized poster featuring a drawing of a half-naked Selleck.

The Enquirer suit isn't the Selleck family's only action against a saucy tabloid. Tom's father, Robert, 60, a San Fernando Valley real estate executive, has filed a $6 million libel suit against the weekly Globe in response to a Dec. 14, 1982 article, "Tom Selleck's Love Secrets—by His Father." "I don't even know what a 'love secret' is," snorts the elder Selleck, who found the headline particularly offensive. He also claims that the article resulted from a telephone interview with a woman who said she worked for a London paper. "She asked that I fill her in on some interesting things that happened while Tom was being raised, like Little League and so on," he recalls. "It looks like I wrote it. It was humiliating to think that people who didn't know how close my son and I are would think I'd rat on him." The Globe's legal counsel declines to comment.

Selleck's action is not the first celebrity complaint against the Enquirer, and even though his case could drag on for years, he has a winning precedent on his side. Carol Burnett's 1976 libel action against the tabloid ended in 1981 with an $800,000 judgment in her favor. DAVID WALLACE

Dear Rev. Witheridge:

Births, deaths and marriages were not officially recorded in New York State until the late 1880's.

The only Sellecks in our 1800-1840 Onondaga County census index are Henry Sellick in 1820 and '40, Marcellus, and James H. Sellick in 1830, Manlius. No Selleck (various spellings) is listed in the New York State census index for 1800 in Onondaga County.

The name Syracuse was first used in 1819 and until 1848, when the village became a city, census listings are Town of Salina.

We do not have a staff for family research at this time. Enclosed is the card of a genealogist for your convenience.

We return your check herewith.

Sincerely yours,

Violet A. Hosler

Editor's Note

The source for the photo is John W. Selleck (b. 1951), who sent it to me as an email attachment on November 5, 2022. Notice John's reflected face in the gap between Charles and Williard.

all this the caller at the house to-day will discover the chimney, from the crane of which hung the kettle of always ready "steeping" water.

A portion of what is, in 1896, known as the Selleck house, on West Avenue, is of ante-revolutionary date. It was originally Belden property, and belonged to the fourteen acre homestead of John and Rebecca (Bartlett) Belden. After the parents' day, it fell to the ownership of their children, four of whom, Mary Esther, Sarah, Amos and Henry, sold on March 18, 1796, their share in the estate (two-thirds) to their brothers Isaac and John, who divided the fourteen acres between themselves, Isaac taking the south half and John the north portion. Isaac married the daughter of one of Norwalk's principal men of those earlier and more simple days, Matthew Reed, and lived in what is now known as the DeKlyn house. John was unmarried and resided in what is to-day the Selleck house. After John Belden's use of the premises, his brother Henry occupied the same for a time, and he, at the instigation of his wife, erected the milk-house addition which is to-day observed on the north side. The back roof at that time ran almost to the ground, and under its west section, floored with stone, was kept the wood for winter, but the space was reserved in summer for a "cooling" place in a hot day. The Beldens' rights in the property were finally bought out by Frederick St. John, son of William St. John and brother of Mrs. Col. Buckingham Lockwood. He had married Harriet, daughter of John Cannon, but had no children. He there lived and died, when the house and lot became the purchase of the widow of Zalmon Selleck, the mother of the present owner of the property, Mrs. Wm. K. James.[1] Mr. Selleck died in the South, leaving a widow and two children, one of whom, Henry, also died away from home, and the fine old place fell, consequently, to the mother and daughter, who there resided in great comfort. The building was set on fire by Garth's wing of Tryon's army, but as the men were hastening to cross the stream-rocks (site of iron bridge on Cross Street 1896) to join Tryon's forces, the house was probably left as soon as the torch had been applied, and was on that account, partially saved. After the conflagation a small building that stood on the Westport road was moved and made to become a part of the original Belden building.

Another existing ante-revolutionary home is that of the lower Main Street Hoyt sisters and brothers. On May 15, 1764, Goold Hoyt, Sr., paid Capt. Josiah Thatcher, who then owned the old Whitney mill, £47-15s. for a lot of one-half acre and fifteen poles area and situated on "mill plain," now Main Street. Here Mr. Hoyt was to build the homey worked great destruction. The afternoon had been dark, and a few minutes before sundown it became evident that a terrible visitation of wind and rain was at hand. The storm is said to have commenced at Norfolk, Va., an hour or so before noon. It reached Norwalk at about 6 o'clock in the evening, and it spent itself on the Massachusetts coast at midnight. It overtook the Norwalk packet, THE SLOW AND EASY, Uriah Selleck[1] owner, and sank it. It leveled between one and two hundred large chestnut trees standing on some four acres a few miles out of Norwalk, and unroofed houses in every direction. The Norwalk shore was in its direct path, and Half-Mile Island and other marine sections were particularly exposed. The storm of 1833 shifted much of the sand of this same island from the east side to the west side, and on Dec. 17, 1833, the tide rose to such an extreme height that it made three distinct islands of the one. On Feb. 5, 1845, the island is said to have been surrounded by banks of snow six or seven feet high.

[1]Mrs. James was there born. After her father's decease, and before her mother came permanently to occupy the house, it had a succession of professional tenants. Lawyer Alfred Apollos Holly, of Stamford and his wife Charlotte, daughter of Judge Chapman of Litchfield, resided there. Dr. John Adams McLean and his first wife, Catherine Hawley of Bridgeport, followed Mr. Holly. Subsequently David C. Sanford, a lawyer and his wife, a daughter of Ozias Seymour of Litchfield, and a sister of Judge Origen S. Seymour of that place, there tenanted, and Mrs. Seymour died there. (Mr. Sanford married, 2d., a sister of Rev. Edward Bull, once rector of Christ Church, Westport.) After Mr. Seymour's occupancy of the house, Moses Craft and his wife Esther Mary (Cannon) Craft there lived, and after Mr. Craft Rev. Sylvester Eaton, the seventh Congregational pastor of Norwalk.

After the farm use of Half-Mile Island by the St. John's, Raymond's and Fitch's, the frame of a dwelling[2] which formerly stood on the path to the "Ballast," was thither removed, and the beach's orient end became the site of an humble but happy home-hearth. Grandmother Gregory[3] was the head, for many years, of this hearth-stone, and was ever and anon seen standing at her southeast-facing door, looking at the sails in the offing, or listening to the plaintive note of some distant sea bird.[4]

[1]The Norwalk wharf of this sailing vessel adjoined the present coal yard of Charles T. Leonard. Uriah Selleck there had a store, at the rear dock of which the first steamboat put upon the Norwalk route had wharfage. His business partner, at one time, was Samuel St. John of New Canaan, the father of the late Wm. and Prof. Samuel St. John. Mr. Selleck had married, May 18, 1784, Hannah Smith of Darien, and a direct descendant of Mr. Wm. Haynes, of Haynes' Ridge. These had two children, Zalmon and Nancy, the first of whom, born March 31, 1795, was the father of Mrs. Maria (Selleck) James of Wall Street, Norwalk. The Uriah Selleck home became, afterward, that of Matthias Hubbell, in Main Street.

Evart Quintard, born 1798, in South Norwalk, commenced learning his trade (cabinet-maker) in the house, still standing, northwest cor. of North Avenue and Camp Street. Zalmon Hanford was the occupant of the premises, and the rooms in which Chas. R., father of Gen. Wm. T. Sherman, had enjoyed old Samuel Camp's evening musicales, were now appropriated as furniture quarters. During Mr. Quintard's apprenticeship Mr. Hanford removed to the Uriah Selleck house, which he occupied until about the time of its purchase by Matthias Hubbell. Mr. Hanford there built the cabinet shop that was afterward moved and used by Mr. Quintard, on the site to-day known as 152 Main Street.

[2]This dwelling was the home of Abraham Gregory, which stood a short distance below the ancient burying-ground.

[3]She was the widow of John Betts Gregory. Her husband was the son of Abraham and Elizabeth (Betts) Gregory, who lived where the late Henry Marvin resided, on East Avenue, and south of the ancient Beacham Lane. It was the oaken frame of Abraham Gregory's house which was removed in 1831 to Half-Mile Island, and formed the west end of old Mrs. Gregory's cottage at the Point. John Betts Gregory learned his trade (potter) of Absalom Day of "Old Well." After his marriage to Olive, born 1786, daughter of Aaron and Hannah (Weeks) Raymond, and grand-daughter of the soldier, Simeon Raymond of "Old Well," he had a good business offer from Huntington, L. I., which he accepted. He afterward established a pottery in Clinton, Oneida Co., N. Y., which required a building 140x40 for his operations. He returned in 1831 to Norwalk, and bought from Samuel Hanford Half-Mile Isle, paying for the same $325.00. He there built a kiln for the burning of earthen and stoneware. The kiln was erected during the cholera year (1832) by masons Lewis and George Raymond of "Old Well." The business was here kept up until 1840. Mr. Gregory died July 22, 1842, leaving a widow, who survived him until 1883. His children were Charles E., who lived at the present Langdon west-end entrance, and was drowned; Geo. W., who resides in Saugatuck; John W.; Mary Jane (Mrs. Rev. W. B. Hoyt;) Harriet (Mrs. Rev. Harvey Camp) and Eliza (Mrs. Gay.) respected colonial occupations. Besides this, he was probably the head of the iron-ware establishment of the period. The Holmes' of America may be proud of their Norwalk kinsman. He was a brother of the founders of the Stamford and Bedford[1] Holmes families, and Col. James Holmes of the Revolution was his grand-nephew.[2] He left no male issue.

HOME-LOT V.

EDWARD NASH, who succeeded Joseph Fitch and Mark St. John as proprietor of Lot No. 5, was the fore-parent of the large Norwalk Nash family. He was a son, it is claimed, of Edward Nash 1st, who was born in Lancashire, England, in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, in 1592, and reported to have had two sons, Edward 2d, and John. Edward Nash 2d. came early to Norwalk, and immediately followed Mark St. John as owner of one of the eligible house-sites (directly south of the East Norwalk school of 1896) in the new plantation, and as Jos. Fitch was unmarried while he remained in Norwalk, and Mark St. John was possessed of two additional lots, it seems probable that Mr. Nash was the earliest heartstone occupant of the spot. There appears to be no mention of the first Mrs. Nash. By her was a son John, born 1652, who, so runs the family tradition, was the first English child born in Norwalk. Another child of Edward Nash, by his first wife, was Hannah, who married, Dec. 3, 1678, Deliverance, son of Henry Wakeley of Stratford, and an early Hartford lawyer.[3] Here is a possible hint as to the locality-antecedents of the original Mrs. Nash. The second Mrs. Edward Nash was the wife, first, of Thomas Rumble of (as the record shows) the ancient town of Stratford, and second, of Thomas Barlow of Fairfield.[4] Mrs. Nash had no children, it is probable, by her last marriage. She was

[1]Two Holmes sisters lived in Bedford (south part of town on road leading east) some seventy or so years ago, one of whom, Amy, married as his third wife, Nathan Selleck, and was the mother of Jesse Selleck, late of Norwalk.

[2]John Holmes, nephew perchance of Richard, was killed by the fall of the first church bell that was raised in Stamford. See Huntington's Stamford.

[3]An interesting genealogical fact is divulged through a clause in the inventory, Aug. 2, 1699, of the Norwalk estate of Edward Nash, 2d. Allusion is there made to "Deliverance Wakeley, son-in-law" of said Nash. This establishes the claim that the "Hannah Nash" who married Deliverance, son of Henry Wakeley, the noted colonial lawyer of Hartford, was a daughter of Edward Nash of Norwalk, rather than of Sergt. Joseph Nash of New Haven; and as Nathaniel Ketchum, who married June 12, 1710, Sarah, born Dec. 1, 1683, daughter of Deliverance and Hannah (Nash) Ketchum, was the probable ancestor of Amos and Hiram and Morris Ketchum as well as of Maria Ketchum Averill, wife of Chancellor Reuben Hyde Walworth of Saratoga Springs, it gives to these kinsfolk an additional Norwalk lineage.

[4]Thomas Barlow is believed to have been a near relative of John Barlow, 1st, both early settlers of Fairfield. The six acres granted him in 1653 by the Fairfield fathers are to-day a coveted portion of that handsome and historic town. He appointed in his will the celebrated Thomas Pell, of King Charles I. staff and lord of the Manor of Pelham, overseer of his three children, two of whom, Phœbe and Mary, married in Norwalk. Phœbe (Mrs. James Olmsted) had a son Nathan, born, April 27, 1678, who married, Dec. 17, 1702, Sarah, daughter of Ralph Keeler. By this union there was evidently a son, Nathan 2nd, (afterward of New Fairfield, Conn.,) but this Nathan's half brothers, Samuel and James, and his half sisters, Mercy and Lydia, were the issue, it seems, of his father's second marriage to Mercy, daughter of Christopher Comstock. Mercy Olmsted, daughter of Nathan, married Moses St. John, who is well represented in Norwalk to-day, and Lydia Olmsted, through her marriage to Matthew Fitch, became a fore-as also their daughters Sarah (Mrs. Thomas Rockwell[1]) and Ruth (Mrs. James Abbott) and Mehitable (Mrs. Lieut. Wm. Lees). John Rusco[2d.] died young, and evidently before marriage, as the disposal of his estate (see Fairfield probate records) so indicates. This left his brother, Thomas, to perpetuate the Rusco sire name. Thomas seems to have been interested in the "West Side" lands, and "Rusco Creek," in the rear of the present South Norwalk corset establishment, was probably named for him. Himself and wife, Abigail, had a family of nine children, viz.: Thomas[2d.], John, James, Theophilus, Josiah, Samuel, Mary, Abigail (Mrs. Wendall) and Rebecca (Mrs. Samuel Smith). Thomas[1st.] died in the summer of 1739. His son, Thomas[2d.], the date and order of whose birth are not ascertained, married Elizabeth, daughter of Ebenezer, and a grand-daughter of Matthew[1st.] and Sarah (Treat) Campfield, and had a son, Thomas[3d.], who seems to have been the father of John Rusco of Rusco Ridge.

This parent of a numerous descent was married, on March 9, 1758, to Joanna Arnold of Salem, and his home, on one of the most commanding heights in the lower Oblong, (named for, and possibly first occupied by, the Sachem Winnipauke) lay midway on the north side of the winding road that connects Bald Hill, Conn., with the hamlet of

His sister, Mary, married Samuel, the oldest son of Ralph Isaacs, and their son, Samuel Brown Isases, fell heir to a large slice of his uncle James Brown's property.

Rev. James Brown of The Oblong, and of a more modern date than James the barrister, was the grandfather of the present "Selleck Brothers," the great grandmother of whom was eminently patriotic. While Tryon had command of Long Island he sent agents to this side of the Sound to purchase cattle and horses, and The Oblong was a field for such stock transactions. The British employed a middle man, whose duty it was to secure the live stock from the first owner, and see the same driven to the Darien shore, from whence transportation was had to Long Island. Sally Selleck's husband embarked in this enterprise but the wife put an effectual stop to it, and the Salem "Horse Hollow" (near East Woods) was broken up. Mrs. Selleck stood, (once gun in hand,) so eagerly intent upon the performance of loyalty-missions, that the Continental men were accustomed, when they met her, to pass along the line "Hurrah for Sally." She was thoroughly successful in turning her husband from toryism to patriotism.

Eber and Hannah Brown of the same vicinity were heavy land owners and held title to hundreds of Oblong acres. Their daughter married Daniel Stevens and had Daniel[2d.] who was the father of James Stevens, the proprietor for years of the Connecticut Hotel in Norwalk. Eber Brown, the great-grandfather of landlord James Stevens, owned a large portion of the territory about Trinity Lake. He was remarkable for physical strength. It is said that he had been known to cut ten acres of rye in a day. His wife Hannah, was an Arnold, an English woman.

[1]Thomas, son of John and Elizabeth (Weed) Rockwell of Stamford, married, Dec. 9, 1703, Sarah, daughter of John Rusco[1st.] of Norwalk. Thomas and Sarah Rockwell had three sons, Thomas[2d.], John and Jabez. Thomas[2d.], born Dec. 13, 1708, married Ruth, daughter of Dea. James and Sarah (Hyatt) Benedict. These had a son, Lieut. James Rockwell, born June 9, 1750, who married Abigail, daughter of Thomas Hawley (son of Rev. Thomas) of Ridgefield. Their daughter, Anna, became the mother of Capt. D. K. Nash of South Norwalk, and their son, Gould[1st.], born Dec. 18, 1778, married Polly, born July 23, 1779, daughter of Nathan and Mary (Smith) Dauchy, and was the father of the late Gould Rockwell[2d.], born March 6, 1808, who married, first, Mary Caroline Bradley, and second, Mary Louisa Denman. Gould Rockwell[2d.], a man of sterling principle and honor, was, formerly, a Troy, N. Y., citizen and churchman. He spent the latter part of his life in his native Ridgefield, and died, while absent for the winter, in New York City, March 10, 1892.

Thos. Hawley Rockwell, born May 21, 1776, son of Lieut. Jas. and Abigail, and brother of Anna (Mrs. Jacob Nash) and Gould Rockwell[1st.], married Polly Smith of Ridgefield. These were the parents of David Smith Rockwell, a New Canaan resident of enterprise and excellence, and for many years principal of the "Church Hill Institute" of that town. Mr. D. S. Rockwell married Betsey, daughter of Stephen Rusco married, Sept. 29, 1763, Ruth, daughter of Eleazer and Elizabeth Bouton. Mrs. Elizabeth Bouton was a Seymour.

Thos. Rusco, supposed to be son of Thomas 3d., married Anna Dibble, Feb. 26, 1756. Possibly this is the same Thomas who married, a little later, Elizabeth, daughter of Lemuel and Sarah Raymond.

The late Michael Rusco of Norwalk, son of David, and grandson of John and Joanna Rusco of Rusco Ridge, married Mary, daughter of Rev. James Brown of Salem, and sister of Lucy (Mrs. Isaac Selleck). He had Samuel and Joseph. Joseph married Emma, daughter of Lewis and Anna Fancher and had Frank Rusco, the 1896 Business College principal.

John and Rebecca, the Norwalk Rusco fore-father and mother, were honored ancestors. The old house-lot and home, No. 6, continued for about fifty-five years in the family. The father died without having made a will and the estate was court-inventoried on Nov. 20, 1702. On Feb. 19, 1705, the original home was sold by the heirs to Samuel, the youngest son of Rev. Thos. Hanford, to whom fell his late father's adjoining home property. This extended the Hanford acreage. The Hanford front yard and well are shown to-day, but every vestige of the Hanford Rusco-annex has disappeared by the Consolidated road's changes.

HOME-LOT VII.

RALPH KEELER, SR., of Home-Lot No. 7, was born in 1613. He was one of the settlers, in 1639, of Hartford, and appeared in Fairfield in 1645, from whence we find him in Norwalk in 1655. He was twice married. His second wife was Sarah, widow of Henry Whelpley of Fairfield, who had at least two Whelpley children. He had assigned to him the four-and-a-half acre home-lot, the south-west corner of which is occupied to-day by W. S. Hanford of East Norwalk. He retained his original premises until Oct. 21, 1662, when he parted with them, and Richard Raymond became their proprietor. On Sept. 1, 1665, was executed a deed whereby was made over to him the dwelling house, barn and lot that had belonged (see page 39) to Thos. Ward, now the garden land of Wm. H. Earle. Ralph Keeler, Sr., who died in 1672, left four sons, viz.,

RALPH 2d.; SAMUEL;
JOHN; JONAS; died unmarried.

Mr. Keeler had, also, four daughters, one of whom married, Nov. 16, 1671, Benj. Turney of Fairfield; another, Rebecca, who married, July 17, 1673, James Pickett; and another, Isabel, who married Thos. Morehouse of Fairfield.

Norwalk and Ridgefield are widely Keeler-spread, and the family's lineal and collateral branches are numerous. The discovery, if ever made, of the first Keeler mother that day, "Court" vicinity (Bleecker St.) of the city. Leonard Kip was a neighbor and his son, the future California prelate, Wm. Ingraham Kip, was the Ray children's young companion. Mrs. George Warner Nichols, loyal to the memory of her sister (Mr. Richards H. Schell,) caused to be erected, in 1894, a rare "In Memorian" in the Chapel of Our Holy Saviour, in central Norwalk. Her husband also, at the same time, made valuable donation to said Chapel's crystal embellishment.

Matthew Keeler 2d, son of Matthew 1st and brother of Rebecca (Mrs. James Seymour 1st.) married, Dec. 1769, Anna, daughter of Daniel Benedict, (son of Samuel, and grandson of Thos. Benedict 3d.) and had Samuel, born June 4, 1778, who married, July 29, 1798, Lydia, daughter of Azariah Waterbury of Stamford. This Samuel Keeler was the army officer who, in the war of 1812, marched his command (see foot note, page 42) from New London, Conn., to Detroit, Mich. Samuel and Lydia Keeler's children were Sally Esther, born Feb. 24, 1799, (Mrs. Jonathan Selleck of Troy, N. Y.); Mary Ann, born May 7, 1802, (Mrs. Henry Selleck of Norwalk) and James Stevens Keeler, born May 7, 1804, of Troy, N. Y.

(SECOND OCCUPANT.)

RICHARD RAYMOND of Salem, in the Jurisdiction of Massachusetts Bay, bought, on Oct. 21, 1662, of Ralph Keeler, "my housings contained at present within my home-lot and cow yard, together with all the conveniences and appointments thereunto belonging, as videlicet, the house-floors, doors, glass windows, shelves or ought else that may properly be said to belong to the same, . . . and to frame and erect a new building adjoining the same, clapboarding the sides and ends as high as the upper ways;" for all of which Mr. Raymond was to pay Mr. Keeler the sum of £42. This introduces Capt. Richard Raymond, (who was in Massachusetts as early as 1634,) at Norwalk. He evidently came hither as soon as the reconstructed Keeler house was ready for occupancy. He was of the lane-way leading, in 1896, from Belden Avenue to the Union Co. office. Here were brought up Mr. Stephenson's four children, David, (formerly proprietor of the Norwalk Hotel,) Morris (latterly of Danbury,) Matilda (Mrs. James H. Keeler) and Antionette (Mrs. Samuel Pennoyer.) Mrs. James H. Keeler was the mother of James, who died unmarried, and Frances E., who married the late Samuel R. P. Camp, and Antionette, who married Edwin, son of Charles Mallory. The Keeler, afterward Lockwood and St. John mill, was burned down about 1727-8. The fire occurred late in the season and some time elapsed before the building was replaced. Upon its restoration by "Governor" Platt of Silver Mine, it was turned into a cotton mill, with a "run of stone" for grist purposes, the original deed of the town to the Keeler's demanding such a use of the establishment. After the replacement of the structure two Englishmen rented the industry, and one Florence was its manager. Florence occupied the old St. John house that stood in the street (Main Street) somewhere near the present marble works. The "Norwalk Scales" of that day were directly opposite this house on the west side of the street, the mode of weighing by which (sometimes hoisting into the air) was somewhat peculiar. The Keeler-Lockwood mill, afterward "run" by John Arnold, was for years an important local industry. The "Factory Bell," before the advent of steam whistles, was a faithful Norwalk morning monitor, and, like the Anson Quintard noonday horn, a familiar Norwalk memory.

[1]Some of the original "lots" soon changed owners.

Samuel and Rebecca Platt, evidently survived him but a few months as her estate was inventoried March 26, 1790. The heirs of Jabez and Rebecca Raymond were their son Josiah and the children of their deceased daughter Ann, (wife of Samuel, son of John Platt 3d.) They appear to have lost an unmarried daughter, Hannah, in 1770.

Josiah 1st. son of Jabez and Rebecca Raymond, married, Nov. 5, 1765, Molly Merwine. She was from Greenfield Hill and belonged originally, it seems, to the New Haven family of that name. She, albeit but eighteen years of age, brought with her to her Norwalk married home (later the Geo. A. Raymond property in the rear of the Eli B. Bennett East avenue home) several of the Greenfield slaves who worked in and out doors and were a domestic power. It sometimes happened, not unnaturally, that the Raymond children, after having been sent to early bed, would indulge in a little before sleep "fun," but "Chloe" was depended upon to see that the "up stairs" peace was preserved. Of the boys, Thomas, Platt, Merwine, Josiah Jr. and Jabez, were born in the old pre-Tryon house which stood a little south of the yet standing Geo. A. Raymond home and which was close by (opposite side of street) the house of Capt. Samuel Jarvis, in which was born the second bishop of Connecticut, Rt. Rev. Abraham Jarvis. Geo. A., the youngest son of Josiah 1st. and Molly Raymond, and whose old time methods are unforgotten, was not born until six years after the town's conflagration. He married Pamelia Banks, of Greens Farms (a sister of a true Norwalk mother, Mrs. John L. Smith) and the two lived in the rebuilt house which is still in existence. Thomas, the oldest son of Josiah 1st., took his bride (Eunice Meeker) from his mother's Greenfield vicinity, and was the father of William Raymond, one of whose sons, Thomas I, now resides in West Street, South Norwalk.[1] godfather for one of old Commodore Christopher Raymond Perry's grand-children, Capt. Geo. W. Rogers, U. S. N., who was killed in the Civil War. Commodore McDonough's sons were educated in Norwalk. The Norwalk affinity to the Sands-Raymond-Perry connection (an honorable relationship) is thus traced. Capt. John Sands, son of Capt. James and Ann (Palmer) Sands of Block Island (1660), married Sybil, daughter of Simon Ray of Block Island. In 1696 Capt. John removed to Long Island and established himself at the famous neck, named for him, Sands Point. One of Capt. John's daughters, Abigail, married Hon. John Thomas, the first Judge of Westchester county, and Capt. John's nephew, Samuel Sands, married Mary Pell, of the Manor of Pelham. Capt. John Sands had a brother Samuel, and the two brothers (sons of Captain James) married two Ray sisters. Mary Sands, daughter of Capt. John, married, Dec. 1710, at Jamaica, L. I., as his second wife, Nathan Selleck, son of Jonathan and Abigail (Gold) Selleck of Stamford. Nathan Selleck was named for his grandfather, Hon. Nathan Gold, of Fairfield, the purchaser of the splendid Roger Ludlow American estate. The first wife of Nathan Selleck was Susanna, only child of William Hooker, of Farmington, Conn. She was married to Mr. Selleck on Aug. 12, 1708, at only eighteen years of age. She died Oct. 5, 1709, leaving one child, Susanna, born Sep. 3, 1709. This child grew to become the wife of Joseph St. John and hence the ancestress of the Norwalk Buckingham St. John, Buckingham Lockwood and Isaac Scudder Isaacs children's blood.

Her father, married second, Mary Sands, who, as was the case with Mr. Selleck's first wife (Susanna Hooker) lived only a short time. She died July 13, 1712, and her husband married her cousin Sarah Sands, (daughter of Samuel Sands). There were nine children by this union. (See Selleck lineage).

[1]The present West street in South Norwalk may with propriety be designated AN HONOR-WAY. As early as 1641 Andrew Ward and Francis Bell picked out their way over it en route to and from Stamford and New Haven. A portion of the acliivity was first called "Campfield's Hill" from the fact that Samuel, son of Matthew Campfield (King Charles 1662 charter nominee), and a grandson of Sarah, sister of Gov. Robert Treat, planted one (probably the first) of its hearthstones. Madam Knight, in her memorable trip

Thomas, and succeeded to his parents' occupancy of the original Hanford homelot. Hezekiah was one of the chief men of his day and served in the American Revolution. He lived in comfort and died on his reverend grandfather's home property. He located his son, Daniel 1st., on the Strawberry Hill estate, which was so long the home of the son of Daniel 1st., the late Joseph P. Hanford 1st.

Daniel 1st.

Note that the only two sons of Matthew 1st. and Sarah Seymour who remained in Norwalk were Thomas Seymour 2d. and Daniel 1st.

John 2d., son of Thomas 1st. and Hannah Seymour, married Sarah, daughter of Jachin and grand-daughter of John Gregory, Sr., and had:

John 3d.

Mary; married Thomas Hanford.

Sarah; married Daniel Trowbridge.

Abigail; married, Nov. 5, 1729, John Selleck of Stamford.

Rebecca; married first July 6, 1734, Elijah Whitney; married second John Bouton of Danbury.

Martha; married Samuel Jarvis.[1]

John Seymour 3d., son of John 2d. and Sarah (Gregory) Seymour, married Ruth, daughter of William and Margaret Belden. This Seymour-Belden alliance was not only the mingling of strong New England blood, but on account of the Belden sufferings and sacrifices in King William's French, Indian and American troubles, entitles every descendant to "Colonial Wars" recognition.

William Belden, born 1671, (nephew of the first John and Samuel Belden of Norwalk) was the son of Daniel and Elizabeth (Foote) Belden of Deerfield, Mass. Daniel and Elizabeth were married Nov. 10, 1660. Mrs. Belden's father was Nathaniel Foote 2d., son of Nathaniel Foote 1st. who had married, in 1615, in England, Elizabeth Deming, sister of John Deming, Sr., one of the fathers of Wethersfield, Conn. Nathaniel Foote 1st. died in this country, in 1646, and his widow married Gov. Thomas Wells. She died, July 28, 1683. Her grand-daughter, Mrs. Daniel Belden 1st., bequeathed Deming-Foote (a notable union) blood to a large number of Norwalk citizens to-day.

[1] On Sept. 16, 1696, a company of "French Mohawks" made an attack upon Daniel and Elizabeth Belden's Deerfield homestead. It was "lecture day," and the people, in from Stamford to Norwalk some twenty-six and one-half acres of land occupied at present in part by the Norwalk Armory and also the now vacant lot on West Avenue southeast of the Armory. A barn and the frame of a dwelling house stood upon the land at the time of its purchase by Mr. White, who there erected his home and also a shop for the manufacture of silverware. The shop stood where now is built the Connecticut turnpike. The year of said Seymour's sale to said White was the year of the latter's marriage to Elizabeth Jarvis. The oldest child by this union was Samuel, born July 13, 1740. This son married Nov. 1769, Huldah Sanford and had two sons (Samuel 2d., born Feb. 6, 1772; and Stephen, born May 13, 1775). He had three daughters (Elizabeth, b. Dec. 12, 1772; Sarah, born Jan. 27, 1784; Huldah, born July 6. 1785.) James was born Jan. 21, 1790. After the birth of the two sons and daughter first named, the senior Mrs. Samuel White died, on June 1, 1778, and Mr. White married, second, in Jan. 1781, Rebecca Pickett. To the three daughters of Samuel White, their grandfather, Peter, bequeathed on April 9, 1802, the twelve front acres of his purchase of March 13, 1738. His oldest grand-daughter, Elizabeth, daughter of Samuel, had married Noah, son of Hezekiah and Mary Jarvis.

[1] Samuel Jarvis 2d., who married Martha Seymour, and three daughters. His oldest son, Samuel Cooke Silliman, did not quit the town with himself, but remained upon the family site. He was twice married, first to Elizabeth Stratton and second to Dinah Comstock, whose home was in the more remote portion of the Canaan parish. He died Feb. 14, 1798. His brothers removed with the parents from New Canaan, but Joseph 1st., the youngest, a lad of fifteen at going away, came back, now a physician, to New Canaan, where he was afterward a continuous recipient of public honors. He married, Nov. 23, 1785, Martha Leeds[1] of the Stamford family of that name. These had seven children, viz: Joseph 2d.,[2] who married Martha, daughter of Sherman and Hannah (Fitch) Mitchell and grand-daughter of Rev. Justus Mitchell; William, who married a daughter of Esquire Eliphalet St. John, whose boys' seminary crowned Canoe Hill; Elizabeth, who married Hon. Minot, second son of Rev. Justus Mitchell, and was the head of the White Plains Mitchell family; Samuel C. 2d., who married a daughter of Uriah Reed[3] of Canaan Ridge (grand-daughter of Timothy, a grandson of John Reed of Crom-

[1]Daughter, probably, of Elisha and Sarah (Seeley) Leeds; born Dec. 27, 1756.

[2]He occupied the Silliman mansion still standing near where stood William Haynes' boundary "oak tree," at the south-eastern limit of Haynes' Ridge. He was a man of affairs during the busy six-day week and on Sunday the Silliman pew (south-west corner of the old Church Hill Meeting House) was regularly and reputably filled.

There have been three Congregational Church edifices in New Canaan and the sites of the first two so closely adjoined as to almost, if not quite, lap each other. The site of the present church is a few score feet from that of the second, upon which latter spot for one to stand is for one to be well nigh history-inspired. Here, in 1732, the first meeting house was built. Permission to organize an ecclesiastical society had already been granted, but the "objective point" was not reached for two years. The central figure in the portraiture which one at this spot mind-draws is that of a bright young man of 30 years, well related, who stood first in his college class and was New Canaan's earliest pastor. He was accompanied by a young bride, Anna Beard, and John and Anna Eells established themselves with one son and two daughters on that lovely spine, perhaps a mile eastward of their spiritual home, and known, very properly, to-day, as Carter Street. Mr. Eells' congregation at that time was a small but an earnest body of men and women. Nearest the pastor and immediately under his pulpit in that first church, sat John Bouton. He was then in years, but he was a good man and founded a line of worthies. Matthew Fitch also sat there and his short lived St. John wife, who became members just before the society experienced its first bereavement by the decease, May 8, 1736, of the pastor's first wife. Ebenezer and Hannah Carter, the progenitors of an excellent descent, also sat there. Mr. Eells' constituency was a growing one and a second edifice was demanded. This was built in 1752 and continued in use ninety years one of the most beautiful pictures of its last days, being the stately walk through its aisles on the way to the pulpit, of the benignant-faced, and benevolent-natured Rev. Theophilus Smith, as well as the entrance, at the west door, of his dignified mother-in-law, Mrs. Samuel St. John, leaning upon the arm of one of her sons, and followed, in summer, by her home-visiting children and grand-children, the party filling the St. John pew in the north-west corner of the sanctuary and constituting a noticeable group. The St. John children were much admired as was the case with Col. Enoch St. John's Alabamian charge, the two Pope lads, who also went to the same Church. These boys were masterly handlers of the gun, and having been asked how they acquired their skill chivalrously replied, "Our mother taught us." The bravery of Henry, the older brother, was put to a further test when sudden sickness or death having occurred, in the night, in the family, the courageous young southerner breasted a New England snow storm, and trudged, through deep darkness, over the New Canaan Ridge, in quest of assistance. This same Henry Pope wrote, in 1895, a graphic letter descriptive of his New Canaan life and sent it north. He died in Mobile, June 7, 1895.

[3]Uriah and Hannah Reed lived at the upper end of Haynes' Ridge, Canaan Parish, and their home, writes one, was "quite the picture of the birth-place of Whittier." Here were born three children, two of whom, Sally and Clara, lived to become of age. Sally, born May 2, 1791, married Joseph Fitch 2d., (son of Joseph 1st.,) who lived on the east side of Smith's Ridge, in the house now standing next south of the residence of Mrs. Stephen Keeler. Joseph and Sally Fitch had five children. This family eventually removed from New Canaan, and is to-day represented

Joseph F. Silliman of 1896, is a son of Joseph 2d. and Martha (Mitchell) Silliman. He married Carrie, daughter of Capt. Stephen Hoyt, the founder of Hoyt's New Canaan Nursery, and lives on the fine old Silliman place in that town, and while the willow[1] that waved over his great-grandfather's (Rev. Justus Mitchell) grave is missed, still it is a gratify-by a daughter, Julia, Mrs. Dr. Gould of Lockport, N. Y. Clara, daughter of Uriah and Hannah Reed, married Samuel Cooke Silliman, grandson of Rev. Robert Silliman of New Canaan, who had two children, one of whom, Samuel Cooke 3d. survives to-day, and is a druggist in Stamford.

In the township of Stamford was born "about break of ye day," Feb. 4, 1734, to David and Mercy Selleck, an infant to whom was given the name of Samuel, and between whose brothers, sisters and self a handsome patrimony for that period, was, before the lad quit his teens, apportioned. The infant had grown up and married when the Revolutionary War broke out. His patriotic soul was stirred and he joined the army only to be captured in the vicinity of the present Prospect Park, Brooklyn, and taken on one of the last days of the summer of 1776, to the prison ship, in New York waters, where he died, leaving a boy who, baptized the day after his birth, had been named David; which son, being only fifteen at the date of his father's decease, yet resolved to avenge that parent's fate, and consequently joined the Continentals who, the next spring, April 27, 1777, repulsed Tryon at Ridgefield upon his retreat from Danbury to Compo. The brave lad there fell, and his comrades, cutting the buttons from his coat, bore them to his widowed parent, than whom "never was the memory of a mother kept more sacred." This mother's next child to her heroic David was a daughter, Hannah, who married Uriah Reed (son of Timothy, who was son of Samuel, who was son of John 2d., son of John 1st.) and who was a quiet, independent farmer of New Canaan. He was a man who kept things snugly and his day's work was done when the sun was yet an hour high. He was a cousin of Matthew Reed of Norwalk (the father of Mrs. Isaac Belden.) Mrs. Reed was remarkable through life for sweetness of disposition and beauty of person. Her nephew and niece (Ebenezer, Jr. and Miss Rebecca Selleck) the children of her only brother Ebenezer Selleck of Westchester County, were among the closest personal friends of the late General James A. Garfield, U. S. A.

Before the future President Garfield entered college and while he taught for a season at Poetenskill, a centre at that time in the fast growing territory east of Troy, N. Y., he made the intimate acquaintance of New England and Oblong contributors to the settlement of Renssalaer County.

Samuel Selleck, the patriot, was an older brother of Jacob Selleck, born 1744, who became the well known land owner on Clapboard Hill, and he was a younger brother of the Gershom, "born ye 10th of July 1730 at 9 of ye clock," whose daughter Charlotte, baptized by Dr. Ebenezer Dibble, (tentatively of St. Paul's Church, Norwalk,) on May 2, 1763, and married on June 3, 1784, to Stephen, born April 12, 1767,* son of Bushnell Fitch, was the mother of Hon. Benjamin Fitch, founder of the Fitch Soldiers' home, Noroton.

[1]Said treelet indicating, topographically, "the homeward end of Haynes Ridge" also dropped gracefully over the mound† beneath which lay one of the principal dwellers upon that salubrious height. Rev. Justus Mitchell of Woodbury, had married at about the age of twenty-five, Martha, daughter of Rev. Josiah Sherman, also of Woodbury. Mrs. Mitchell's brother, Hon. Roger Minot Sherman, resided with his wife and two children in Norwalk, living at one time in France Street, (Edward Merrill place) and at another upon the East Avenue (Stevens place) of 1896. Like her Norwalk brother, Mrs. Mitchell was an individual of rare attainments, and ranked, among ladies, with Mrs. Stephen Buckingham of Norwalk. (See Chapman's Buckingham family, page 144.) Her husband, a man of calibre and character, had been called to New Canaan and attached to Haynes Ridge, bought, on Aug. 8, 1783, of Stephen Hanford, son of Samuel and Isabel Hanford, and grandson of William Haynes, a solid slice of twenty acres out of the fairest portion of the elegant patrimony, paying for the same the generous sum in that day, of 165 English pounds. This was the year in which Mr. Mitchell was ordained and commenced his active twenty-three

†The grave of Rev. Justus Mitchell. On Jan. 26, 1773, William Bolt and Jonathan Husted sold to the proprietors of Canaan parish one half acre in front of the meeting house "for public benefit of whole community." This plot became in time neglected and the citizens in later years resolved to reduce the uneven hillside to a grade-slope. The dust of the dead was undisturbed, but the grave stones were removed to the parade ground burial acre. The sites, in the Church Hill burial ground, of Rev. Mr. Mitchell's tomb and that of the patriotic Hannah Benedict (Carter) of Carter Street, are to-day marked.

ing antiquarian fact that two ancient Haynes Ridge homes have been so long and well preserved. Modern taste has not so essentially changed the "Mitchell house" (now Bond) as that the foundation and framing plot-and-plan by the grandson-in-law of the Ridge's founder[1] have been entirely obliterated, while the layout of the surrounding grounds yet makes it possible to mind-follow through the "lane" and "orchard," down to the river's "path," her girlhood rambles, whom several foreign lords to-day remember as grandmother[2]; and a clause in a last century testamentary injunction of the Silliman elder brother, whereby "Phillis" is remembered, suggests the scrupulous neatness, outdoors and indoors, of the Silliman "out kitchen," burnished by its rows of dairy-tin and all kept swept and shining by the family's old fashioned clever "colored help."[3]

The Norwalk-Canaan Cooke-Leete blood ceases with the Silliman and Mitchell descent. Rev. Samuel Cooke's first wife dying Aug. 11, 1721, he married, second, Esther, daughter of Nathaniel Burr of Fairfield. The Burr homestead which Esther Burr at her marriage to Mr. Cooke left, was one of the choice home-spots of New England. It embraced the level tract at the west end of Bridgeport to-day, near to the intersection by the Consolidated road of the Fairfield Street. She was separated from it, however, but a few months as she died, without issue, in less than a year after marriage. The good minister came to Norwalk for his third wife, and found her in Elizabeth, daughter of Joseph Platt, years ministry, a ministry spent entirely in New Canaan. The home was an intellectual home. The parents had been about four years married, and Elizabeth and Sherman Mitchell were respectively three and one years old, when William Haynes' meadow property was Mitchell-possessed. These children's uncle, Roger M. Sherman, was only seven years older than his niece Elizabeth, and had not at that time, by six years, entered college. After graduation and marriage, and settling himself in Norwalk, he visited his Haynes Ridge sister and found, doubtless, in her family, now augmented by her two remaining sons, Minot and Chauncey, something of an antidote for the bereavement underwent in Norwalk when he lost his two only children, laid, first, in Town Hill Cemetery, and now sleeping beside their parents in Fairfield.

[1]The 1896 Bond house on Haynes' Ridge, is believed to have been framed by Ebenezer Smith, who married Elizabeth, daughter of John Bartlett, and grand-daughter of William Haynes. Ebenezer Smith, son of Killiab and grandson of Lieut. Samuel Smith, of Hadley, Mass., was brother of Ephraim Smith who married another daughter (Isabel) of John Bartlett. These were the ancestors of Susanna Smith, who married Isaac Bell. See note, page 94.

[2]Lucy, daughter of Rev. William Bonney, incumbent of the New Canaan Congregational parish from 1808 to 1831. Mr. Bonney kept a boarding school on Haynes' Ridge, at which were educated a number of young men of future reputation. Mrs. Bonney was filled with the spirit of missions, and was wont to make house to house appeals in aid of the cause. Upon such occasions she carried with her a little heathen God, which object-lesson proved to be not without account. Lucy Bonney married a young man, Wm. B. Sherwood, who was a near relative of Rev. Wm. Bonney. These had a daughter, who married Lord Esslemont of Aberdeen, Scotland. Rev. Mr. Bonney had one only son, Samuel, (afterwards a missionary) whose village school companions were delightfully entertained by Mrs. Bonney upon their Saturday afternoon visits to her son, in later life, an intimate friend of Dr. Bayard Taylor.

The boys were dismissed from the Haynes Ridge (now Bond) home in time to allow for the beginning, when the sun went down, of Sunday. This "Saturday night keeping" marked life in ancient Canaan, the peaceful after-supper hush of its primitive households (amid which quiet the family bible on the stand was opened and reverently read from and the simple evening prayer offered) being a blessed prelude to the duties of the succeeding day, and involving a practice-principle which was, individual, community and nation wise, beyond value-estimate. The keeping of Saturday night was general throughout New England.

[3]Indian women in some cases were of service. After the victory over the Pequots at Fairfield, there seems to have been an influx, in South-western Connecticut, of such help-element.

elder. He said that he had heard his wife say that the owner of the land went to America, but that they never heard of him after, and that his name was John Burwell.

"Lambert soon returned to London, and with Mr. Junius Smith again applied to the Office of the Steward of the Lord of the Manor of Hemel Hempstead, but every obstacle was put in the way of their investigation. They made another call at the same office, and were informed that Mr. Briggs had gone to France, and would not return in a number of weeks. They explained the business to the clerk left in the office; he said the old Court Rolls of the Manor were at the office, but were locked up, and could not be got at until Mr. Briggs returned. Lambert called there a number of times afterwards, but Mr. Briggs had not returned when he left London. He made arrangements with Junius Smith, Esq., before leaving London to carry forward the investigation of the claim, but was unable to make any progress in the affair."

Burwell, born Apr. 14, 1715, second son of John and Hannah (Burwell) Betts, married, Nov. 1, 1740, Thankful, born Oct. 24, 1719, daughter of Thos. and Sarah Raymond and grand-daughter of John[1st] and Mary (Betts) Raymond. These had four children. The wife died Dec. 3, 1749, and Mr. Betts married, second, Sarah, daughter of Nathan Burwell, and had a daughter, Molly, born April 4, 1757, who married Oct. 21, 1780, Hezekiah Whitlock,[1] whose daughter Fanny, born Aug. 4, 1799, married, April 4, 1821, James Stevens,[2] of Norwalk. [1] A son of Hezekiah and Molly (Betts) Whitlock, viz., Lewis, kept, for many years, the Norwalk lighthouse on the old "Smith's," later, "Norwalk" Island. "Uncle Lewis" maintained a sort of bachelor's quarters on the island, but his home was a hospitable retreat to parties who were storm-surprised and storm-stayed. He lived in the whitewashed stone cottage which was erected at the foot of the lighthouse, and picturesquely stood beneath the willow. Mr. Whitlock's island life was rather monotonous, but a small slate which hung on the inside of his living room door and upon which he recorded the passing of vessels up and down the Sound, evidenced that the tedium of his office was thus, in a measure, relieved.

[2] James Stevens, son of Daniel,[2d.] who was son of Daniel[1st.] and Sally (Brown) Stevens, of the Oblong, was, with Henry Selleck, engaged, in early life, in the large manufacturing establishment of the patriarch Caleb Benedict, Sr., of Benedict's Hill, subsequently Brushy Ridge, New Canaan. Both young men came afterwards to Norwalk, and here established families. Mr. Stevens was long the proprietor of the "Connecticut Hotel," corner of Main and Wall Streets, (site of present Boston Store) and Mr. Selleck, for years, the first selectman of Norwalk. The children of James Stevens were Georgianna (Mrs. S. Henry Bailey), Mary (Mrs. Eli S. Quintard) and Susan (Mrs. Frederick T. Betts). The parents and sisters are dead, the grand-children being the late Samuel and James S. Bailey, and the present Mrs. Rev. Frederick R. Sanford, Mrs. Charles DeH. Brower, Mr. LeGrand C. Betts and Mr. Frederick Quintard. Mr. Stevens' son-in-law, S. H. Bailey (son of Noah Bailey of Norwalk), was a St. Louis, Mo., merchant, Mr. F. T. Betts (son of Hon. Thaddeus Betts of Norwalk) is a Norwalk farmer, and Mr. Eli S. Quintard is a New Haven and Derby R. R. official. Mr. Quintard is a son of Anson and Polly (Sanford) Quintard, who resided in the Joseph Keeler homestead, at present the tenement quarters opposite the coal office of C. T. Leonard. Eli S. Quintard was a New York and New Haven railroad official during the early period of said company's existence and his mention summons up primitive memories of that, to-day, colossal corporation. Among Mr. Quintard's contemporary and somewhat-later conductor-brethren were the well-remembered Upson, Dennis, William Comstock, William Lineburgh, Ward Nichols, John Bradley, George Cornwall, William Bauch, Frederick Lockwood, "Jack" Stock, William H. Wallace, Joseph Franklin, and Strickland. Messrs. Upson and Dennis were among the earliest conductors. Mr. Comstock, who commanded the 8 A. M. "Boston Express" out of New York on the morning (May 1853) of the fatal plunge of a large portion of the train into the Norwalk river, now resides in the West. Mr. Lineburgh, of Norwalk birth, has since been an enterprising citizen of Bridgeport. Ward wrote from Schenectady, N. Y., to Norwalk, inquiring as to his brother's children. The reply resulted in a visit of one of his Norwalk or Wilton nephews (David Betts[1]) to him in Schenectady. He had been married and had one child, but both mother and child were dead, and the father (Jared) married, last (see page 142) the mother of Major-General John E. Wool, U. S. A., of Troy, N. Y.

THOMAS AND DEBORAH BETTS LINEAGE.

Thomas[2d.] and Sarah (Marvin) Betts, son and daughter-in-law of Thos. Betts,[1st.] had a grandson Thos. (son of Thos.[3d.] and Deborah Betts), who married May 22, 1748, Elizabeth Benedict. These last, Thos. and Elizabeth Betts, had two sons, Thos. and Hezekiah. Between the two brothers there was seven years age-difference. They were born in the house in lower France Street, which the existing Miss Juliette Betts home supplanted. Thomas, born March 14, 1753, married, March 19, 1782, Elizabeth Smith, of Smithtown, L. I., and had George W., born June 6, 1800, who married Julia, daughter of Dr. William Miner, an old physician of East Broadway, New York City. Geo. W. Betts was a large Pearl Street, N. Y., carpet dealer. He purchased the Lewis Mallory estate on East Avenue, Norwalk, and in 1846 enlarged the same, founding a country home thereat. Here the family, consisting of Mr. and Mrs. Betts and their sons and daughters, Elizabeth (Mrs. Jas. Selleck), Wm. M., Julia, Sarah (Mrs. Henry Banks), Geo., Chas. and Hattie, enjoyed a delightful residence for several years. Mr. Betts was a man of fine presence and of liberal spirit and one who took an intelligent and active interest in Norwalk. Upon the completion of the building and furnishing of his handsome Norwalk home a brilliant function therein occurred on the evening of Jan. 3, 1848, the occasion being the wedding of his oldest daughter. The family has now entirely disappeared from Norwalk. The parents sleep within the town's confines, and the children are living elsewhere. Of the two sons William M. married into the Stamford Sanford family, George is connected with the Devoe Paint establishment of Fulton St., N. Y., and Charles lives in Evansville, Ind.

Hezekiah, second son of Thos. and Elizebeth Betts, was the Capt. Hezekiah Betts of Revolutionary fame. With his brother Thos. he was brought up on the Juliette Betts France Street premises of 1896. He married, Oct. 1, 1785, Grace, born Oct. 5, 1765, daughter of Hezekiah[1st.] and Deborah (Hoyt) Hanford. Hezekiah Hanford was son of Samuel who was son of Rev. Thomas Hanford. He inherited his father Samuel's homestead, which was that of Rev. Thos., southwest corner East Avenue and Fort Point St. of 1896. He was a prominent Norwalker and served in Capt. Eliphalet Lockwood's company of "Coast Guards" during the Revolutionary War. His wife was a daughter of Caleb (son of Zerubbabel, son of Walter, the settler,) Hoyt, to whom he was mar-

Maj. Jonathan Selleck, son of David and Susannah Selleck, the settlers, came to Stamford in 1660. He married, May 11, 1663, Abigail, daughter of Hon. Richard Law, of Stamford, "the first gentleman of the colony," and had Jonathan, born July 11, 1664, who married Jan. 5, 1685, Abigail, daughter of Maj. [1]Miss Phœbe, born Sept. 26, 1763, and her sister, Sarah, left, finally, the Ferris Hill home and established themselves on the old Moses Comstock[1st.] (their grandfather) estate on Comstock Hill. They were maiden ladies who kept the ancient place until it was accidently set on fire by their slave, Onesimus. The old building having burned down, the sisters removed a few rods further down the hill (south) where they passed the remainder of their days. "Miss Phœbe's" reminiscences are found in "Hall's Norwalk," page 173. Their uncle, Abijah,[1st.] (son of Moses[1st.]) lived, first, in what is now the "Wardwell house" in Silvermine. It seems highly probable that he built the same. He surrendered it, however, to his son, Thomas, who there resided and there received the fleeing sufferers at the time of Tryon's fiery raid in 1779. When Abijah Comstock gave up his Silvermine home to his son, Thomas, he established the large farm in Vista, which his great grand-children to-day enjoy, and which is with grace presided over by his grand-daughter-in-law, the widow of Samuel Comstock[2d.] herself the daughter of David Comstock (son of David), of Comstock Hill.

The slave, Onesimus, before mentioned, was a character in his way. Older Norwalkers still remember him as seated upon one of the Comstock Hill horses, he rode, the attendant of Miss Phœbe, to and from Norwalk. "O'ne" was a Long Islander, born before the Revolution. He was Norwalk-purchased by Sarah and Phœbe Comstock, the aunts of "Miss Phœbe." The lad's original bill of sale, of which a copy is here presented, is in the possession of Hon. A. H. Byington, of Norwalk. "O'ne" is said to have been the last slave owned in Connecticut.

Hooker.[1] Mrs. Nathan Hooker Selleck died Oct. 5, 1709, leaving a daughter, Susannah, who married Joseph St. John, the father of Hooker, William and Buckingham St. John, of Norwalk. Nathan Selleck married, (see note page 126) second, Dec. 1710, Mary Sands, of Jamaica, L. I., who died July 15, 1712. He married, third, Jan. 1, 1713, Sarah Sands, cousin of his second wife, and had Nathan, born Sept. 15, 1726, who married, Sept. 17, 1745, Katherine, daughter of John Clock, of Stamford, who had Phœbe, who married, Feb. 1, 1776, as his second wife, Thos., son of Abijah, and Deborah Comstock, of New Canaan. Thomas[2] and Phœbe lived in the Wardwell house in Silvermine, which house three years after their marriage was crowded, at the time of Tryon's incendiarism, with Norwalk refugees. Their son, Nathan Selleck Comstock, married Betty, daughter of Ezra Seymour,[3] of White Oak Shade, and had Seymour, born 1804, who married Matilda, daugh-

[1]William Hooker was the third son of Rev. Samuel and Mary (Willetts) Hooker, of Farmington, Conn. His father was a son of Rev. Thomas Hooker, founder of Hartford, and his mother was a daughter of Capt. Thos. Willetts, of Plymouth, Mass., and the first Mayor of New York City. He was a brother of Mrs. Rev. Stephen Buckingham of Norwalk.

[2]On the afternoon before Norwalk was burned Thomas Comstock, born Jan. 26, 1747, was dwelling in peaceful security in the house now standing in Silvermine, west side of the road and second house above the "Crofoot corner" (See note page 115). The alarmed Norwalkers, however, soon put in an appearance, as hastening out of the doomed town they sought shelter in the suburbs. Mr. Comstock opened wide his doors to receive them and the refugees were made welcome. The times were stringent and it was difficult, at that date, to money-pay Mr. Comstock for the unexpected expense he had incurred. Two well-known benefitted Norwalk men, Simeon Raymond and Goold Hoyt, who themselves had suffered by the foreign incendiaries, generously proposed to surrender to Mr. Comstock any damage-claims which might ultimately stand in their favor. These claims were afterward satisfied by the Ohio "Firelands," apportionment, and as Messrs. Raymond and Hoyt's shares were put to Mr. Comstock's credit, the latter became proprietor of a Western estate. Time rolled along and it was not until 1806 that Mr. Comstock's son, Nathan S., determined, with some others, to journey to Ohio and look up land matters. The companions reached their destination, but the land was unmarked, and local information could not easily be obtained and the company returned from a bootless errand. Three years passed and Nathan S. Comstock, hoping for better things, arranged for a second investigation trip. He now took with him Darius Ferris, of Ferris Hill, not a half mile north of the Thos. Comstock place, and Elijah Hoyt. There is a record that the three men took a span of horses which, attached to a wagon, drew the necessary implements for clearing up wild lands. After a long and wearisome journey they finally reached the mouth of Huron River, where they found a Moravian Mission house for the Indians. The Norwalkers were hospitably greeted and offered the use of the Mission quarters until they could complete a lodge further inland for their protection. The trio of men set themselves to work and it was not long before they asked the few white men in that part of the country to assist them in raising and putting up the new building, which was the very first house erected in the present township of Norwalk, Ohio, and which was built and owned by Nathan Selleck Comstock, grandfather of Stephen Comstock, of Morgan Avenue (1896), of Norwalk. The next year, Abijah, brother of Nathan S. Comstock, removed from this town to Ohio, and was the second settler of our namesake town in that Western State. He there remained and lived until 1857.

[3]The Seymour (Ezra) into whose family Nathan S. Comstock married, lived on the property now occupied by Selleck Y. St. John, on the Stamford road, New Canaan. Ezra Seymour's children were Ezra,[2d.] Holly, Henry, Betty (Mrs. Nathan S. Comstock), Abigail, Nancy, Hannah, Rebecca, Lavinia, Sybil.

Ezra[2d.] was a farmer, who beyond carrying his produce to market, seldom left home. He was once in Silvermine, at a sister's funeral, but was never probably east of said locality, and he had been west as far as North Stamford and north as far as Ridgefield. He was unmarried, lived in primitive simplicity with his sister, Abigail, and gave his goods to St. Mark's Church, New Canaan. His sister, Betty, Mrs. Nathan S. Comstock, had a daughter, Betty, (sister of Seymour Comstock) born 1812, and baptized in Silvermine on the day of her mother's funeral and within a week of her father's decease, who married March 18, 1833, David S., son of Thomas H. Rockwell, of Ridgefield (See note page 114).

David S. Rockwell purchased the Davenport School property on Church Hill, New Canaan, (see was the daughter of Nathan and Susanna (Hooker) Selleck. Nathan Selleck, born Sept. 12, 1786, was the oldest child of Jonathan and Abigail (Gold) Selleck, and his wife, Susanna, baptized June 8, 1690, was the only child of William Hooker, of Farmington, Conn. As William Hooker was the son (third) of Rev. Samuel (and Mary Swanzey) Hooker, who was the son of Rev. Thomas Hooker, the founder of Hartford, it follows that all of Eliphalet and Susanna Lockwood's descendants are of Thomas Hooker blood. These same Lockwood descendants are also of the blood of Major Nathan Gold, of Fairfield, and of Hon. Richard Law, of Stamford. Hooker, Law and Gold is one of the strongest family combinations in New England.

William, the oldest son of Eliphalet and Susanna Lockwood, married, Dec. 31, 1796, Hannah, born June 26, 1776, daughter of James and Sarah (Weed) Selleck, of Norwalk. James Selleck, born 1742, was the eighth son of David and Mercie (Waterbury) Selleck. David Selleck, born Dec. 23, 1700, was the oldest child of Nathaniel and Sarah (Lockwood) Selleck, of Stamford. He was married, Jan. 3, 1723, to Mercie, born Jan. 27, 1706, daughter of Lieut. David and Sarah (Weed) Waterbury, which David and Sarah were married (Lieutenant Waterbury's second marriage) Aug. 11, 1698. David Selleck's mother is supposed to have been the daughter of Jonathan Lockwood, of Stamford, which Jonathan was a brother of Ephraim Lockwood,[1st] of Norwalk. The children of William and Hannah Lockwood were:

William Selleck, born Oct. 1, 1797.
Hooker, born April 2, 1801, died July 5, 1801.
Susanna, born May 31, 1803, (Mrs. George St. John).
Charlotte S., born Dec. 29, 1805, (Mrs. Leonard Bradley).

William Lockwood died Jan. 17, 1843. His son, William S., one of Norwalk's staunchest and most excellent sons, married Oct. 26, 1831, Catherine, born Dec. 17, 1807, daughter of William and Catherine (King) Hawley, of Ridgefield, and had:

Jane Elizabeth, born July 20, 1839.[1]

William Augustus, (M.D.) born March 26, 1841.[2]

Edith Judson, born September 7, 1866, (Mrs. Coleman Williams).

Sarah, born October 15, 1868, (Mrs. T. Halsted Myers).

Henrietta Eugenia, born May 19, 1881.

Edith Judson, daughter of Henry E. and Jane Elizabeth Hawley, was married Jan. 24, 1894, to Coleman Williams, and had Sarah, born Feb. 5, 1895; Edith, born May 4, 1897, and Coleman Hawley, born March 31, 1898.

Mrs. Dr. Wm. Augustus Lockwood died March 8, 1882.

trips between the two places named, their city berth being adjacent to Catharine, James and Peck Slips and the annual "corporation wharfage" at each berth averaging about ten dollars for each vessel. The receipts for pierage, still preserved, are in olden form, being signed, from 1795 to 1803, by John Bingham, Charles Smith and Moses and Daniel Coe.

Some few years subsequently, 1812-15, Long Island Sound commerce was almost annihilated by the British Commodore Hardy and the "Liverpool packet." Sad work was made with Connecticut schooners and sloops. Our North shore sailors, however, notably Capt. Dan'l. Merritt (ancestor of the 1896 Norwalk Merritts), sometimes eluded the enemy and made their way through the East River into the city. From 1815 to the beginning of local steam navigation, in 1824, there were several Norwalk coasting proprietors. Uriah Selleck,[1] one of whose vessels (see page 51) was lost in the memorable autumn gale of 1821, was one of these. Eben. D. Hoyt was a shipmaster at that time. In the summer

Warren, son of Joseph, was well known in this community. He married Lydia, daughter of Hezekiah Raymond, and a sister of Mrs. Capt. Daniel K. Nash. Their residence was on Flax Hill. Mr. and Mrs. Warren were blessed with nine children, the oldest son being the heroic Dr. Hezekiah B. Warren. This physician of character "too valuable to die so young" (see page 111) was a grandson of Hezekiah Raymond, whose wife Lydia, was a daughter of Rev. James and Mary Lockwood, said Mrs. Mary Lockwood having been a daughter of Rev. Moses Dickinson, third pastor of the First Congregational Church, Norwalk.

The Warren incumbency of the Norwalk sail vessel route was at a time of interesting metropolitan history. John Jacob Astor had just established himself in Water Street and made the second of his nearly three hundred property purchases. Alexander Hamilton had recently become the proprietor of the twenty-acre "Grange," a splendid tract in the upper part of the island. Aaron Burr, who in 1804 mortally wounded Hamilton, had bought his handsome Richmond Hill, now Varick Street. The Rosevelts' lucrative plate glass plant had been established and their elegant home (Broadway and Fourteenth Street) opened; and High Constable Hayes, who dared to name his son after Aaron Burr, which son held for a half-century the office of cashier of the North River Bank, was then an influential citizen.

[1]Uriah Selleck's dwelling was on the N. W. corner of the present Main Street and Union Avenue. His store and dock were (see note page 51) near the Leonard coal wharf of to-day and opposite the Joseph Keeler, afterward Anson Quintard, home. Joseph Keeler was a son of Capt. Samuel Keeler, whose "home lot land" was the southern boundary of Ralph Isaacs' 1750 purchase, covered in 1894 by the Norwalk Opera House, Post-Office, Railway station, Masonic building, Club house, Isaacs Street and Hanford's Floral Hall. Mrs. Joseph Keeler was Hannah, daughter of Isaac Hoyt, of South Norwalk, and a sister of Charles Hoyt, formerly of North Avenue. At the decease, in 1822, of Uriah Selleck, his dock and store property fell to the widow of his son Zalmon, Mrs. Eliza Selleck, mother of Mrs. Wm. K. James, whose husband afterward bought the property. The next store above Uriah Selleck's was that of Joseph Keeler, the premises to the extreme north of whom on Harbour Avenue, now Water Street, was owned by Ebenezer D. Hoyt.

Uriah Selleck's grand-daughter, Maria Philips Selleck, the now venerable (Mrs. William K. James) has, from childhood, been the intimate friend of the Peter Lockwood descendants through his grandson Buckingham St. John Lockwood. The daughters of the latter, Elizabeth, Mary Esther and Julia Abigail, and also such well recalled Norwalk daughters as Elizabeth, Ann and Sophia Isaacs, and Mary Esther, Susan Virginia, Sarah Louisa and Julia Belden St. John, and Margaret and Amelia Belden, and Mary and Harriet Hoyt, and Mary and Margaret Newkirk, and Elizabeth Jarvis, Harriet Betts, Augusta Gregory, Elizabeth St. John and Charlotte Camp were acquaintances and companions in days agone. Mrs. James is of the same Hon. Richard Law blood as are the descendants, Lockwoods and others, of Captain Joseph St. John.[2d.] Her father Zalmon, born March 31, 1795, was son of Uriah, baptized Oct. 31, 1762-3, who was son of Nathaniel, born Oct. 29, 1725, who was son of David, born Dec. 23, 1700, who was son of Nathaniel, born April 7, 1678, who was son of John and Sarah (Law) Selleck. John Selleck married Sarah, daughter of Hon. Richard Law, October 25, 1669. He was born in Boston, Feb. 21, 1643, and baptized two days afterward. Mrs. James has been a benefactor of St. Paul's Parish, Norwalk, and has generously erected the Ludlow monument in the East Norwalk of 1896 to the memory of Roger Ludlow, the founder of Norwalk.

of 1814 he built on Uriah Selleck's dock the sloop Teaser. Afterward the firm name was "E. D. Hoyt & Son" (Edwin), the line consisting of the Union, Captain Jedediah Brown; the Mechanic, Captains Samuel Daskam and Alden Brothwell; the Citizen, Captains Samuel Pennoyer and Sherman T. Morehouse, and Sabina, (Capt. Francis Hoyt was an officer in this line) made tri-weekly trips, Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday, to New York.

Noah Selleck having bought out the Hoyts, sailed from the Hoyt dock close to the "bridge." His line embraced the sloops, Mary Ann Selleck, Domestic and Surplus as an extra. Captains Joseph Byxbee, Isaac Demmon and Isaac Selleck commanded the boats. At this time Captain Willis J. Merritt built and ran the sloop Mary Willis upon the Norwalk route. Noah Selleck afterward associated with him his brother Isaac. The two were succeeded by the latter's son Capt. Isaac Selleck, Jr. Charles T. Leonard now became temporary proprietor, and finally Capt. Isaac Demmon controlled the line. This was the end (barring a sort of desultory occupancy of the route by the sloop John I. Perry belonging to A. J. Meeker & Brother) of Norwalk packet history, which end was tragic. The last vessel of the last regular line, the Domestic, was burned to the water's edge off Shippan Point, and her last commander, Capt. Isaac Demmon, died in the arms of Captain Isaac Selleck, Jr., on West Avenue, Norwalk.

The passage by sail to the metropolis, sometimes accomplished in twenty-four hours and often requiring a considerably longer time for its performance, was an event in gone days. At first the greater part of the "hull" was "berthed off" as the passenger list ran at times to over fifty, but as the Captains Selleck and Merritt era neared, more space was appropriated to freight. Market day was a busy one at the "bridge," and there was a stir when the "wagoners" arrived. James Wilkes drove from New Fairfield, Nathan Benedict from Ridgebury, John Knowles from New Milford, Benedict Dunning from Brookfield, Hull from Danbury, Myram Dikeman from Redding, Samuel Seymour from North Wilton, Russel Mead from Ridgefield, and Nathaniel Close from North Salem. The produce was stored below deck, excepting the crates of live fowl and barrels of vegetables and fruit which stood in the front of the "quarter deck." The cabin, divided into two parts by sliding doors, was appropriated to the captain and passengers. There were no "state rooms" but "curtained berths" (on the Orion "five lengths") lined both sides of both cabins. In a Hudson River cabin Alexander Hamilton, in 1787, penned the opening chapter of The Federalist, "undoubtedly the most profound treatise on government that has ever been written." No Norwalk sloop cabin, it is true, was ever thus distinguished, nevertheless it may well be believed that the time there spent by our merchant and professional men of the same era was not entirely misimproved. Our business men of more recent years, such as George Bishop, Charles Isaacs and Thomas Warner, patronized the route, the latter of whom when intending to make the trip was wont after bank hours to go to the dock and interrogate the captain as to "the prospect." If the reply came "fine weather and fair wind," the cashier was sure to be aboard at the hour of sailing, and almost as certain to find himself at James Slip in the morning. Upon the down passage the boat was considered well under way when "Sheffield Island" was cleared, between which and "Sand's Point" lay the long Sound stretch, the route leading from thence through the Lower Sound, East River, "the Gate," the east and west channels (Blackwell Island), and round the "Hook" to the finish. Capt. Jacob Nash, born in Ridgefield in 1772, but a resident afterward of Norwalk, was a master mariner, and so was his son Capt. Daniel K. Nash. The latter and his neighbor Capt. William H. Ferris are to-day well-remembered Norwalk sea and sailing masters, and their business was large.

Sloop and schooner passsenger traffic gradually fell off when steam superceded the wind as a motive power. John Fitch's great-grandfather resided for a short time (1652) in Norwalk, but the great inventor himself launched the original steam-propelled vessel in the world on "Collect Pond," Smith's Valley, now Center Street, New York. Some thirty-six years after Fulton's CLERMONT, Henry Betts of Norwalk, assisted by two or three citizens of means, constructed a small engine, and planting it in a modest craft, prepared for the "trial." The start upon the maiden trip was made and "Oyster Shell Point" arrived at when the vessel was blown up, thus putting a period to Norwalk river steam navigation until the appearance in the harbor, in the spring of 1824, of the pioneer steamboat GEN. LAFAYETTE, which plied between Norwalk and New York until supplemented later in the season by the JOHN MASHALL, Capt. Pennoyer, afterward Capt. John Brooks, an enterprise for which Henry Belden, first president of the Fairfield County Bank, stood responsible. The MARSHALL made three trips each way every week, and lay, in Norwalk, at Uriah Selleck's dock (neighborhood of Charles T. Leonard's present coal yard), whatever shore "office" the boat had being in the same Selleck's country store on the dock. In the spring of 1829 the BALTIMORE was put upon the route by Cornelius Vanderbilt[1] as an "opposition boat." This gave place in 1830-1 to the CITIZEN, which succeeded in "running off" the JOHN MARSHALL. The Flushing Peck's now appeared upon the scene, who being associated with Charles Hoyt and having purchased the CITIZEN from Vanderbilt, ran the same while the FAIRFIELD was building by Lawrence & Smeeden near Eighth Street, New York. When the FAIRFIELD was completed and had proven a success the NIMROD[2] was started, and when finished, put in commission in about 1836. Previous to the latter's arrival the WESTCHESTER[3] ran for a brief period, in opposition. The NIMROD being ready, the two distinguished Sound commanders,

[1]Called at that time "the proprietor of Long Island Sound."

[2]The NIMROD was at first a disappointment. The boat's stern lines had been imperfectly drawn and the vessel "dragged water." A false stern was added which remedied the trouble.

[3]This boat was put upon the route during the cholera season. As so many fled the city at that time the fare to and from Norwalk had been raised to seventy-five cents. The Vanderbilt owner of the WESTCHESTER lowered the fare to twelve and one-half cents, which created fierce opposition and aroused an intense interest. The first boats came to "the bridge" and their arrival was the signal for the discharge of a cannon from Town House Hill and the gathering of multitudes at that point and at Bessey's Hill.

The WESTCHESTER was withdrawn from the Norwalk route to be placed on the Hudson river as one of Joseph St. John[1st.] made his will Sept. 24, 1731, and dying two days afterward, the same was probated Jan. 12, 1731-2. In this document mention is made of his wife Sarah, his son Joseph[2d.] and his daughters Mary Eversley and Elizabeth. His wife survived him until Aug. 27, 1735. His son, Joseph[2d.], like his father before him, was an only son, who, by his marriage to Susannah, born Sept. 3, 1709, daughter of Nathan and Susannah (Hooker) Selleck, conveyed to his children and their descendants the staunchest of Colonial blood (see page 293). The children of Joseph[2d.] and Susannah St. John were :

Susannah. (Mrs. Eliphalet Lockwood[2d.])
Sarah, born Dec. 6, 1734; died Apr. 18, 1741.
Stephen, (Col.) born 1736.
Hooker, born 1742; died March 10, 1782, (unmarried.)[1]
William, born 1744; died Feb. 1, 1800.
Buckingham, born 1745; died May 5, 1771, (unmarried).
———— (son) died ten years old.

Joseph St John[2d.] died Sept. 1753, his wife having preceded him to the tomb on Dec. 4, 1749. His will was drawn Oct. 1, 1751, and admitted to court Oct. 5, 1756. He bequeathed to his oldest son (Col. Stephen) the handsome amount, in that day, of £1000, albeit Stephen was not yet of age. He testamentarily enjoined that his "son William and son Buckingham be brought up to learning in ye college at New Haven". William, for some reason, did not take up a collegiate course, but Buckingham was Yale connected in 1770, and was drowned in Long Island Sound whilst on a passage from New Haven to Norwalk, May 4, 1771.

who was son of Thomas Scudder[1st.] of L. I., the father of the Scudder family of America. Thomas.[1st.], great-grandfather of Isaac Scudder[1st.], is believed to have been the son of Dr. Henry Scudder who presided at the (1643) convention appointed by order of the King, at Westminister Abbey (see Munsell's History of Suffolk County, L. I.) Thomas Scudder[2d.] died in 1690, leaving sons and daughters. Benj.[1st.] was one of his two only sons. Benj.[1st.] died in 1736 leaving eight sons, two of whom, Isaac[1st.] and Ezekiel, settled in Norwalk. Isaac Scudder married Elizabeth, daughter of Joseph[1st.] and Sarah (Betts) St. John, and had :

Isaac.
Sarah. (Mrs. Benjamin Isaacs).
Elizabeth. (Married Aug. 27, 1776, Job Bartram).

Elizabeth, daughter of Isaac and Elizabeth Scudder, was the third wife of Job Bartram. Mr. Bartram married, first, Nov. 18, 1762, Jerusha Thompson, who died Nov. 23, 1773. The widower married, second, Nov. 7, 1774, Abigail Starr, and had Daniel Starr Bartram, born 1775, who was the father, among other children, of Helen, the late Mrs. Dr. Augustus Sammis of South Norwalk and New Haven. Mrs. Abigail Bartram died Jan. 14, 1776 and her husband married, third, Elizabeth, daughter of Isaac[1st.] and Elizabeth Scudder. The children of Job and Elizabeth (Scudder) Bartram were Isaac, born March 27, 1777, died next day; John, born Dec. 27, 1778, died Feb. 17, next; Isaac Scudder, born July 2, 1780, died Feb. 27, 1783; Eulalia, born Dec. 22, 1782 and Betsy, born July 10, 1785. Betsy died unmarried.

Eulalia, daughter of Job and Elizabeth Bartram married Rev. Henry Whitlock, Rector 1800-1811, of St. Paul's Church, Norwalk.

Dr. Henry Scudder, the eminent India Missionary descended from another branch of the same family from whence sprang the Norwalk Scudders.

[1]Hooker St. John's complete estate was distributed April 17, 1792, among his two surviving brothers, Stephen and William, and his sister Susannah (Mrs. Eliphalet Lockwood), each receiving an equal share. The value of the whole estate was nearly £2,000. He owned the wharf lot, still held in the Lockwood family, just east of Norwalk Bridge, which lot was valued in 1792, at £50.

In the burying ground at the head of the Ridgefield Street stands a tombstone bearing the following inscription:

"HERE LIES INTERRED
JAMES BENEDICT."

The tomb's tenant was born in, it is probable, the new John Benedict home of 1675, a few furlongs to the north of the Norwalk St. Paul's Church of 1896. This home at that day was in the Norwalk suburbs, a long distance from church and school, which may account for the lad's spending a goodly portion of his earlier days with his grandparent, the widow of Thomas Benedict, Sr., who lived close by both church and school. He had enjoyed, evidently, the tuition of an old Norwalk and Greenwich master, Thomas, son of Rev. Thomas Hanford, Sr., and at the age of twenty-three united with several of his grandparents Norwalk neighbors in purchasing from the Indian Catonah, the magnificent tract now known as Ridgefield. A twelve-month after this purchase he married into the family of one of the Norwalk braves who gallantly defended the colony against the red men, Sarah, daughter of Thomas Hyatt, and husband and bride at once identified themselves with the now Lenox of Connecticut, Ridgefield in this County, within the soil of which their ashes are urned.

The grandson of this worthy Norwalk-Ridgefield pair, Joel, a Nassau Hall man, afterward Rev. Joel Benedict, D. D., "a great man in Israel", was the father of Mrs. President Eliphalet Nott of Union College, N. Y., and the grandfather of the second wife of Rt. Rev. Dr. Alonzo Potter, Bishop of Pennsylvania. This estimable lady, Sarah, daughter of Esquire Robert Benedict of Richfield Springs, N. Y., was the step-mother of Rt. Rev. Dr. Henry C. Potter, and of his brother, Rev. Dr. Eliphalet N. Potter, late President of Hobart College, N. Y., (see page 133).

PRO PATRIA.

A little east of the outlet of the stream which spends itself in the salt water inlet heading where the Norwalk Tramway Co. finds, in 1896, its Stamford terminus at the foot of Noroton Hill, stood, on the highway, one hundred and sixteen years agone, the home of sufferers in the cause of American liberty. Phineas Waterbury and Elizabeth Lounsbury,[1] his wife, with a brave boy, Nathan, just out of his teens, and three or four younger brothers, and two or so sisters, made up the family. Norwalk had been burned, Rev. Moses Mather was captivity-doomed, the enemy well understood how to harass the shore dwellers, and the liberty and loyalty loving Waterbury's were in danger. The father was prisoner-destined, and the oldest boy, Nathan, served in the coast-guard. Night shrouded Shippan and settled over Noroton when the ear within caught the sound of discharging musketry and heard footstep-pattering along the King's road-way. Elizabeth's Nathan had fallen and was brought home dead. Thought may rank speech but feeling, elsewhere than in art, ranks both. In Elizabeth Waterbury's bleeding home honors at that awful hour were indeed laid low and hope had well nigh flown, but still "over against" her martyr-hearthstone Time's iron pen has deterringly written "Ichabod".

[1] Elizabeth Lounsbury (Mrs. Phineas Waterbury), daughter of Monmouth[2d] and Jemima Lounsbury, was of tall figure, very erect even in age, and although sprightly and cheerful, was of quiet, almost Quaker-like taste. Her home (north side of Connecticut turnpike, 1896, a short distance east of the Noroton cove and stream mentioned in the text), was the fond visiting spot of her daughter Mary (Mrs. Thos. Benedict[6th]), while her daughter Sarah (mother of the late Isaac Selleck, Sr. of East Norwalk) graphically told of its maternal head. Phineas, born Feb. 18, 1773, a younger brother of Mary and Sarah, was for a time connected with a New York ship-yard; while Noah, born Aug. 2, 1775, and a lad of some six or seven when his brother Nathan was killed, was first a Southern sailing-master, and afterwards became a man of means, and a founder of families of distinction to-day. He married a widow lady, whose son, Wm. McKin-

Mary, the fifteen summer's child when Nathan was shot, lived to tell of her mother's daring during said Mary's long age-tarry with her daughter, the faithful Catharine Benedict, of the old Benedict home which was planted on the West Avenue of 1896. The sister of Mary—Sarah—was the grandmother of the recent "Selleck Brothers" (Isaac, Geo. W., Henry S., a firm of Norwalk business repute) and Frank, and great-grandmother of the late young Clarence (son of Geo. W.) Selleck, whose art sketches and published letters while abroad were indicative of present attainment, and argued much of promise for the future.

Noah, a younger child of Elizabeth, and brother of Nathan Waterbury, has descendants, in 1896, who are commercially, civilly and socially metropolis-prominent; while Mrs. Rev. Henry S. Barnum,[1] a grand-niece whose life is nobly spent among the Constantinople Christians, and the legal Theodore and S. H. Fitch of Broadway, N. Y., as well as Hon. Phineas C. Lounsbury[2] and his brother George E., of unimpeachable integrity, and the 1898 Connecticut Commonwealth Governor-elect, are of the same Lounsbury progenitor's blood.

ney, was a midshipman with Commodore Lawrence when the hero bade, in death, his men to stand by The Chesapeake. Lawrence Waterbury, son of Noah, started the great Long Island Cordage Establishment, which is headed to-day by his son, James M. Waterbury, whose home is at one of the choicest East River and Long Island Sound residential sites—Throgg's Neck.

Among the noticable Norwalk-kept war and other relics are the parchment commission executed by Gov. Thomas Fitch to Lieut. David Waterbury, born Feb. 12, 1722, son of John and Susanna (Newkirk) Waterbury, and which, singular to say, was accidentally found in a small trunk of papers belonging to a West Avenue, 1896, Benedict descendant; and also a musket (Damascus barrel) which was the property of midshipman William McKinney (step-son to Noah, son of Phineas and Elizabeth (Lounsbury) Waterbury), which said midshipman (afterward U. S. Navy officer) McKinney presented to Thomas Benedict7th., and which has now fallen to Thomas Benedict9th., of the New York Sub-Treasury. So highly was this piece valued by its first Benedict owner that he had a small closet made, over the fire-place, in his welcome home-seat at the ancient "Tide Mill" (now architect Randall's East Norwalk water-side residence) as a receptacle for the rare piece, which is known as "Old Algerine".

[1]Elizabeth Lounsbury, born Sept. 6, 1746, or perhaps more correctly June 2, 1745, had a brother Monmouth2d., born July 31, 1748, who married, April 8, 1770, Sarah Davenport. Monmouth2d. and Sarah Lounsbury had John Davenport Lounsbury, born May 5, 1792, who was of the old-time Winnipauk Mills firm of Lounsbury, Bissell & Co.

[2]Nathan Lounsbury2d. (father of ex-Governor Phineas C. and Governor-elect (1898) George E. Lounsbury, and also of their three sisters, Matilda (Mrs. Francis E. Quintard), Sarah, and Ann Eliza (Mrs. Joel Rockwell of Ridgefield), and brother Wil-

JARVIS KELLOGG LINEAGE.

Gen. I.—Daniel[1st.] and Bridget (Bouton) Kellogg.
" II.—Daniel[2d.].
" III.—Daniel[3d.] and Eunice Kellogg.
" IV.—Jarvis Kellogg[1st.], born 1731.

Jarvis[1st.] (son of Daniel[3d.] and Eunice Kellogg), married, first, June 10, 1760, Elizabeth Smith, and is supposed to have built the ancient house, still standing, on the northeast corner of upper Main Street and the Winnipauk road. He is thought to have twice married. His children, however, by his first wife, were Sarah and Jarvis[2d.]. Jarvis[2d.], born April 20, 1767, married, Feb. 19, 1792, Mercie,[1] born June 12, 1770, daughter of James and Sarah (Weed) Selleck, and had James Selleck, born Nov. 19, 1792; Sally, born Dec. 3, 1794, died young; Sarah, born July 19, 1796 (Mrs. Joseph Scribner[1st.]); Charles, born June 17, 1800; Lucia, born May 28, 1803 (Mrs. Stephen Stanley); Martin, born July 3, 1808; Charlotte, born Feb. 15, 1811 (Mrs. Linus St. J. Benedict). Some of these children were, it is probable, born in the 1896 John Henry Aiken Main Street home, which was built and occupied by Jarvis Kellogg[2d.]. Of the sons, Charles established his home, still in the family, near the "New Canaan Bridge", and Martin resided a little west of the present northwest corner of Main Street and Center Avenue.

A KELLOGG-JAMES DESCENT.

Hard by where serpentine-wound the Canaan Indian way, denominated from of old, "Ponasses-path", and some two miles northwest of the ancient Whitney Mill (corner of Main and Wall Street, 1896), stood the old-time home of Epenetus Kellogg[2d.] (son of Epenetus[1st.] and Jemima (Rogers) Kellogg). The domicile remained, browned, bent and bowed by very age. Here was born the owner's little daughter Anna, who first saw the light during the autumn before the Norwalk Tryon invasion (Nov. 28, 1778). Anna Kellogg had recently passed her twentieth birthday when her hand in matrimony was sought by a captain in the Southern marine service, Daniel, born Sept. 10, 1773, the third son of Peter and Mercy James. On Jan. 18, 1798, Daniel and Anna were married, and established a home near the commercial center, at that time, of Norwalk.[2] This home, on [1]Mrs. Jarvis Kellogg[2d.] (Mercie Selleck) was the daughter of James Selleck, born 1742, who was son of David and Mercie (Waterbury) Selleck. Her father, David Selleck, born Dec. 23, 1700, was son of Nathaniel and Sarah (Lockwood) Selleck. Nathaniel Selleck, born April 7, 1678, was son of John and Sarah (Law) Selleck, which John Selleck, born Feb. 21, 1643, was son of David and Susannah Selleck the settlers. Hannah, born June 26, 1776, sister of Mrs. Jarvis Kellogg[2d.], married William, son of Eliphalet and Susanna Lockwood, and father of the late William S. Lockwood of North Avenue, Norwalk.

James Selleck, father of Mrs. Jarvis Kellogg[2d.], married Sarah, born 1746, daughter of David, Jr. and Mary (Waterbury) Weed.

[2]Ruth, born 1762, older sister of Captain Daniel James, married Stephen, born 1761, son of John[3d.] and Elizabeth (St. John) Abbott. These had two daughters, Elizabeth, born 1787, who married Matthew Middlebrook of Wilton, and Cynthia, who married David Comstock of Norwalk, whose daughter Sarah is the present widow of Samuel Comstock[2d.] of the Comstock New Canaan farm (see page 346). John Abbott[3d.] was son of John[2d.] and Emma (Judd) Abbott.

On Christmas day, 1760, Isaac, son of David and Ruth (Lockwood) Hoyt, and grandson of Caleb and James Quintard[2nd] married, second, Sally Hilliard of Redding and had Charles Morris, Jane, Henry Harrison, Maria, and, as it seems, Morris.

James Quintard[3rd], born October 12, 1786, married, May 28, 1807, Sally, born February 12, 1787, daughter of Henry and Deborah (Hoyt) Chichester, and had:

Margaret, born May 4, 1813, died unmarried;
James A., born December 18, 1814;
Walter C., born January 14, 1816;
Orestes P.;[2]
Lucretia, died unmarried;
Francis E.;
Mary Amelia, Mrs. Samuel D. Smith;[3]
Sarah Deborah, Mrs. George Selleck;[4]
Harriett E., died young.

James A., son of James Quintard[3rd], married, November 16, 1834, Eunice B. Hoyt.[5]

Walter C., son of James Quintard[3rd], married, March 19, 1857, Sarah C. Smith of Ridgefield, and had:

Theodore Francis, died unmarried;

that time in "Old Well." Its sign, which was suspended from a bracket over the front door, enjoined:

Since man to man is so unjust,
You cannot tell what man to trust.
I've trusted many to my sorrow,
So pay to-day and trust to-morrow.

There was a broad open space in Mr. Quintard's day on the south side of Marshall Street. Absalom Day built a pottery not far from the east end of said street, and just south of the present Consolidated tracks. James Quintard[3rd] son of James[2nd], resided where now stands the residence of E. A. Woodward, and his dwelling was one of the fine modelled homes of that day. Opposite this house (Pardee residence of 1896) lived the father of the late Goold Benedict, for so many years the faithful South Norwalk station agent of the Consolidated road. James Quintard[3rd] was engaged in the pottery business on the site of the 1896 Hatch, Bailey & Co. establishment, having Henry Chichester[1st] as a partner.

[1]Horace, son of John Taylor of Ridgebury, Conn., married Rebecca, daughter of James Quintard[2nd], and had:

Adeline Sabra, Mrs. George W. Merrian;
Frances Louise, died in infancy;
William Starr, born May 28, 1829, of Utica, New York;
Sarah Louisa, died young;
James Najah;
Julia Augusta, born 1835, died young;
Julia Bellamy, Mrs. Sylvester Van Hoosear;
Georgiana W., unmarried;
Rebecca W., unmarried.

James Najah Taylor married Nannie Hobbie. After Mr. Taylor's decease the widow married, as his second wife, Charles Olmstead, formerly postmaster of Norwalk. Sylvester Van Hoosear was a recent active merchant of Norwalk (firm of Van Hoosear & Ambler). He was the son of David and Parmelia (Grumman) Van Hoosear of Wilton, Conn. He died October 29, 1884, leaving no children.

[2]Orestes P. Quintard married April 20, 1840, Jane M. Bennett, and removed from Norwalk.

[3]The children of Samuel D. Smith were Howard D. and Mary Quintard.

[4]The children of George and Sarah D. Selleck were Lottie Virginia, born June 5, 1854 (Mrs. William Moore), and Elizabeth Lucretia (unmarried).

[5]The children of James A. and Eunice B. Quintard were Harriet Virginia, born May 19, 1836 (Mrs. George Mead), Oliver Perry, born October 26, 1838 (died young), Vannetta, born June 26, 1852 (unmarried).

THE SMITH RIDGE AND RIDGEFIELD SMITHS.

Samuel Smith[1st], who married Rachel, daughter of Matthew Marvin[1st], (see pages 150 and 177) had Rachel (Mrs. Thomas Benedict), Lydia (Mrs. James Lockwood), Sarah, Hannah, Samuel[2nd] and Nehemiah[1st]. Samuel Smith[1st] was brother of Joseph (page 431).

Samuel Smith[2nd] married, June 13, 1711, Sarah, daughter of John and Elizabeth (Smith) Whitney and had Samuel[3rd], Sarah (Mrs. Nathan Olmsted), Rachel (Mrs. James Northrop), and Patience (Mrs. Benjamin Hoyt), all of Ridgefield.

Nehemiah Smith[1st], brother of Samuel[2nd], married Elizabeth, daughter of Peter Clapham and had Nehemiah[2nd], (not found excepting that his daughter Mary married Thaddeus Seymour), Peter[1st], Matthew[1st], Daniel[1st], Elizabeth[1st], (Mrs. Lieutenant Samuel Street), Rachel[2nd] (Mrs. Ebenezer Street), Rebeccah (Mrs. John Hanford), Lydia Ann (Mrs. Josiah Burr), and Joseph.

Mrs. Nehemiah Smith[1st] (Elizabeth Clapham), married, second, Thomas Talmadge of Stamford.

The mother of Mrs. Nehemiah Smith[1st], was Isabella, daughter of John and Ann Barlow of Fairfield.

The children of Peter and Isabella Clapham were Elizabeth (Mrs. Nehemiah Smith), Rebeccah (Mrs. Nathan Adams, Jr.), Mary (Mrs. Thomas Marvin).

"Smith Hills" was a district near "Bear Swamp" in Poplar Plains. Bear Swamp is traversed by the Newtown Turnpike.

The descent of Peter[1st], son of Nehemiah[1st], is traced on page 178. Matthew Smith[1st], son of Nemiah[1st], owned the fine old style H. M. Prowitt beautifully kept house and grounds in East Norwalk (1895). He left these to his nephew Matthew (son of his brother Peter Smith[1st],) which nephew parted with the property or a portion of it, to Josiah Hanford Fitch, the father of the late Mrs. Samuel Daskam of East Norwalk.

From Samuel Smith[1st], descended the Smith families of Smith's Ridge and Ridgefield.

SELLECK.

This Stamford-Norwalk family is of ancient pedigree. By tradition it originated in Wales. The name is Cornish-British, which is a dialect of the Celtic, Belgic or Cambrian formerly spoken throughout Cornwall. The etymology of the proper noun Selleck is "in open view," conspicuous, and its mention is found as early as A. D. 1086.

Along the seventeenth century are records of Sellecks in positions of influence. John Selyocke about that period "declined knighthood." In the deed of Galdon Manor Robert Selleck is mentioned as a "trustie and well beloved friend," and John Selioke, father and son, were Mayors of St. Albans 1684 1700, while "Selleck on the Wye" is a beautiful village.

In the roll of early New England settlers occurs in 1640 the name of David Selleck. It is claimed that the first provision for a free school in the western world, by direct tax, was made in Dorchester, Mass., in 1639. David Selleck, before referred to, was one of the subscribers to a petition to that effect. David and Susannah Selleck, his wife, were members of the 1644 First Church of Boston, and the births of their children are recorded in that ancient town. Among the antiquities of Boston is found the "David Selleck home lot description." Mr. Selleck was engaged in trade between the Colonies and the Barbadoes. He died while on an expedition, in 1654, to Virginia. His two sons, Jonathan and John, came to Stamford in 1660. They there married sisters, daughters of Hon. Richard Law, the first civilian among the Stamford settlers, and one of the "first gentlemen in the Colony." Jonathan Selleck was one of the leading men of the period (see Colonial histories of New York and Connecticut). His son Jonathan[2nd] shared his father's civil and military renown, and his son John was the first Fairfield county graduate of Harvard College.

John Selleck[1st], brother of Jonathan[1st], married a daughter of Hon. Richard Law. He became a wealthy ship owner and captain, and was extensively known in early days. He was taken prisoner by the French (on one of his ocean trips), in May, 1689, but his estate, which was large, was not settled until 1708. He left one only son, Nathaniel, who married Sarah, daughter of Gershom and Anne (Millington) Lockwood of Greenwich. From these two has been a descent "which has been largely characterized by the qualities of honor, courage and loyalty; a God fearing, will making, debt-paying people."

CHILDREN OF DAVID[1st] AND SUSANNAH SELLECK.

David[2nd], born October 11, 1638, went to the Barbadoes;
Jonathan[1st], born March 20, 1641, came to Stamford;
John[1st], born February 2, 1643, came to Stamford;
Nathaniel[1st], born July 18, 1645, no Norwalk descent;
Joanna, born December 11, 1647;
Elizabeth, born February 1, 1651;
A daughter Susannah, died September 10, 1653.

David Selleck[1st] died in Virginia in 1654.

Jonathan[1st] and John[1st], sons of David and Susannah Selleck, came as young men to Stamford in about 1660. Jonathan[1st] married Abigail, daughter of Richard Law, and John Selleck[1st] married Sarah Law, a sister of the wife of his brother Jonathan Selleck[1st].

Hon. Richard Law, the father of the Mrs. Jonathan[1st] and John[1st] Selleck is denominated by one historian a most important Colonial personage. He was the Scribe of the Colony, and because of his legal lore the "Counsellor and Adviser of the community." He married Margaret, daughter of Thomas Kilbourne[1] of Wethersfield, and removed to Stamford, where their home was one of the most honored of the Colony, and the family furnished names that gave a lustre to the State, whose highest civil and judicial seats its members filled.

[1]Thomas Kilbourne was born in the parish of Wood Ditton in Cambridge, England, A.D. 1578, where he was baptized May 8 of that year. With his wife Frances, and a portion of his family, he embarked April 15, 1635, from London for New England in the ship Increase. He settled at Wethersfield, Conn., and died previous to 1639. His wife's will was made November 3, 1650, and inventoried December 3, 1650.

Margaret (Mrs. Richard Law) daughter of Thomas and Frances Kilbourne, was born in Wood Ditton, England, in A.D. 1607, and baptized September 23rd of that year. She was married to Hon. Richard Law soon after the New England arrival of the Law family.

Mrs. Law died before her husband. He made his will March 12, 1687, in which "he divides lands to his daughters, the two Mrs. Sellecks, so that they may have each a half as much as the son; for which, he says, the word of God is clear and good reason for it, and why any Christian man that loveth righteousness and equity should be against it he sees not."

DESCENT FROM THE SELLECK BROTHERS JONATHAN[1st] AND JOHN[1st].

JONATHAN[1st].

Jonathan[1st], son of David[1st] and Susannah Selleck, married, May 11, 1663, Abigail, daughter of Richard and Margaret (Kilbourne) Law, and had:

Jonathan[2nd], born July 11, 1663;

David, born January 27, 1666, probably died young;

John, died young.

Jonathan[2nd], oldest child of Jonathan[1st] and Abigail (Law) Selleck, married, January 5, 1685, Abigail, daughter of Major Nathan Gold of Fairfield.

Major Nathan Gold[1st] came from St. Edmondsbury, South Britain, to Fairfield. He was an educated, opulent gentleman and a foremost man in the government of the Connecticut Colony. His children were Nathan[2nd], Sarah (Mrs. John Thompson), Deborah (Mrs. George Clark), Abigail (Mrs. Jonathan Selleck[2nd]), Martha (Mrs. John Selleck first, and second, Mrs. Rev. John Davenport). Nathan Gold[1st] died on Sunday, March 4, 1693–4.

CHILDREN OF JONATHAN[2nd] AND ABIGAIL (GOLD) SELLECK.

Nathan[1st], born September 12, 1686;

Abigail born April 3, 1688;

Jonthan[3rd], unmarried;

Theophila, born February 11, 1694, Mrs. Samuel Pennoyer;

John Gold, unmarried;

Abigail, born February 15, 1707, Mrs. Ebenezer Silliman.[1]

As Nathan[1st] was the only son of Jonathan[2nd] and Abigail (Gold) Selleck, who married, it follows that the said Nathan became the ancestor of those of Selleck name who descended from Major Jonathan Selleck[1st], one of the two brothers who came from Boston to Stamford in about 1660.

Nathan Selleck[1st] married, August 12, 1708, Susannah, only child of Mr. William Hooker of Farmington (see page 327), and had:

Susannah, born September 3, 1709, Mrs. Joseph St. John.

Nathan Selleck[1st] married, second, December, 1710, Mary, daughter of Captain John

[1] Hon. Ebenezer Silliman, baptized September 21, 1707, was a son of Robert and Sarah (Hull) Silliman, of Fairfield, and a grandson of Daniel Silliman, the Fairfield pioneer Silliman who, tradition claims, came from Holland. The marriage of this eminent Colonist, Hon. Ebenezer Silliman, to Abigail Selleck, took place October 8, 1728, the fruit of the union being Gold Selleck, born 1732, Ebenezer, Jr., born 1734, Amelia Gold, born 1736, Hezekiah, born 1739, Jonathan, born 1742, Abigail, born 1748, and Deodate, born 1749. These all overlived their parents several years, being interested, the year Norwalk was burned, in the division of the Lieutenant Jonathan Selleck estate made in Stamford April 3, 1779. Gold Selleck Silliman (General), the oldest son, married, January 21, 1754, Martha, daughter of Deodate and Lydia (Woodward) Davenport of East Haven, and granddaughter of Madame Davenport, nee Martha Gold. The first Mrs. General Gold Selleck Silliman died August 1, 1774, and the General married, second, May 24, 1775, Mary, daughter of Rev. Joseph and Rebecca (Peabody) Fish of Stonington, and widow of Rev. John Noyes of New Haven. By this union there was Benjamin Silliman, who became the renowned "Professor Silliman" of Yale College, who died, after more than a half century's illustrious connection with that seat of learning, November 24, 1864, in the eighty-sixth year of his age. (See page 198.) The Sillimans of New Canaan are of the old Fairfield stock.

Sands of Long Island, who died July 13, 1712. Her husband, Nathan Selleck[1st], married, third, Sarah, daughter of Captain Samuel Sands and cousin of Mr. Selleck's second wife. The issue by said Selleck's last wife was:

Sands[1st], born April, 1714;
Silas, born June, 1715;
Mary, born October 1, 1717, Mrs. Jacob Warren;
Jonathan, born October 1, 1720;
Sarah, born August 12, 1723, Mrs. Nathaniel Selleck;
Nathan[2nd], born September 15, 1726;
Samuel, born January 10, 1728, died young;
Gold John, born January 10, 1730;
Silvanus, born September 1, 1734.

Sands[1st], son of Nathan[1st] and Sarah (Sands) Selleck, married, August 10, 1742, Mary Raymond, and had:

Simeon[1st], born August 14, 1743, died an infant;
Simeon[2nd], born September 18, 1744;[1]
Jesse, born January 19, 1746;[2]
Sands[2nd], born May 19, 1751;
Raymond, born June 26, 1752;
Samuel, born July 17, 1755[3];
Anna, born February 28, 1759, Mrs. Benjamin Belden;
Henry, died young;
Stephen, died young.

Silas[1st], son of Nathan[1st] and Sarah (Sands) Selleck, married, January 12, 1738, Elizabeth Ferris, and had:

Silas[2nd], born October 29, 1740;
Sarah, born August 19, 1741.

Silas Selleck[1st] died December, 1772.

Sarah, daughter of Nathan[1st] and Sarah (Sands) Selleck, married, August 7, 1744, Nathaniel, son of David and Mercy (Waterbury) Selleck, and had:

Uriah[1st], baptized January 21, 1761, died young;
Ray, baptized 1761 by Dr. Mather;
Mercy, baptized 1761 by Dr. Mather;
Sarah, baptized 1761 by Dr. Mather;
Nathaniel, baptized 1761 by Dr. Mather;
Uriah[2nd], baptized October 31, 1762. 3.

[1] Married, February 28, 1771, Mary Belden of Stamford. Had Betsey, Polly, Benjamin and Anne. These children and their parents belonged in Stamford rather than in Norwalk.

[2] Married, January 26, 1786, Elizabeth Howe and had James, born April 22, 1787, Catharine, born December 11, 1789, Eliza, born August 10, 1792, Sands, born January 13, 1796, Henry Raymond, born May 21, 1798.

[3] Married, August 1, 1779, Hannah Smith, and had nine children, the two youngest of whom, Angeline, born September 4, 1796, and Caroline, born March 8, 1802, lived until recently at the Ring's End Landing (Darien) homestead there established by their father.

Nathan[2nd], son of Nathan[1st] and Sarah (Sands) Selleck, married, September 17, 1745, Catharine, daughter of John Clark of Stamford, and had:

Deborah, Mrs. Amos Roberts;

Phebe, Mrs. Thomas Comstock;

Catharine, Mrs. Wyy Seeley, died July 4, 1813;[1]

Edward.

Gold John, son of Nathan[1st] and Sarah (Sands) Selleck, married Jane and had:

A child, no name found;

Gold John, baptized November, 1772.

Mrs. Gold John Selleck (Jane) married, second, December 23, 1773, Benjamin Betts of Norwalk.

Silvanus, son of Nathan[1st] and Sarah (Sands) Selleck, married, March 2, 1768, Tabitha ——— of Stratford, and had:

Molly, baptized November 17, 1772, Mrs. Captain Stephen Raymond of Norwalk.

Betty, baptized November 17, 1772.

Mrs. Silvanus Selleck married, second, June 21, 1774, Daniel Lockwood.

JOHN SELLECK[1st].

Captain John Selleck[1st], son of David[1st] and Susannah Selleck, married, October 25, 1669, Sarah, daughter of Hon. Richard and Margaret (Kilbourne) Law, and had:

Sarah, born August 22, 1670, Mrs. John Potter;

David born, December 27, 1672, probably unmarried;

Nathaniel[2nd], born April 7, 1678;

John, born June 7, 1681, unmarried;

Susannah, born February 2, 1683, Mrs. John Holly;

Johanna, born May 31, 1686, Mrs. Jonathan Bates.

Nathaniel[2nd], son of Capt. John[1st] and Sarah (Law) Selleck, married, January 25, 1700, Sarah, born 1678, daughter of Jonathan[1st] and Mary (Ferris) Lockwood, and had:

No, See p. 437, also Se 63, p. 60

David, born December 23, 1700;

Sarah, born August 14, 1702;

Nathaniel[3rd], born October 9, 1704;

John, born January 3, 1706;

Martha, born April 19, 1710, died young;

Ebenezer, born March 20, 1712, died in infancy.

Nathaniel Selleck died August 14, 1712, and his widow married Deacon Benjamin Hickox (see pages 272, 281, and 318).

David, son of Nathaniel[2nd] and Sarah (Lockwood) Selleck, married, January 23, 1723, Mercy, daughter of David Waterbury, and had:

[1] Wyy and Catharine (Selleck) Seeley had six children. Their oldest daughter Mary, born November 10, 1791, married Kilbourne Selleck and was the venerable personage, who neatly kept up her Darien home near the Selleck woods through which electric cars now make their way from Norwalk to Stamford.

[No. See p. 437, also Se 63, p. 60]

David, born April 1, 1724;[1]
Nathaniel[4th], born October 29, 1725, see "Uriah Selleck descent," page 446;
Ebenezer, born December 18, 1727;
Gershom, born July 10, 1730;[2]
Ezra, born February 19, 1732;
Samuel, born February 4, 1734;[3]
Thaddeus, born 1736;
James, born 1742;[4]

[1]David, son of David[1st] and Mercy Selleck, married, January 8, 1750, Sarah Bates, and had:

Lydia, born October 23, 1754;
Hannah, born February 18, 1758;
David, baptized March 11, 1762;
Mary, baptized October 10, 1765;
Charles, baptized July 20, 1766.

This youngest son Charles, married Hannah, daughter of Rev. Dr. Moses Mather. The wedding occurred June 2, 1796 and was followed by the birth of eleven children, the oldest of whom, David, baptized by his grandfather, Dr. Mather, June 15, 1797, became the remembered David Selleck of West Norwalk, who died in 1876, leaving a son, David R., born November 14, 1822 and a daughter, Frances Albena, born October 6, 1824. The household was a worthy one.

[2]Gershom Selleck married Prudella Gonn and had Charlotte, who baptized May 29, 1763, married June 3, 1784, Stephen, son of Bushnell and Abigail (Reed) Fitch, and had Abbey, Chauncey, Frank B., William, and Benjamin (Hon.). This last son was the founder of Fitch's Home for Soldiers in Darien. His mother, Mrs. Charlotte (Selleck) Fitch, is described as having been a woman of much personal beauty, and of tried and noble character (page 200).

[3]Samuel, son of David and Mercy Selleck, was born, as per note page 200, and his life was given to his country. He married, March 28, 1758, Hannah, daughter of David and Mary (Waterbury) Weed, and had Samuel, David, Hannah, Mary and Ebenezer, which last child was only two years old when his brave father perished in the prison ship in 1776. The young Ebenezer married Emilea, born 1776, daughter of Benjamin and Martha (Youngs) Cheshire of Long Island, and had Mary W., Hannah, Benjamin, and Ebenezer[2nd], who died in infancy. Mr. Ebenezer Selleck married, second, October 10, 1826, Mary, daughter of Holly and Martha (Pease) Lynes, and had:

Rebecca, born October 22, 1831;
Ebenezer, born June 9, 1834.

Rebecca, daughter of Ebenezer and Mary Selleck, is acquaintance-valued in Norwalk. She has devoted much time to the work of record tracing and has been quite successful. Her only brother, Ebenezer, Jr., resides in the south. The old Ebenezer Selleck home in Westchester County was a coveted site.

[4]James, son of David and Mercy Selleck, married Sarah Weed (page 293), sister of his brother Samuel's wife, and had James, born January 2, 1764, Hezekiah, born January 14, 1766, Sarah, born April 8, 1768, Mercy, born June 12, 1770, William, born July 11, 1773, Hannah, born June 26, 1776, David, born June 1, 1779, Mary, born August 29, 1781, and Charlotte, born April 23, 1784. Of these children Mercy married Jarvis Kellogg (page 375), Hannah married as his first wife William, son of Eliphalet and Susannah (St. John) Lockwood (page 293). William Lockwood's second wife was the widow of Orange Webb, Jr. (page 401), who was a stately lady and of commanding presence. Emerging with her daughter from the Lockwood residence to pay a visit one summer evening to the family of her husband's brother, Colonel Buckingham St. John Lockwood, she was observed by the Colonel's children (the parents were in Greenwich, and the daughters had made an evening party to help pleasantly pass their father's and and mother's absence) approaching the home. The young people, who had converted the parlor into a room for temporary diversion, felt that it was not in proper shape to receive their aunt and friend, and hastened consequently to place-restore the furniture, adornments, etc., ere their courtly relative arrived.

Orange Webb, Jr., the first husband of the second Mrs Wm. Lockwood, was a great grandson of Henry, who was a grandson of Richard Webb., Jr., tentatively, perhaps, of Norwalk. Richard Webb, Sr., was a Norwalk resident whose home lot, after Mr. Webb's day, adjoined that of the Roger's (see page 39) in connection with which fact a Fairfield County Rogers-Watson-Webb mention is interesting. Moses Rogers, grandson of James Rogers of home lot XI, as per page 39, lived at No. 7 State Street, Battery Park, New York. At No. 6 State Street (next door to to Moses Roger's, there being no dwellings opposite) resided James Watson, originally of Wethersfield, Conn., but now a successful city merchant. Mr. Watson was a devoted friend of Moses Roger's son-in-law, Samuel Miles Hopkins, a young man of remarkable power and promise, and the father of the Mercy, baptized July 2 · 1756.

1896 Colonel Woolsey R. Hopkins (see page 171) of Shippan Point, Stamford. Another ardent Watson friend was Colonel Samuel Blachley Webb (see page 400). Colonel Webb, who as the Revolution was rising, raised a company in Connecticut, desired to make Watson an officer, but was in some way prevented, and the aspiring Watson went afterward to New York. Mr. Watson had a son, James Watson, Jr., and an adopted daughter who married Judge Williams and had a son, James Watson Williams, a prominent lawyer of Utica, N. Y. James Watson, Jr., a brilliant youth, was drowned at the Battery, New York, on one of the loveliest of winter days, and in the presence of a fashionable throng which, because of the balmy air, was parading in that handsome early park. His father's friend, Colonel Webb, went also to the city after the war, where General Washington, who, it is claimed, was fond of young men, became much attached to Webb. The intimacy between James Watson and Webb and Hopkins was so peculiar that General Webb named a son for the first who became the famous James Watson Webb of the New York Courier and Enquirer (see page 401), while Hopkins exchanged portraits with Mr. Watson. Jonathan Trumbull was the artist employed, and his likeness of Mr. Watson (which now adorns a Fairfield County mansion) is masterful. Mr. Watson had a painting of Mr. Hopkins, but this has been lost.

Both friends of James Watson, General Samuel Blachley Webb and Hon. Samuel Miles Hopkins, were Norwalk family-associated and left remarkable memories. The name of Webb is still Norwalk preserved and an old inmate of the household of the parents of Mrs. Samuel M. Hopkins lives (1899) at the great age of 102 years to tell of the "splendid black team" driven by Mr. Rogers and of the Shippan "niceties" even to the dairy shelves which were of marble. This venerable woman is the mother of Capt. Cyrus Crabbe of the Norwalk and New York Steam Navigation Service.

The letter of Chief Justice Tapping Reeve, head of the Litchfield Law School, introducing the Yale graduate, Samuel M. Hopkins, to the acquaintance of Aaron Burr; the warm reception of the same talented young man into the family of James Watson and his residence at No. 6 State Street; the Hopkins survey of the great Shenandoah tract and the intrusting of the European sale of the same to Hopkins by Watson; the mock Colonels Webb-Livingston duel; the pathetic wiping-out through the ice on the Battery beach of the James Watson blood on the occasion of the tragic life-end of his only son; the Captain Moses Webb granddaughter's bridal in a cottage still standing on Norwalk's ancient Indian trail; the Margery Webb marriage August 10, 1716, to Joseph, nephew of Ephraim Lockwood, the Norwalk settler and the proprietorship of Margery's mother's kin to a hundred acre slice (boundary to-day pointed out) of the Stamford Shippan; the overland Moses Rogers family coach trips to Connecticut from No. 7 State Street at the Battery, starting at early morn, reaching the Jay home at Rye at noon, and driving along the splendid Shippan Avenue as night-fall approached; the double (Rogers-Isaacs) Norwalk connection with the families of the business house of Woolsey & Woolsey—father and son—who had in their employ a young German whose reply to their "good morning, Peter," was a respectful return salutation, and who grew to become the Peter Moller of sugar refinery fame, all these are local mentions the reference to which may be looked upon as in some sort a posterity reminiscence-due.

James Selleck, brother of Hannah (the first Mrs. William Lockwood), married, November 17, 1791, Sally Gilbert of Salem, and had, among five other children, Hannah, born February 28, 1803, the beloved partner (first wife) of Lewis Richards, M. D., of New Canaan. Mrs. Dr. Richards' sister Sarah, born April 8, 1799, was the wife of Peter Smith of Smith's Ridge, New Canaan. The New Canaan Dr. Richards' residence is now the bough shaded Bond home of that town, and the Peter Smith acreage lays a little west of the spreading "Maple Farm" of Mrs. Stephen Keeler of the same town.

[1]Jacob Selleck[1st], son of David and Mercy Selleck, lived on Carter Street, New Canaan. He married, April 10, 1764, Hannah Fitch, and had Sarah. The first Mrs. Jacob Selleck died February 10, 1765, and Mr. Selleck married, second, May 2, 1776, Sarah, daughter of Theophilus Fitch. There were by this union Hannah (Mrs. Daniel Hunt), Jacob[2nd], Anna (Mrs. Drake Pennoyer), Lydia (Mrs. Avery), Polly (Mrs. Samuel Raymond), and Samuel.

Sarah, daughter of Jacob Selleck by his first wife, married Abraham Weed of New Canaan.

The children of Samuel and Polly (Selleck) Raymond were Charlotte (Mrs. William Nash), Thomas, Charles, and William E.

Samuel, born May 24, 1791, son of Jacob[1st] and Sarah Selleck, married January 20, 1818. Ann born January 15, 1794, daughter of Isaac DeForest. Mr. Selleck lived at White Oak Shade, New Canaan (Holly Hanford Place) and had Caroline, born October 20,

Nathaniel[3rd], son of Nathaniel[2nd] and Sarah (Lockwood) Selleck, married, June 30, 1726, Mary De Mill, and had:

Mary;
Peter, born May 2, 1729;
Sarah, born March 12, 1731;
Elizabeth, born January 3, 1733;
Abraham, born December 3, 1735;
Catharine, born March 28, 1739;
Anthony;
Hannah.

John, son of Nathaniel[2nd] and Sarah (Lockwood) Selleck, married, November 5, 1729, Abigail, daughter of John and Sarah (Gregory) Seymour of Norwalk, and had:

John, born August 18, 1730;
Bethel, born March 27, 1732;
Seymour, born March 1, 1734;
Abigail, born May 12, 1736;
Martha, born February 6, 1739;
Mercy, born October 9, 1740.

LOCKWOOD—SELLECK.

Sarah, born 1678, daughter of Jonathan[1st] and Mary (Ferris) Lockwood, and granddaughter of Robert Lockwood the settler, married, January 25, 1700, Nathaniel[2nd], born April 7, 1678, son of John and Sarah (Law) Selleck, and had:

Nathaniel[3rd], born October 9, 1704.

Nathaniel Selleck[2nd] died August 14, 1712, and his widow married, second, Benjamin Hickox, and third, Samuel Kellogg (see pages 272, 273, 317, 318).

Nathaniel Selleck[3rd] married, June 30, 1726, Mary DeMill of Stamford and had Mary, Peter, Sarah, Elizabeth, Abraham[1st], Catharine, Anthony and Hannah. Of these children Abraham[1st], born December 3, 1735, married, first, May 3, 1756, Deborah, born October 24, 1734, daughter of Joseph and Hannah (Beachgood) Whiting, and had Abraham[2nd], born December 13, 1750; Nathan, born May 26, 1759, and Charles, born December 9, 1760.

The first Mrs. Abraham Selleck, died April 11, 1761, and her husband married, second, and had Nancy, born April 10, 1763; Edward, born November 19, 1764; Anthony, born May 9, 1766; Isaac[1st], born January 22, 1768; William, born October 6, 1769; Nancy[2nd], born December 19, 1771, and Sarah, born July 3, 1773.

1819, Charlotte born May 24, 1821, Herman born December 11, 1823, George born January 13, 1825, Charles and Julia, twins, born June 25, 1828, Mary born August 9, 1830 and Benjamin born July 26, 1832. The two brothers, Jacob[2nd] and Samuel Selleck, received by inheritance the homestead of their father which at the decease of Jacob[2nd] was divided among the heirs. It was then purchased by Capt. Stephen Hoyt who gave up mercantile business, and established upon the Jacob Selleck property (Shaker Farm) the now far known "Hoyt Nursery" of the town of New Canaan. Capt. Stephen Hoyt and his truly excellent wife are deceased but their enterprising sons Hons. James and Edwin Hoyt carry on a business which has assumed large proportions. Their establishment is on Carter Street.

Nathan, son of Abraham Selleck[1st] by his first wife, married three times. By his first wife he had Jonathan and Sidney. Jonathan married first a Barnes and had seven children.[1] He married, second, Sally Esther, widow of Benjamin Hoyt, and daughter of Samuel and Lydia (Waterbury) Keeler (page 124), and had Frances A. (Mrs. Samuel C. Waterbury),[2] and James K.

James K., son of Jonathan and Sally Selleck, married, first, Semantha, daughter of Peter and Sophia (Thompson) Bontecou of Troy, N. Y., and had Reed B., died young; Frederick D.;[3] Charles B.;[4] James K.; Wilson W.; Clara F. (Mrs. James H. Bailey):[5] Florence T. (Mrs. William Martin); Josephine K., died young; Eugenia, died young; Jonathan H.

Sally E. (Mrs. Benjamin Hoyt) Keeler, afterward Mrs. Jonathan Selleck, had a daughter Elizabeth, who married George Weed of North Stamford and had Mary Esther (Mrs. Harvey Smith of Stamford).

Nathan Selleck had by his second wife George, Henry and Riley. George married, December 1, 1819, Mehitable, who was a daughter of Bouton Hoyt of New Canaan, and had Mehitable H. (Mrs. James H. Marvin first, and, second, Mrs. O. P. Riggs; no children by either marriage). Henry, brother of George, married Mary Ann, daughter of Samuel and Lydia (Waterbury) Keeler, and had Henry K. (married, first, Mary Elizabeth, daughter of Uriah and Augusta (Remson) Ambler; married, second, Mary Elizabeth Taylor; no children;) Charles M.; George Ward, (married Mrs. Anna M. Potter, no issue); Theodore D.; Mary E.

Nathan Selleck married, third, Amy Holmes of Bedford, N. Y., and had Charlotte (unmarried) and Jesse.

Jesse married Hannah M., daughter of Jakin and Rhoda (Richards) Bouton of New Canaan and had Andrew and C. Frederick. Andrew married, first, Mary, daughter of William and Fanny (Olmsted) Harrington,[6] and had William A., died unmarried, Lilias M. (Mrs. W.

[1] Among the children of Jonathan Selleck, by his first wife (Barnes) were Edward and Betsey (Mrs. Gould first and, second, Mrs. Curran).

[2] The children of Frances A. Selleck (Mrs. Samuel C. Waterbury) were Anna (Mrs. McClay first and, second, Mrs. Elmer E. Knapp); Josephine S. (Mrs. George H. Roberts); Clarence, died young; Lawrence P., unmarried; Rena S. (Mrs. Eugene Albin) and Eloise A. (Mrs. Frank W. Bogardus).

The children of George H. and Josephine Roberts are Mary, died young; Lena (Mrs. Edward Marshall), Mabel, Florence E., Annie, Jennie and Georgie.

The children of Eugene and Rena Albin are Harriet F. and Harold C.

The families of Sidney and Riley Selleck reside elsewhere than in Norwalk.

[3] Frederick D., son of James K. and Semantha Selleck, married September 19, 1878, Nellie Eagan of Chicago, Ill., and had James K., Elizabeth, George, Helen and Lillian.

[4] Charles B., son of James K. Selleck, married December 27, 1879, Isabel S., widow of William A. S. Hanford and daughter of William C. Street of Norwalk, no children.

[5] The child of Mrs. James H. Bailey is Florence.

[6] Fanny, born May 3, 1801 (Mrs. Wm. Harrington) was a daughter of Asa and Betty (Stuart) Olmstead. Her brother was the clever and considerate Dr. David Olmstead[2nd] of Belden Hill and her sisters were Charlotte (Mrs. Justus Keeler), Betsey (Mrs. Stephen Hoyt), and Julia Maria and Mary Elizabeth, who were unmarried. There was also a brother David [1st], who died in infancy. Dr. David Olmstead was a college man and a New York city medical-schoolmate and intimate of Dr. Valentine Mott. His first practice was with Dr. Nehemiah Perry, Sr., of Ridgefield and he was unmarried.

Mrs. Asa Olmstead was the daughter of Simeon and Mary (Gregory) Stuart. Her mother was twice married, her first husband having been a Gregory. Her Gregory children were Elizabeth (Mrs, Jesse Jarvis), Sally (Mrs. Nathan Munroe of Salem), Susannah (Mrs. Scott) and Mrs. James Aikin. There was also another Gregory child. Mrs. Simeon Stuart was a daughter of David Whelpley.

The children of Mrs. Justus Keeler were Charlotte (Mrs. Thos. Merwin Raymond) and Frances L. (unmarried.)

W. Keyes), Eugene, died young, and Fanny M., died young. Andrew Selleck married, second, Susan F., sister of his first wife, no children. C. Frederick brother of Andrew Selleck, married Ann Eliza, daughter of Robert Flynn, and had no children.

Isaac Selleck[1st], son of Abraham Selleck[1st] and half brother of Nathan Selleck, married July 1, 1793, Sarah, born August 20, 1763, daughter of Phineas and Elizabeth (Lounsbury) Waterbury (see pages 369 and 370) and had Noah, Isaac[2nd], James, Polly (Mrs. William Seeley, first, and, second, Mrs. Babcock), Hettie (Mrs. George Brown), and Nancy (Mrs. Samuel Selleck).

Isaac[2nd], born July 14, 1802, son of Isaac[1st] and Sarah (Waterbury) Selleck, married, October 1 1823, Lucy, born April 1, 1805, daughter of James and Esther (Seeley) Brown, and had: Eliza Esther, born July 7, 1824 (Mrs. Darius Slauson); James Lawrence, born March 15, 1826; George Washington, born October 7, 1827; Charles, born November 2, 1829; Isaac, born August 31, 1831; Mary Ann, born June 18, 1833, died young; Henry[1st], died young; Henry S., born December 29, 1838; Franklin, born April 4, 1841; Cyrus, born May 2, 1843; died young; Mary, A., died young.

Mrs. Isaac Selleck[2nd], died March 15, 1892.

Isaac Selleck[2nd], died September 15, 1893.[1]

The children of Darius and Eliza Esther Slauson were De Witt, Frederick, James and Nettie.

The children of Thomas L. Raymond, were Agnes (Mrs. Jacob Fowler), Celia (unmarried), Justus, Keeler, Henry (died unmarried in the civil war), Harriet (Mrs. John Wilson) and Catharine (Mrs. William Folwell).

Stephen Hoyt, son of Stephen and Althea (James) Hoyt, who married Betsey Olmstead had Julia Ann., born June 29, 1829, married, May 24, 1849, William P., son of Silas and Hannah (Brisco) Hayes; Harriet Amelia (unmarried); Thaddeus A., James.

The children of William P. Hayes were Mary Jane, born September 29, 1850, died August 15, 1870, and Alice Frances, born 1853, who married April 3, 1877, Charles Wheeler, son of Alfred Burritt of Stratford, who resides, in 1899, in Morgan Avenue, Norwalk.

Asa Olmstead was son of David, who was son of John and Mary (Small) Olmstead. John Olmstead who married Mary Small was a son of James[1st], who was son of Richard Olmstead, the settler.

Asa Olmstead lived on Belden Hill. Himself and wife were born and brought up on Chestnut Hill, his father owning the present Gorham property on that hill, and her father where the Finch Brothers of 1896 reside. Betty (Mrs. Asa Olmstead), daughter of Simeon and Mary Stuart, repeatedly and distinctly related, during her life time, that when a child she witnessed the burning of Norwalk from her Chestnut Hill home, and that two years before that time (1777) Tryon marched his men, Danbury bound, across their farm.

Darius, brother of Asa Olmstead, married Esther Gregory and had Charles Olmstead of Cranberry Plains, and Silas, the father of the Olmsteads of Tarrytown, N. Y.

The Harrington's were English people, who came from Boston to Fairfield county. A familiar sight in the Norwalk of forty odd years ago, was the Belden Hill Carriage containing, after the husband and father's decease, Mrs. William Harrington and her daughters Mary and Susan F.

[1]Isaac Selleck[2nd], father of the present "Selleck Brothers," was a man of exceptional physical power. In his younger days he assisted Henry Selleck in laying the still seen foundation walls—lane and house—of the latter's East Avenue (now Osborn) brick dwelling, and made no point of coming from and returning to New Canaan before and after his day's work. He industriously served his generation and earned his enjoyed later life rest. With his cousin Henry he was of strong New England stock, and lived to a good age. Both Westchester men chose Norwalk for their home, where they left families. Clarence, the grandson of Isaac, was a young man of high promise. He was fond of foreign travel and his published correspondence, as well as clever art reproductions of scenery abroad, stamp him as having been a youth of rare tastes and accomplishments. His early demise was greatly lamented, but his noble character is a grateful remembrance. He was the only son of George W. and Cordelia E. Selleck.

James L., son of Isaac Selleck[2nd], married Deborah Wright of Baldwinsville, N.Y., and had Henry and Charles.

George W., son of Isaac Selleck[2nd], married January 9, 1854, Cordelia E. Twing of Great Barrington, Mass., and had Alice E., Mary E., Hattie, died young, Lucy A., died young, Lucy B., died young, and Clarence who died unmarried.

Charles, son of Isaac Selleck[2nd], is a resident of Blair, Nebraska, and had a child who died young and Gertrude.

Isaac[3rd], (Captain), son of Isaac Selleck[2nd], married Mary Payne and had Charles, Frank, Mamie and an infant who died young. Charles married Lena, daughter of Rufus Raymond of Norwalk and had three children. Frank, son of Isaac[3rd], married Nettie Sherwood and had Nettie.

Henry Stanton, son of Isaac Selleck[2nd], married, November 20, 1867, Lydia, daughter of Sherman and Susan (Hurlbutt) Cole, and had Victor S., Willis H., Chester S. and E. Edward.

Franklin, son of Isaac[2nd] and Lucy Selleck married, first, October 14, 1874, Mattie A. Hazleton, no issue; married, second, November 21, 1889, Mary J. Gamble and had Dexter, born November 25, 1894, died January 11, 1898; Ellsworth G., born May 24, 1897.

SANDS—SELLECK—SCOTT.

On the opening day of the autumn of 1734 Nathan and Sarah Sands Selleck first saw their last born child, to whom the name of Sylvanus was given. The parents were married in Huntington, L. I., January 1, 1713, the groom (born September 12, 1676, having been the oldest son of Captain Jonathan and Abigail (Law) Selleck (pages 438 and 439), and the bride the daughter of Captain Samuel Sands, son of Captain James Sands of Berkshire County, England, one of the purchasers in 1660 of Block Island. The young Sylvanus Selleck was highly related. His paternal grandparents were of Law and Gold blood and his grandmother on his mother's side was a Ray of Block Island, while his mother's cousin, Abigail Sands, was the wife of the notable Hon. John Thomas (first Judge of Westchester County, whose home was a few rods removed from the present St. Paul's Chapel in Lewisboro, N. Y.), and his uncle (Samuel Sands) married Mary, daughter of Thomas Pell, Lord of Pelham Manor.

The boy Sylvanus Selleck grew to become a man of thirty-four when Dr. Ebenezer Dibble, Rector of St. John's Church, Stamford, was called upon to unite him in matrimony (March 2, 1768) to a Stratford lady, Tabitha (Siene or Pierce), and on November 17, 1772, the same rector baptized their two children, Molly and Betty. The father deceased while these children were minors, and in the distribution of his estate, July 6, 1786, Molly was awarded "Seventeen acres on Ox Pound," the present romantic and charmingly named "Contentment Island," while to her sister Betty was set off one-half of the near by Butler's Island. Molly married (May 17, 1787) Captain Stephen, son of James and Jemima Raymond, and her daughter Delia (Mrs. Gershom Raymond[3rd]) had Angelina (Mrs. John Scott), who was the mother of the forceful John Winfield Scott of New York City whose telling remarks after the eloquent address by General Russell Frost at the unveiling, in 1898, of the Norwalk Ludlow monument are an emphatic memory, and of his sister Angeline, now the intelligent, efficient and interested South Norwalk Librarian. Another sister of John W., Delia R., (Mrs. George E. Weeks), died in 1889.

URIAH SELLECK DESCENT.

Nathaniel[4th], son of David and Mercy (Waterbury) Selleck, married, August 7, 1744, Sarah, born August 12, 1723, daughter of Nathan and Sarah (Sands) Selleck, and had Uriah[1st], died young; Ray, Mercy, Sarah, Nathaniel and Uriah[2nd] (see page 305).[1]

This last child, Uriah[2nd], baptized October 31, 1762-3, married, May 18, 1784, Hannah, baptized about 1760, daughter of Ephraim Smith of the Haynes Ridge family (page 94), and had:

Zalmon, born March 31, 1795;

Nancy, born July 6, 1806, died in infancy;

Zalmon, son of Uriah and Hannah (Smith) Selleck, married Eliza Phillipse, and had:

Henry Augustus, born August 14, 1814.

Maria Phillipse, born September 6, 1815, (Mrs. William K. James, page 376).

[1] Uriah[2nd], baptized by the patriot Dr. Moses Mather of Darien, October 31, 1762—3, son of Nathaniel and Sarah (Selleck) Selleck, had a sister Rhoda, who married August 2, 1782, John Byxbee, Jr. Mrs. Rhoda (Selleck) Byxbee occupied the fine dwelling for that day now standing on Harbor avenue and known in late years as the "Captain Merritt place." Mrs. Byxbee survived her husband and finally removed to Flax Hill, near the present only store on the crest of that height. She had two daughters one of whom married the recalled Ray Selleck of the same hill and the other, Fanny, of lovely face and features —which are picture-preserved at the residence of the late Captain William H. Wilcox on Flax Hill—died young. John Byxbee, Jr., her father, was of the Eastham, Mass., Byxbee family, the first of whom to come to Norwalk, chose the summit of Flax Hill for his home.

There stands in St. Paul's church yard, a plain stone inscribed to the memory of Catharine Baker, the epitaph upon which is singulary pathetic from the fact that it is the epitome of the sleeper's perturbed life. Catharine Baker was carefully brought up on the Hudson River, but marrying against the wishes of her parents trouble soon befel her. One of the old families of Trinity church, New York, knew her well and fully sympathizing with her delicately but substantially assisted her. Disinherited, however, trials so told upon her that she made her way to Norwalk, where resided an intimate of the old Trinity family before referred to. Here she was welcomed, but death soon put a period to her life of vicissitudes and she was laid to rest at the head of Norwalk Green. She was possessed of something of a property, notwithstanding the fact of her family alienation. This snug little sum was Norwalk-bequeathed, but such was the strict character-probity of Uriah Selleck that he would not permit his granddaughter to retain it, but insisted that it should go back to the deceased's blood, and the consequence is that only three (quite choice) chairs are all that remain, barring the tender mound and gravestone-marking in St. Paul's churchyard, to tell of Catharine Baker.

Pale sorrow's child lies here;
Ye who have felt misfortune's frown
Here stop and drop a tear."

Not far from said stone and on the west side of the church walk is a broken slab in memory of Sarah Selleck, a sister of the first Mrs. William Lockwood and an aunt of the late William S. Lockwood of North avenue. The good young woman left her estate to St. Paul's church, but albeit her rector, Rev. Henry Whitlock and many of his people went to court to contest the estate's diversion in another direction, still the parish lost the benefaction.

Hannah, daughter of Ephraim Smith, baptized according to Stamford register, about 1760, married Uriah Selleck, who lived in what in recent years has been known as the Matthias Hubbell home in Main street. She was the grandmother of the present Mrs. William K. James and her branch of the Smith family inherited, through the Bartletts, quite a portion of the noble Haynes Ridge in New Canaan. The Norwalk records clearly show how the later members of the family transferred their rights in that large estate to the Long Island James and Moses Smith children of the blood. A portion of their Haynes Ridge property embraced the handsome vicinity of the "Church Hill" of 1896. Thomas Smith who lived in the western part of the Stamford Main street, was a son of Dr. Nathan and Elizabeth (Betts) Smith, who belonged to the same line. The residence of Thomas Smith is seen to day and his son Thomas and daughters Mary (Mrs. Burgess) and Sally (Mrs. David Holly) are Norwalk recalled. They were friends of the Stamford Jarvises and visiting this town on the occasion of a church sociable in the days of Dr. Jackson Kemper's rectorate of St. Paul's church sought out their Norwalk kin. The Thomas Smith Stamford home was a

NOAH AND GEORGE SELLECK.

Noah and George Selleck were Norwalk house-names of fifty years ago. Captain Noah Selleck, brother of Captain Isaac[2nd], had no children. He lived, during his later years, in Brooklyn, and was the instigator and proprietor of the Selleck's line of New York Packets (see page 306). Mr. Selleck accumulated a competency and closed his years surrounded by the comforts of life.

George Selleck was the oldest son, by his second wife, of James Selleck (see page 441), son of David and Mercy (Waterbury) Selleck.

James, son of David and Mercy Selleck married, second, Joanna Morgan of Wilton and had George,[1] Joanna (Mrs. Amos Barnes) and John M. of Bryantsburgh, Ill.

George, son of James and Joanna Selleck, married Harriet, daughter of Hyatt and Sarah (Somers) Banks of Redding, and had Sarah Jane (Mrs. John Plander), Ann Eliza (Mrs. George Evarts, first, Mrs. Stewart, second, Mrs. John March, third, and Mrs. James H. Beers, fourth); Harriet (Mrs. Edward Merrill); George F. and Donna Maria (Mrs. John Woolf).

Harriet, daughter of George and Harriet (Banks) Selleck, married Edward, son of Thomas B. and Sally Ann (St. John) Merrill (see page 235), and had George Thomas,[2] Laura P., James Titus (died young); Annie Betts (Mrs. Frederick R. Beach); Frank S. and Harriet St. John (Mrs. Banford S. Banks).

The Selleck family constitutes an extensive constituency and to complete the line to date would demand time and space. Its main lines have here been indicated from which it may not be impossible to establish any particular lineage branch.

prominent abode in the Stamford of olden times, and there is probably no portion of that prospered and popular township that has more changed or is more improved than that same to-day pretentious and progressive centre. The public buildings arrest attention, the stores and offices are noticeably fine, and the whole street and structure aspect is imposing. The godly Daniel Smith's sanctuary is missing, but churches of stately architecture have taken its place; the village school house near the present City Hall is gone but the commanding High School Building more to the east is a monument to the people's intelligence and admirable taste and judgment; the stage coach and horn are things of the past, but the electric cars and the rythm of the motorman's bell make transit and thoroughfare trouble-free and tuneful. In the days when the Bells, Bishops, Davenports, Hollys, Hoyts, Quintards, Rogers, Seofields, Seelys, Smiths, Waterburys, Webbs and Weeds were on the stage Stamford was indeed fair, but now it is grand, and its projenitors, ancestors, many of them, of striking lines, are entitled to record and memory-regard.

Nathan Smith of New Canaan, married Sarah, daughter of Jesse and Mercy (Selleck) Tuttle and was the father of Jesse Smith, who died at about the age of eighty some years since in West Norwalk. The children of Mr. Jesse Smith are to-day somewhat scattered. One of the daughters, Mrs. William Bessey, resides in 1899 with her sister, Mrs. John H. Romaine of Ludlow street, Stamford. Two other daughters, Mrs. Frank H. and Mrs. Dudley Hoyt, reside in Stamford. The brothers and sisters of Jesse Smith were Frederick, Orville, Bethol Mercy (Mrs. Cornelius Schenck), and Harriet (Mrs. Alfred M. Platt).

[1]George Selleck was Norwalk's first confectioner. He amassed a neat sum by his business and built the brick house (now Bishop place) on Wall Street. It was at his house that Rev. William Cooper Mead, D.D., and wife and daughter Jane Maria were entertained on the occasion of the visit of the future rector of St. Paul's Church before his acceptance of the call to the same.

[2]George Thomas Merrill married, January 11, 1898, Phebe, daughter of John Roff of New York City, and had George Kenmith, born February 16, 1899, and baptized August 20, 1899.

David W., son of Thacher and Mary (Weed) Hayes, married, March 30, 1847, Hannah Campfield, daughter of Ebenezer Selleck, and had Levinia (Mrs. Harvey Hoyt),[1] and Mary Eliza (Mrs. James Slauson).

David W. Hayes married, second, Mrs. Albia Campfield, and had no children.

Clarissa, daughter of Thacher and Mary (Weed) Hayes, married, as his second wife, Lewis Richards, M. D.,[2] of New Canaan, and had no children.

Charles, son of Thacher and Mary (Weed) Hayes, married Betsey, daughter of Stephen Waterbury, and had no children.

THACHER—DEANE—WEBB.

Lydia Thacher, a few years the senior of Captain Josiah of Norwalk, married John Deane of Groton, Conn., and was the mother of Silas Deane[1st]. Silas[1st] married Sarah Barker, to whom was born, on the day before Christmas, 1737, Silas Deane, Jr., who was a member of the first (1774) Congress, and deputized, in 1776, to proceed on a political errand to France, there to meet Dr. Benjamin Franklin and Thomas Jefferson and confer in the interests of the new power in the West. Silas Deane[2nd] married the widow of Joseph Webb[4th]. This young Webb, who died March 5 or 25, 1761, was born in Stamford December 8, 1627, but anon left Fairfield County for Wethersfield, where he married, February 2, 1748, Mehetable, born 1732, daughter of Gershom and Sarah (Waterhouse) Nott. The widow Webb was, before her second marriage, the mother of a number of Webb children, among whom was General Samuel B. (see page 400). Joseph Webb[4th] was son of Joseph[3rd], born (Marvin) Keeler. Stephen Keeler was a son of John and Lydia (Lockwood) Keeler, a fine connection, see pages 178 and 185. The children of Stephen and Hannah Keeler were Sally (Mrs. Amos Smith of Ridgefield), Nancy (Mrs. Asahel Osborn of Ridgefield), Lucy (Mrs. William Dudley), John, Lockwood died young, Mary (Mrs. Seth Ferris), Jane (Mrs. Samuel Church), Esther (Mrs. Bela St. John) which Jane and Esther were twins, and Roxy (Mrs. Charles Nash).

Seth and Mary (Keeler) Ferris were the parents of the greatly esteemed Deacon Gould Ferris of South Norwalk, who married Mary Ann, daughter of Samuel and Esther (Keeler) Beers of Wilton, and had, Mary A. (Mrs. Rev. J. J. Wooley), Frank A., and Emma (Mrs. Nelson Dickerman).

Lockwood Keeler Ferris and Mary (Mrs. Truman Trowbridge) of Danbury were also children of Seth and Mary Ferris.

Mrs. Nancy (Keeler) Osborn had several sons and daughters. One Charles, a New York silversmith, married the educated Miss Esther Harrington, of Middletown, and had a son Henry, who was on the New York Graphic (illustrated) staff.

[1]Mrs. Hoyt, who is now a widow and tenderly ministered to by her two daughters Cheshire and Mary Eliza, and grandson William A. Hanford, occupies the Hoyt home a little north of the Lewisboro rectory and westerly of the Upper Norwalk reservoir. She is a lady of high worth and the family is held in just esteem.

[2]Lewis Richards, M.D., was a New Canaan clever and conscientious physician of the old school. He possessed certain manner characteristics, but was skillful and good. His name was an household one and he was highly respected. He was twice married. His first wife, Mary Selleck, a sister of Mrs. Peter Smith of Smith's Ridge, was a rare character. She filled the Dr. Richards home (Bond house on Owenoke Avenue, 1899), with sweetness and goodness, and made it an attractive hearthstone. Her daughter Sophia (Mrs. Prof. James H. Olmstead) was a New England maiden, the like to whose eminent excellence the poet must have had in mind when he taught that "few or none rise in their room." There were two other sisters, Sarah and Hannah, and a brother James. Dr. Richards married, second, Clarissa, daughter of Thacher and Mary Hayes, to whom he was introduced by a worthy Oblong wife and mother, Mrs. Amos. N. Raymond.

ing, by the predecessor of the present brick building on Town House Hill, opposite to which Captain Thacher also possessed a house-lot.

The sea-faring Captain continued active, it would appear, almost to the going out of his life-tide. He left no "log" as the success-register of his ocean going ventures, but the Norwalk town records attest to his land enterprises. Money was seemingly at his command, as well as the mind-ability to wisely invest and employ it.

On January 6, 1775, he settled his "stone dwelling house at the great bridge" upon his sons Daniel and Stephen G., which edifice became, in 1785, the property of James Selleck of the family of the first Mrs. William Lockwood.

Until advancing age Mr. Thacher held the old Whitney Mill (northwest corner of Main and Wall Streets, 1896). He was its proprietor and the owner, also of "Thacher's mill pond" in the rear. The Whitney-Thacher grain establishment has a history (page 35).

The story of such lives as Captain Josiah Thacher and his contemporaries Joseph Hitchcock, Goold Hoyt, John Belden, John Cannon, Joshua King, Peter Quintard, Thaddeus Betts, and the Lockwoods, Marvins, Raymonds, Benedicts, Hanfords, Ketchums and Rogers of his day is instructive. Write, urges a western lady of prominence and a gifted graduate of the Emma Willard Seminary of Troy, N. Y., the history of the Norwalk ladies of the immediate pre and post revolutionary periods. Mrs. Judge Austin Adams, herself of Norwalk blood, is unquestionably correct. There is, quite likely, much in the lives of the John Gregory (Lieutenant), son of Denton[1st] and Elizabeth Gregory, married, first, December 8, 1774, Sarah Fairchild, and had Sarah (Mrs. Zechariah Whitman Fitch), born July 11, 1775; Hannah, February 6, 1778; Jesse, March 14, 1780; Helena, December 22, 1781; Elizabeth, September 1, 1787; Betsey, February 26, 1790; John, April 25, 1792, and Branford, December 31, 1795, who died January 26, 1798. The first Mrs. Lieutenant John Gregory died January 15, 1795-6, and her husband married, second, September 20, 1795-6, Nancy Dickinson, who died September 3, 1798. Lieutenant John Gregory married, third, December 9, 1798 (date copied correctly but there is possibly a mistake), Betsey, born July 3, 1772, daughter of Burwell and Sarah (Burwell Betts (second wife), and had Antoinette, unmarried, and Angeline (second wife of Edmond Tuttle), twins, and George B. and Burwell D.

Burwell Betts married, first, November 1, 1740, Thankful Raymond, who died December 3, 1747.

Mrs. Stephen Gregory was a cousin of Captain Hezekiah Betts, the Revolutionary soldier. Her grandfather was Captain Thomas Benedict, who was a son of John and Phebe (Gregory) Benedict, which John Benedict was a son of Thomas Benedict the settler. Mrs. Gregory's sister Elizabeth married Thomas Hayes of the Hayes family branch, which removed to Vermont and is represented to-day by Mrs. Sophia Sage of San Francisco.

Silas Gregory, son of Stephen and Mary Gregory, and wife Polly had Julia (Mrs. William Hanford), Silas Burr, born February 13, 1807, and Susan (Mrs. Abraham Sherwood of Bedford, N. Y.). Silas B. Gregory married, first, Ruth Ann Sherwood and had William Burr and Jane Ann. Silas B. Gregory married, second, Emma Green, who came to this country with her father at six years of age from England. Her father was a jeweler whose Norwalk store was the old Thomas B. Merrill building at "the Bridge." The children of Silas B. and Emma Gregory were Silas W., George, Frederick, Thomas, Jane and Emma.

Josiah, son of Denton[1st] and Elizabeth Gregory, married, January 23, 1783, Ellen Adams. He owned, largely in Cranberry Plains and built and liberally supported the Methodist Episcopal church in Poplar Plains. His sister Clemon married, June 4, 1785, Benjamin Fillow, and had Lewis, born March 13, 1786; Phebe, March 18, 1788, and James, December 21, 1791. Denton Gregory[2nd], son of Denton Gregory[1st], and Elizabeth, was the father of William Gregory, now of Cranberry Plains. The casual mention of Captain Josiah Thacher's Gregory heirship prompts to Thacher-Gregory inquiry.

lot on the south side of Joseph Webb's, to be laid out, having due respect to the highway; to Samuel Hoyt, Increase Holly, David Waterbury, Obadiah Seely, John Waterbury, Thomas Newman, Joseph Fish, Obadiah Stevens, Benjamin Stevens, John Jagger, Moses Knapp, Daniel Ferris, Jonathan Seeley, Joseph Jones and William Penoyer, severally, house lots for their services.

At the end of the list is this record: "the town doth give unto John Green two house lots for his sons, next to Abraham Ambler's front, which homelots were given as they were soldiers."

In Dec. 1677, the town votes to Capt. Jonathan Sellick, "as was upon service against the common enemy, all that piece of land lying upon the west side of the landing place, beginning at the mouth of the brook commonly called Hardy's Hole, in length to the Southfield fence."

The only other local record which refers to these local struggles with the Indians are those in which, occasionally, a citizen asks for an appropriation for his services. The last of these claims was preferred in 1692, when Joshua Hait asks for a piece of land on account of his going out, a soldier, against the common inimy;" and two acres in the ox pasture were given him "as a gratuity for his good service in the late war." At the same time a piece of land is "layed out" to Simon Chapman, probably for the same reason.

Already our townsmen had felt themselves relieved of further danger so that they might safely order a final disarmament as the following record shows.

"18 Dec. 1695, per vote outcry the town doth sell the fort wood about ye meeting house to Stephen Clason for seventeen shillings and ninepence." "The town by outcry doth sell ye fort gates ye wheels of ye great guns and all ye wood belonging to ye guns it is now sold to Nathanall Cross and Jonathan Holly for five shillings and sixpence."

And who shall say that such was not a worthy disposal of the last witnesses to the struggles which the pioneers of the town

The following choice morceau, found in the New York colonial records of this date, will enable us to estimate the influence of Stamford, in what has since become the metropolis of the continent. It bears date, New York, November 28, 1700, and was written by the "Earl of Bellomont," to the English Lords of Trade, his masters. It will give us a pretty clear idea of the Yankee enterprise of at least one of the Stamford boys of that day. The record will also, reveal the natural results of the nearness of Stamford to the great metropolis of the country, indicating thus early in its history how strongly our business men are tempted towards the city.

"Theres a town called Stamford, in Conn. Colony, on the border of this province, where one Major Selleck lives, who has a ware house close to the sea, that runs between the mainland and Nassau, (Long Island). That man does us great mischief with his ware house, for he receives abundance of goods from our vessels, and the merchants afterwards take their opportunity of running them into this town. Major Selleck received at least £10,000 worth of treasure and East India goods, brought by one Clarke of this town from Kid's sloop, and lodged with Selleck."

1768, and had Sarah, b. '70; Esther. '71; Lewis, '73; Noyse, 1777.

SKELDING, Thomas, 1701. married Rebecca Austin and their son, Thomas, was b. in '03

ST. JOHN, David, blacksmith, 1758, is allowed by vote of the town to settle at Woodpecker Ridge.

James, and Hanna Hait, m. Sept. 19, 1753, and had a large family.

SELLECK.—This family, natives of Wales, as the tradition is, were in Boston as early as 1643. Two of the sons of David and Susanna Selleck of Boston,—Jonathan, born, May 20, '41, the very year of our settlement, and John, b. April 21, '43; came to Stamford about the year '60.[1] Jonathan had house and land recorded to him in '63.

Jonathan, married Abigail, daughter of Richard Law, and had his first child, Jonathan, born here, July, 11, 1664. He had two other sons, David, b. Jan. 21, '66, and John, who graduated at Harvaad, in '90. These sons all died, so Savage tells, us before the father's death, which is recorded as taking place, Jan. 10. 1712-13. This Jonathan was a prominent man, and at his death he bequeathed his Latin, Greek and Hebrew books to the Rev. Mr. Davenport.

JOHN, the other pioneer of this name, made freeman, 1669; married Sarah Law, a sister of his brother Jonathan's wife and had children, Sarah, b. August 22, 1669; David, b. Dec. 27, 1672; Nathaniel, b. April 7, '78; John, b. June 7, '81; Susanna, b. Feb. 2, '83, and Joanna, b. May 31, '86. This John was a wealthy ship-owner and captain. Under date, Feb. 25, '68-9, the town granted Mr. John Selleck a piece of waste land by the landing place to set a dwelling-house, or ware-house. He was taken prisoner on a voyage to England, in May, '89, by the French, and never returned to Stamford. His estate was settled here in 1700, and was very large. A branch of this family went just after our revolutionary war to Oyster Bay, on Long Island, where, down to the present day there are found worthy representatives of the name. Abigail, wife of Maj. Selleck, d. Dec. 20, '11.

STONE, John, in 1701, sells to Zach. Roberts, sen. of Bedford, the land and house he bought of Samuel Dean. He was one of the townsmen for a number of years.

STUART, Charles, was here in 1763.

STUDWELL, Joseph, was here in 1667. Thomas was here in March, '67–8, and binds himself to pay for, or return a catalogue of goods, among which were hatters tools. As security, he mortgaged three acres of meadow in the East field.

STURGES, Christopher, admitted inhabitant by vote in town meeting, 1718, and had a son, Jabez, b. here, '21. For several years after '23, he is enrolled among the town officials. His wife, Mary, d. Feb. 17, '46–7.

STURDIVANT, Wm. In 1682, Nicholas Webster, receives from the townsmen a piece of land in the rear of his lot, which had been layed out to this Wm. Sturdivant.

TALMADGE, Thomas, was here in 1709, and by vote admitted an inhabitant. He married Mary Weed, and had a daughter Hannah. He had married again in '21, when his son James was born.

THOMPSON, John, "gunsmith and resident in Stamford," sells house and lands to Jonathan Selleck, May 7, 1667. He was here, also, in '69 and in '70—sold land to Richard Webb.

TRYHERN, (Tryon) Edward, appears on the land record as early as 1684. One of his daughters married John Webster. Sarah, his wife, died here, Sept. 2, 1702, and his death occurred May 14, '74; down to which date his name is found quite frequently in the records.

THORP, Charles, was living here in 1733, when his son Edward was born.

TODD, John, jr. was an inhabitant in 1774.

TURNEY, Joseph, had lands laid out to him in 1686 on the sult the extreme borders of our soil; but the gallant general had so far outstripped them. as to have rallied our townsmen in sufficient numbers with the aid of the garrison in our fort, to meet them and turn their invasion into a precipitous retreat. Once, also, probably, was the eastern margin of our patriot town desecrated with the stealthy tread of British armed men; but their safety demanded a hurried return to the transports which had landed them, and so the town was spared the ravage they had designed.

The following letter from our most distinguished townsman, is authentic respecting the standing of two other of our citizens, and shows how our people managed their foreign commerce during the war:

Stamford, Dec. 8, 1775.

RESPECTED SIR,—Mr. Selleck and Mr. Bates, two of my neighbors own a vessel of about fifty tons, with which they are desirous to make a voyage to the West Indies, to carry cattle and provisions and bring back military stores, if a permit can be obtained of your Honor, for the performance. I suppose that is expected that Mr. Bates will go Master, if the vessel is permitted to go. I believe he may be depended on; and I do not know a man better calculated for the business. The vessel is said to be a prime sailor.

We have but a few pounds of powder in our town stock, and I believe it will be universally agreeable to the inhabitants of the town, thet a permit should be granted. At the desire of Mr. Bates, I write this. He informme that Mr. Selleck will apply to your Honor for the permit, and will give bond, if required, for the faithful conduct of the master. Mr. Selleck is a man of considerable interest, and his bond will be quite sufficient.

I am with the greatest esteem and respect, your Honor's most obedient and humble servant,

ABRAM DAVENPORT,

HON. GOV. TRUMBULL.

But the most extensive invasion of the town by the British and their loyal abettors here, occurred Sunday, July 22, 1781. The leaders in that sacriligious foray were from among the tories of the eastern part of the town, and their depredations and captures were confined to their own neighbors and friends. During the night preceding they had crossed the Sound from Lloyd's neck in seven boats, and stealthily secreted themselves, about forty in number, in a swamp a few rods south of the meeting house, waiting the gathering of the congregation for their usual worship. Providentially several of the leading patriots were pose his country longer, as his father was now dead and his widowed mother was living alone at Stamford. He therefore begs to be allowed to return, as a loyal citizen of the new government. The request was granted by the legislature. Mr. Holly afterwards became the proprietor of the Cove Mills, and a prominent and honored citizen.

Elnathan Holly a youth of nineteen years, in 1776, joined the enemy, and was employed in the army. In April, 1782, he abandoned the British service, returned to Stamford and was imprisoned. He forwards to the legislature a penitent confession, his sacred oath of future allegiance, and a fervent plea for his liberation. The petition was granted.

In May, 1782, widow Mary Wooster, pleads before the legislature the case of her son then in New York. He had been early drawn over the lines and into the British service. He had never taken up arms; and of late had lived in New York, carrying on his trade as tailor. He had made money, and is now anxious to visit his mother and make Stamford his future home. He is ready to give pledges of his loyalty to the new government and is by vote of the legislature allowed to return.

After the depredations committed by the British in the eastern part of the town, as reported in our chronological record under date of Nov. 30, 1780, the legislature appointed a committee to report all dangerous persons from Stamford. This was done, when the following names were reported; Gideon Leeds, Admer Stevens, Sam'l Hoyt 3rd, Sam'l Crissy, John Selleck, Anthony De Mill, Daniel Selleck, Josiah Scofield 3rd, Josiah Scofield, John Bates, Nathaniel Dan, James Scofield, junr., Jonathan Lewis, David Hoyt, Gideon Lounsbury and Sylvanus Seeley. Our chronological record shows that Gideon Lounsbury was acquitted of the charge. In the State Archives I found other papers respecting these tories worth reporting.

One contains an appeal from Samuel Crissy and Gideon Leeds, demanding an examination, which was granted. At the trial they brought forward such proofs of their substantial and hopes for merciful treatment. He also promises to be a "faithful member of the United States." The legislature would not release him.

Leeds, Gideon, a brother of Carey.

Lewis, Jonathan.

Loder, Jacob, son of Daniel and Margaret, born in Stamford, Aug. 13, 1734, and went to New Brunswick where he died at Sheffield in 1817.

Lounsbury, Gideon, arrested in 1775, on suspicion of favoring the British. Makes a humble apology and promises "to my utmost to exert myself in opposition to the ministerial troops."

Merrit, Shubael, a "cowboy" who was shot, over in Greenwich.

Mills, Jesse, had rendered himself so offensive to the patriots of the north part of the town that, he was pursued into his sister's house, which stood near where Isaac L. Jones' store now stands, on Highridge, and was wounded by a shot. He escaped from his pursuers and went to Nova Scotia.

Newman, Joshua.

Picket, David went with his wife and seven children to St. John, New Brunswick in 1783. He was a magistrate of the colony and a Justice of the Court of Common Pleas of King's County, where he died in 1826.

Rodgers, Fitch went with four brothers to St. John, New Brunswick, but returned to Stamford where he died.

Quintard, Isaac, had command of the first company of militia in Stamford, in 1775.

Scofield, James, junr.

Scofield, Josiah 3rd.

Scofield, Ezra, a brother of the patriot Captain Reuben, went to St. John, N. B., and became a prominent man.

Selleck, Daniel.

Selleck, John.

Seeley, Obadiah.

He had sought the help of the constable to recover damages from a neighbor for some harm done by him. The sharp-eyed official saw at a glance that there was no ground for the attachment, and refused the process. Mead scolded and threatened, but to no purpose. He then goes into court with an action against him for neglecting his official duty. But the angry plaintiff soon finds himself a sorry defendant, with but a miserable advocate. Law had him put under trial for scandalizing the church, for slanders and defamatory reports and for disturbing the peace of the church and the town. To all which nothing in extenuation could be said, and the court exculpating their officer, sentenced Mr. Mead to make full acknowledgement at Stamford, to the satisfaction of the church and Mr. Law, to pay Mr. Law ten pounds for his expense in the trial, to pay ten pounds more for disturbing the jurisdiction, and then that he and his brother or some other acceptable man, be bound over for his good behaviour. After the sentence Mr. Mead made the fullest confession and retraction, and Mr. Law was left thenceforward to prosecute his official business unhindered.

Mr. Law had married in Wethersfield, Margaret Kilbourn, by whom he had three children; Jonathan, b. 1636–7; Abigail, who married, May 11, 1665, Jonathan Selleck of Stamford; and Sarah, who married, Oct. 28, 1669, John Selleck, also of Stamford. The son Jonathan, married June 1, 1664, Sarah Clark, daughter of Dea. George Clark of Milford, and removed to Milford, where he was a man of note. His son, Jonathan, b. Aug. 6, 1674, graduated at Harvard College, 1695; was chief-justice of Connecticut for sixteen years and governor of the state from 1741 to 1750.

Mr. Law probably died in Stamford, though there is no record to show it. His will, the last document in which his name appears, bears date March 12, 1686–7. His widow had probably died before this date as no mention is made of her in the will.

There is a paper, entered on the town records in 1686, bearing date Feb. 15, 1680, which speaks of the misunderstanding under which he had given his son, Law, his land. It seems that the son removed from Stamford to Milford, and this removal was a source of dissatisfaction to the father. Still adhering to the former grant to his son, he now insists on dividing the lands which had come into his hands since that former gift, to his daughters, the two Mrs. Selleck, so that they may each have a half as much as he; for which he says "the word of God is clear, and good reason for it, and why any Christian man that loveth righteousness and equity should be against this, I see not."

MITCHELL, REV. JONATHAN, was son, not of Jonathan, as Sprague's Annals of the American Pulpit has it, but of Matthew Mitchell, the wealthiest and otherwise most noted of the lay settlers of Stamford. He was born, so Savage supposes, at Halifax, Yorkshire, Eng., and in the year 1624, according to Mather. He came with his father, in the James, from Bristol, in 1635, to Cambridge, Mass., and thence to Concord and Springfield, and in 1640 to Stamford. He remained here probably until he entered Harvard College, where he graduated, A. B., in 1647. He was ordained, Aug. 21, 1650, at Cambridge, where he labored in the ministry for eighteen years.

He was one of the early New England ministers whom the quaint Mather has immortalized in his Magnalia. He styles him the "Ecclesiastes;" "a Pastor of the Church, and a glory of the College in Cambridge, New England." In his epistle dedicatory, he calls him "blessed Mr. Mitchell," and in his sketch of the life and labors of Mr. Mitchell, he makes him the "excellent," the famous pastor" and "this best of preachers in our new English nation." The opening of his biographical sketch is worthy of a place here, as illustrating the times to which our subject belonged, and also, as furnishing us an interesting clue to his character and that of his family:—

"If it were counted an honor to the town of Halifax in Yorkshire that the famous John de Sacro Bozco, author of the well known treatise "De Sphoera," was born there; this town was

ASA COUNTRYMAN, one year; EBEN FRANCIS, about three years, and J. SMITH DODGE, Jr., who is still the occupant.

CATHOLIC CHURCH.

The first Catholic services in Stamford, of which we have any account, were held by Rev. John Smith, in September, 1842, in the house of P. H. Drew, in West Stamford. At that date there were but three Catholic families in the town. Services were held there, monthly, until 1846. Mr. Drew removing to the old "Webb Place" on South-St., services were there held, first, by the Right Rev. Bishop Tyler. Here the meetings of this denomination were continued, by several ministers, until the church on Meadow-St. was built in 1851. Since then, the Catholic population has increased very rapidly. The church has been once enlarged, and the present necessities of the congregation call for still greater enlargement, for which provision is being made.

The following priests have been stationed here:

EDWARD CLONEY, 1854—1857.

JAMES REYNOLDS, 1857, and died here Oct. 20, 1858.

JAMES O'NEIL, from Sept. 1858 to the present time. He has been assisted by the following curates, Edward O'Neil, who died while in this office, Christopher Dugget, and his present assistant, curate Eugene Gaffney.

FRIENDS MEETING.

How early the movement was started which led to the Friends' meeting in Darien, I have been unable to learn. From a work published in 1844, embracing the biographies of Catherine Seely and Deborah S. Roberts, who were themselves Friends, we learn that their grandmother, Catherine Selleck, was the first member of the sect in Stamford. The opening of a Friends' meeting at a private residence is thus described by Miss Roberts. "After seriously weighing the subject, on the 21st of 6th month, 1828, and on the 1st day of the week, we convened at the house of Uncle Wyx Seely, and quietly sat down together in the capacity of a religious meeting for worship. It was held in the sick room of my dear cousin C. Seely, and was the same one in which our worthy grandmother Catherine Selleck, the first member in this place, sat down in the same way, herself alone. At length others joined her and finally a meeting was allowed." The first "minister" they had, was probably a woman by the name of Griffin; and the only preacher who was located there was probably one of the resident members, Mr. Samuel Bishop, who died in 1852, a lineal descendant of Rev. John Bishop, the second pastor of the first Congregational church of Stamford. The Friends built a small, square meeting house in 1811, and for a few years held in it their simple service. But the meetings were long since abandoned, nothing being left as a witness to the fact of such an attempt, save the old square frame in which the meetings were held.

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH OF STAMFORD.

The first records of any movement towards organizing a Presbyterian church in Stamford, are found among the records of the Congregational church. After the communion service of Jan. 2, 1853, in a church meeting, the following members of the Congregational church called for letters of dismission from the church, to constitute a Presbyterian church about to be formed.

Augustus R. Moen, Alexander Milne, George Elder, James D. Haff, Luke Baker, Hiram Warner, James Robinson, John Holmes, Mrs. Sophia A. Moen, Miss Cornelia A. Moen, Hannah E. Elder, Mrs. Mary E. Haff, Mrs. Almira Baker, Mrs. Sophia Warner, Miss Elizabeth M. Warner, Mrs. Georgette A. Robinson, Mrs. Catherine Helmes.

Letters of dismission were voted to these members of the church according to the rules of the church, Jan. 16, 1853. During the next few weeks similar letters were given to the following members of the Congregational church:

Wells R. Ritch, Mary Ann Sturges, Elizabeth Sturges, Mrs. Amzi Ayres, Miss Matilda Moen, Mrs. Sarah A. Ritch, Miss Sarah L. Ritch.

This church was organized Feb. 25, 1853 with twenty-six

Dear Sir:

I am seeking the baptismal record of Joseph Whiting Allerton, whose mother Whiting said he was born on Dec. 14, 1811 at Syracuse, N.Y., and was in Springfield of Union. This may have occurred in the vicinity of Syracuse.

Transcript records in your diocese show that Springfield parishes did not exist in existence at that time and where your baptismal records might be at the present time?

Enclosed is a [illegible] of postage for your reply. Thank you for your assistance.

Yours sincerely,

Dear David:

Sorry to be so long getting the Koch family record to you. First I tried to get a copy from cousin Gertrude and wasn't successful. Then Marge said she'd furnish me with a copy when they returned from Florida. The copy she sent was marked and not up-to-date so I decided to make up a new one, but found our typewriter (which is an old secondhand one) could not accommodate that large sheet of paper. Anyway the enclosed has all the additions I know about and I believe it is complete. Wish I could have typed it as it would be more legible.

Looks like spring here today. Know you have had more winter there and hope you are having mild days too.

Cordially,
Jean Sellner

Dear Joan,

Thank you very much for the excellent chart you sent of the Ash family. I know this took you a lot of time, and I appreciate it.

From time to time as I have an opportunity I'll do a little work on the Ash line. A few weeks ago I found the following entry in the International Genealogical Index (IGI) at the Mormon Branch Library:

Thomas Ash, son of Thomas Ash and Margaret Crawford, bapt. June 17, 1769, Belfast, Co. Antrim, Ireland. (Possibly ancestors or relatives of your family.)

Elizabeth may have told you I found many pages of Pollock information at the Minnesota Historical Society. If and when I connect Jack's line to that one, I'll send you copies. I'm still trying to locate the Episcopal church records in the Syracuse, N.Y. area, hoping to find the baptismal record of Joseph Whiting Pollock.

Hope you're gradually improving!

Sincerely,

Dave

Dear Mr. Witheridge:

In checking the files here, I learned that in 1799, Syracuse, New York was a part of the Diocese of New York (1785-1838); then in 1838 Syracuse was a part of the Diocese of Western New York (1838-1868); and in 1868 Syracuse was in the Diocese of Central New York.

Therefore, I believe you should write to the Diocese of New York at the following address for the information you are seeking:

I am in hopes they will be able to help you.

Dear Sirs:

I am seeking the baptismal record of Joseph Whiting Sallack, whose newspaper obituary said he was born on Dec. 14, 1799, at Syracuse, N.Y., and was an Episcopalian. Of course, this may have meant in the vicinity of Syracuse.

From your records can you tell me what Episcopal parishes in that vicinity were in existence at that time and where their baptismal records might be at the present time?

I wrote to the Diocese of Central New York in Syracuse, and they said Syracuse was part of your diocese in 1799.

Enclosed is a stamped, self-addressed envelope for your reply. Thank you for your assistance.

Dear Father Witheridge,

Enclosed is a listing of parishes that existed in the year 1799. For almost anything that happened before 1860 it is safe to say that if records exist at all they are in Trinity Parish Archives. So, I would write to them first. You may address your correspondence to Ms. Phyllis Barr, Archivist.

Please let us know if we may be of further assistance, and good luck with your search!

Dear Rev. Mr. Witheridge:

We are in receipt of your letter of 8 June 1983 in which you request information on Joseph Whiting Selleck, b. 1799, at Syracuse, New York.

Trinity Church does not have baptismal records of any Episcopal churches in Syracuse nor any other church for that matter -- only those of its own congregation down through the years.

We would suggest that you write once again to the Diocese of Central New York, perhaps restating your case, for frankly this inquiry concerns their history and not that of Trinity Church.

Sincerely yours,

Dear Mr. Templar:

I note that you have received a carbon copy of the reply I received from Michael Womack, secretary to the archivist of Trinity Church, in regard to my request about parish records in the vicinity of Syracuse, N.Y., in 1799. As you see, they have nothing but their own records.

In your letter of June 1 you sent me a list of Episcopal parishes in Manhattan. However if you have my letter of May 8 you will notice that I was trying to identify the Episcopal parishes that were in existence in 1799 in the vicinity of what is now Syracuse. (The Onondaga Historical Association said that the name Syracuse was first used in 1819, and until 1818, census listings were under the Town of Salina.)

You may not know where the old parish records are located, but you no doubt have an annual report of the Diocese of New York for 1799, in which the parishes of the diocese were listed. I should like to have a copy of that list, and I am enclosing a check for $1.00 for a xerxed copy. If you do not know which towns were in the vicinity of Syracuse I could track that information down elsewhere.

Thank you again for your help.

Yours sincerely,

David E Wattbridge

Dear Mrs. Guengel:

In April I wrote to you about parish records of Episcopal churches that were in existence in the Syracuse area in 1799, and you referred me to the Diocese of New York, which had jurisdiction over that part of New York at that time. So far their archivist has been unable to help me, and I wonder if you will do me another favor.

The yearbook of your diocese probably contains a list of churches with information about them. Could you send me photocopies of the pages that would give the following information about the churches in the Syracuse Metropolitan District?

- Name and address of church
- Minister's name
- Date of founding or organization

With this information I shall begin to correspond with some of the older parishes about their history and early records. Thank you very much for your help. Enclosed is a check for $2.00 to cover the cost of the copies.

Dear Mr. Witheridge:

I am replying to your letter of June 24th.

In checking with the History Department of the Onondaga County Public Library, I learned that the village of Syracuse was founded in approximately 1802 and was incorporated in 1825.

Enclosed is the information you requested about the Syracuse Metropolitan District. I am in hopes you find this helpful in your search.

If you are researching the SelleckFamily, the thought occurred to me today that there used to be a Mrs. Robert Selleck, bookkeeper, who worked in this office for seven years. She just moved to 56 Armbruster Road, Henrietta, NY 14623 and she may be a link for you. However, I would like to suggest you wait until Fall to write her, as she and her husband along with 2 small children just moved and they are in the process of getting settled.

Good luck.

Dear Father Witheridge,

Enclosed is a copy of the entire Journal of Convention for the year 1797. As you can see it is quite small with little information. Also, the list is by clergy rather than by parish.

It was surprising to me that Trinity Church does not have the records that you have been looking for. I will check with their archivist in person next week to be sure, as all of my information leads me to think that the assistant is incorrect.

Also enclosed is your receipt for the cost of xeroxing.

Good luck, again. Let me know if and when I may be of further assistance.

JOURNAL, &c.

NEW YORK, TUESDAY, OCTOBER 3D, 1797.

The Clergy and Delegates assembled in Trinity Church, at half-past ten o'clock, A. M.

The Right Rev. Dr. Provoost, read prayers, and a sermon was preached by the Rev. Mr. Vandyke.

After Divine service, the testimonials of the Delegates were read, and approved.

The members then proceeded to the appointment of a Secretary; and Mr. Bisset was chosen.

The congregation of Christ Church in the town of Franklin, Dutchess county, was, on motion of the Rev. Mr. Rogers, and evidence stated by him and other members, recognised and received as a church in union with this Convention; and their Delegates, Mr. Uriah Mitchell and Mr. Archibald Campbell, were admitted to take their seats.

On motion of the Rev. Mr. Ireland,

Resolved, That the thanks of this Convention be given to the Rev. Mr. Vandyke for his excellent sermon preached before them this day, and that he be requested to publish the same.

On motion of the Rev. Dr. Moore, the minutes of the last Convention, together with the Constitution and Canons, were read.

Adjourned to half-past 10 o'clock to-morrow.

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 4TH, 1797.

The Convention met.

The Rev. Mr. Rattoone read prayers.

A report was given in by the Committee of the Protestant Episcopal Church for Propagating the Gospel in the State of New York, accompanied with the minutes of the Committee, the letters and journal of the Rev. Mr. Wetmore, and the Treasurer's account of the state of the funds; all which were read, and approved by the Convention.

The Convention then proceeded to the election of the Committee of the Protestant Episcopal Church for Propagating the Gospel in the State of New York; and the Rev. Dr. Moore, Rev. Dr. Beach, Rev. Mr. Bisset, Dr. Charlton, Mr. Van Wagenen, and Mr. David Clarkson, were chosen.

The Treasurer gave a statement of his accounts and produced a certificate signed by two members of the Standing Committee, testifying that they were just and right.

Resolved, That the thanks of the Convention be given to Mr. Van Wagenen for his faithful services as Treasurer.

On motion of the Rev. Mr. Ireland, a canon was enacted for continuing the powers and functions of certain Committees and officers till a new election take place.

The Rev. Mr. Rattoone proposed a canon for the better ascertaining of the qualifications of candidates for Holy Orders; the further consideration of which, after some discussion, was postponed till to-morrow.

Agreeably to the fourth canon enacted in the last Convention, the Rev. Mr. Rogers and Rev. Mr. Ireland gave in to the Bishop the amount of their parochial registers, with a written account of the state of their parishes. A similar return which had been transmitted by the Rev. Mr. Thomas L. Moore, was also presented. They were read in the Convention, and ordered to be filed by the Secretary.

Adjourned to ten o'clock, to-morrow.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 5TH, 1797.

The Convention met.

The Rev. Mr. Rogers read prayers.

The Rev. Mr. Rattoone, after some discussion of the subject, agreed to the further postponement of the canon proposed by him yesterday; and,

On motion of Rev. Mr. Vandyke, seconded by Rev. Mr. Rattoone,

Resolved, That the Clerical and Lay Deputies from this Convention to the General Convention, be instructed to propose and advocate in that body the obtaining of a more effectual and guarded mode of ascertaining the qualifications of candidates for Holy Orders; and that the Bishop be requested to use his influence for the accomplishment of the same salutary purpose.

The Right Rev. Dr. Provoost, Rev. Mr. Nesbitt, Rev. Mr. Sayrs, and Rev. Mr. Van Horne, gave in the amount of their parochial registers.

The Rev. Dr. Moore communicated to the Convention a letter addressed to him by the Rev. Mr. Ellison, stating that some Lutheran clergymen had, in the name and on the behalf of the Consistory of the Lutheran Church in the State of New York, intimated to him a desire to have it proposed to this Convention that their Church might be united with the Protestant Episcopal Church in this State, and that their ministers might receive Episcopal ordination: Whereupon it was Resolved, That the Rev. Dr. Moore, Rev. Mr. Ellison, and Rev. Mr. Rogers, be a Committee to meet such gentlemen of the Lutheran Church as may be duly appointed by their ecclesiastical authority to confer with them on this subject; and that, should it appear to the Conferees on the part of this Church proper and necessary to obtain the interposition of the General Convention for the accomplishment of this object, they shall be empowered, with the consent and advice of the Bishop, to make application, in the name of this Convention, to that body at its meeting in September next; and that they shall make report of their proceedings to the next State Convention.

The Convention proceeded to the appointment of the Standing Committee; and the Rev. Dr. Moore, Rev. Dr. Beach, Rev. Mr. Cooper, Rev. Mr. Bissett, Dr. Charlton, General Clarkson, and Gerrit Van Schoonhoven, and J. O. Hoffman, Esq's, were elected.

The Convention proceeded to the election of Deputies to the General Convention; and the Rev. Dr. Moore, Rev. Thomas L. Moore, Rev. Mr. Bissett, Rev. Mr. Rogers, Richard Harison, Henry Walton, John Delafield, Esq's, and Mr. Moses Rogers, were chosen.

Mr. Hubert Van Wagenen was elected Treasurer.

The Convention adjourned.

CANON.

It is hereby ordained that the Standing Committee, the Committee of the Protestant Episcopal Church for Propagating the Gospel in the State of New York, the Deputies to the General Convention, the Treasurer, and the Secretary, shall continue in office, and exercise their respective functions during the year for which they are appointed, and until a new election take place.

NOTE.—There do not appear to have been any Conventions held in 1798, 1799, or 1800.

Note → "For the benefit of those who do not quite understand how it is that our records all come from the Congregational church, a word may well be added to what has already been written in the Preface of the first book. Not alone is it because such records are found to be the oldest and best, but it is well to remember that from the beginning of the settlement in 1635 to the year 1705 while there were, scattered here and there, a few Baptists, Episcopalians and Friends, no other organization of any kind existed. The whole territory was entirely theirs till, in 1705, a Baptist society was organized in Groton which stood alone of its kind for twenty years. In 1726 the second was formed at New London; and not till 1743 was the third, at North Stonington to be found.

"Up to this time there had been little deviation from the tenets of Congregationalism, though with the organization of the Baptists in the East, the few isolated Episcopalians of the West, after persistent effort from the year 1706, had succeeded in organization at Fairfield in 1723 the first Connecticut Episcopal parish. Yet the year 1750 found the latter with but twenty-five struggling parishes against 147 Congregational located in all parts of the colony." p. 4 (Preface)

DESCENDANTS OF ROBERT LOCKWOOD,

A. D. 1630.

ROBERT LOCKWOOD

came from England about 1630 and settled in Watertown, Massachusetts, where six of his ten children were born, and where their births are recorded. He was made a freeman March 9th, 1636–37. (Mass. Rec., I., 372.) He was executor of the estate of Edmund Lockwood, supposed to be his brother; see Appendix. About 1646 he removed from Watertown, Mass., to Fairfield, Conn., where he died 1658. (Bolton's Hy. Westchester Co., N. Y., p. 108.) He was made a freeman of Connecticut May 20th, 1652. (Trumbull's Conn. Col. Rec., I., 231.) "This Court Goun'r John Winthrop (of Conn.) presiding, doth confirme Mr. Gold to be Leiften't. Nehe. Olmstead and Robert Lockwood to be Sergeants at Fairfield." (Conn. Col. Rec., I., 299.) He was appointed Sergeant at Fairfield in May, 1657. (Rev. Bouton's Hist. Dis. in 1851, p. 59.) His name is recorded as a settler at Fairfield as early as 1641. (N. E. H. and G. Reg., 7, 157.)

The names and dates of the births of his first six children are printed in nearly all the early historical works of New England. An inventory of his property was made Sept. 11th, 1658, by Anthony Wilson and John Banks. He left no Will.

Aprile ye 30th, 1646, he sold to Bryan Pendleton all the land granted to him by the town, also four acres of remote meadow, bought of Mr. Bridge, except one acre of patch meadow, sold Sept. 29th, 1645, to Edward Garfield. Soon after this he moved to Norwalk, Connecticut. (Bond's Watertown.)

In 1650 Robert Lockwood, of Fairfield, deeded to Rev. John Bishop the house and lot which he had purchased of Elias Bayley, Rev. Mr. Denton's attorney. (Hy. Stamford, p. 50.)

Eleven Lockwoods had been graduates of Yale College in 1834. (Savage.)

NOTE: Edward Garfield, above mentioned, is said to have been the ancestor of James Abram Garfield, President of the United States. His widow, Susannah, was appointed administratrix. The estate was administered upon by her October 20th, 1658. The widow, Mrs. Susannah Lockwood, married Jeffrey Ferris, and died at "Grinwich," December 23d, 1660. (Hy. Stamford, Conn., p. 158.)

"Gershom," for he said, "I have been a stranger, in a strange land." (Exodus ii. 22.)

He removed to Greenwich with his father before he was nine, and was only fifteen years of age when his father died.

"Lieut. Gershom Lockwood was the principal carpenter and builder in the town of Greenwich, and filled many offices of trust and importance." (Mead's His. of Greenwich, p. 113.)

"Gershom Lockwood was one of the twenty-seven proprietors of Greenwich." (Ib.)

‡ C. Rec., vol. 2, p. 73. Barber's His. Coll. Conn., Willis's Manuscript.
§ History Norwalk, p. 25. ‖ History Norwalk, pp. 61, 83.

"Gershom Lockwood and son in 1694–95 were taxed on £153. 15s." He made his Will November 22d, 1692, and was at that time called "Gershom Lockwood, Senior."

The plain blue slate headstone which marks his grave is well preserved, and bears the following inscription:

> "HERE LYES YE BODY
> OF MR. GERSHOM
> LOCKWOOD, AGED
> 77 YEARS, DEC'D
> MARCH YE 12TH,
> 1718–19."

Lieut. Gershom Lockwood married Lady Ann Millington, from England, daughter of Lord Millington. This lady came to this country in pursuit of her lover, a British army officer. Failing to find him, she taught school, and subsequently married Gershom Lockwood of Greenwich, Conn.

In 1660 her parents sent her a large oak chest, ingeniously carved on the outside, and strongly built; tradition says "it contained half a bushel of Guineas, and many fine silk dresses," etc., etc. This identical chest is now (1888) at Mr. Samuel Ferris's house in Greenwich, Connecticut. Lady Millington's granddaughter, Ann Lockwood, born 1713, married Samuel Ferris.

42. HANNAH LOCKWOOD, born 1667, m. { 1. John Burwell. 2. Thomas Hanford.

43. SARAH LOCKWOOD, } twins, born 1669. { By her father's Will she received "a certain negro girl being now in my possession."

44. ABRAHAM LOCKWOOD, }

NOTE.—With reference to the statement as to Lady Millington, the compilers would say, the only information they have is from the memorandum on the cover of the chest, and the statements of elderly persons, now living, to whom the tradition has been handed down, as it undoubtedly has been through a number of generations. There was a Sir Thomas Millington, Knight, M.D., President of the College of Physicians, &c., in England, born in 1630 and died in 1702–4, who left a son, Thomas, and two daughters, named Anne and Mary. (Morant's History of Essex, England, vol. 2, p. 282.)

MILLINGTON.

It is said that Lord Millington had but two children, both daughters. The title may have become extinct in him, or gone to another male branch of the family.

A memorandum taken from the New York Observer in the year 1866, of a meeting held at the Society Library of New York city, says the foundation of the Library was in a great measure owing to a gift of books left by the will of the Rev. Dr. Millington, Rector of Stoke, Newington, London, England, to the "Society for the propagation of the Gospel in foreign parts," and by this society it was presented to the Public Library of New York, now known as the Society Library. Dr. Millington died about 1720, and his Library came over in 1729. He left no heirs, and his will gave other property or funds to this "Society" for missionary purposes.

NOTE.—Lieut. Gershom Lockwood and Rev. Dr. Millington died within about one year of each other; there has been a tradition in the Ferris family that the doctor was a near relative of Lady Ann Millington, and as he died about the time of her husband, who was 77 years old, he may have been her brother. (Editor.)

Gershom Lockwood married Elizabeth, daughter of John and Elizabeth (Montgomery) Townsend, of Oyster Bay, Long Island, New York. In the Townsend Memorial, pp. 87, 88, 91, and 132, I find the following:

John Townsend died in 1668, and, as he died intestate, his widow according to a prevailing custom divided his estate. "The 23d year of the reign of Charles II. King of England, and the tenth day of the fifth month 1671," i. e., July 10th, 1671.

In speaking of her daughter Elizabeth, she says:

"To my eldest daughter Elizabeth, although not above mentioned, yet she is to have with what she hath already received, £30, all at such pay as passes between man and man, after the rate of Indian Corn at 3 shillings a bushel, and wheat at 5s."

"2d. To the said Elizabeth or her husband, Gideon Wright, towards her portion, I give with what her father had before given her already, first two cows, 10 pounds, a young horse 5 pounds, a bed and furniture 10 pounds, 2 sheep 1 pound, 1 kettle 1 pound, in all £27, and Gideon her husband is to have £3 more, and that will be £30 in all."

"Elizabeth, daughter of John Townsend 1st, married Gideon, son of Peter Wright, and had eight children. After his death she married Gershom Lockwood, who came from Connecticut, and returned there after his marriage to her."

11. JONATHAN LOCKWOOD, JR. (Robert,[1] Jonathan[2]), born about 1663?, died November 9th, 1689, s.p., son of Jonathan and Mary (Ferris) Lockwood.

"Jonathan Lockwood, Jr., son of Leftenant Jonathan Lockwood, deceased, departing the world, upon ye 9th day of November, 1689." (Greenwich Records.)

12. ROBERT LOCKWOOD (Robert,[1] Jonathan[2]), born in Greenwich, Ct., died between May 7th, 1731, and January 23d, 1732; son of Jonathan and Mary (Ferris) Lockwood, married Mary ———.

Calls himself "Husbandman" of Greenwich, Ct. 1694–95, Robert Lockwood was taxed on £61. March 1st, 1698, town sold him Hosick meadows. May 17th, 1731, made his will, wife Mary and son Jonathan, executors. January 23d, 1732, will probated.

and occupied the site of the mill now owned by Benjamin Fitch.

The first postmaster was Rufus Bell, in 1814. There was but one post-office in the town, and that was located in a building which stood nearly opposite the present parsonage of the Congregational church.

Among the first physicians were Warren Percival and Dr. Richmond. The present physicians are Samuel Sands and R. L. Bohannan.

CHAPTER XXVI.

DARIEN (Continued).

ECCLESIASTICAL, CIVIL, AND MILITARY HISTORY.

Congregational Church—Presbyterian Church—St. Luke's Church—Methodist Episcopal Church—Incorporation of the Parish—Organization of the town—Selectmen from 1820 to 1881—List of Town Clerks—Representatives from 1820 to 1880—Darien in the War of the Rebellion—List of Soldiers.

How early separate religious services were held in this town no existing records show. Probably for years before Dr. Mather was settled here, in 1744, there had been preaching, with more or less regularity.

At a society meeting, held in the first society of Stamford, Dec. 20, 1733, by vote "the society agree that those particular persons that pay to the minister at Five-Mile River shall be discharged from paying their proportion of Mr. Wright's rate during the term of three months, provided they bring sufficient proof to the society's committee that they pay as much to the minister there as their proportion to Mr. Wright for the time above said."

In 1734 forty-six planters on the west side of Norwalk River petition for a new society. The next notice taken of this project, as far as records show, was simultaneously in Stamford and at the May session of the Legislature, in 1736. Sixty-nine petitions, representing eighty families, and a list of five thousand eight hundred and eighty pounds, made a formal request to be incorporated as an ecclesiastical society by themselves. The petition was negatived, only to be renewed in October of the same year by fifty-six men. The urgency of the petitioners led to the appointment of a special committee to examine their claims. In May, 1737, the committee report favorably, assigning as proper boundaries of the society the Five-Mile River on the east and the Noroton on the west. In October of this year the act of incorporation was passed. It is curious to note upon what frail boundaries they relied. The moment they leave the rivers, which they might presume to be permanent, they fix upon the most perishable objects, in the most indeterminate of localities; to answer as permanent bounds for the society. On the west side of the parish, to separate it from the older society of Stamford, they define, as the westernmost limits of Middlesex, "an old chimney about two and a half miles east of the Stamford meeting-house," and "so to run a strait line midway between Stephen Bishop's house and David Dibble's house," and thence to where the Noroton crosses the Canaan line. But this separation was not to be a peaceable one. Though no blood seems to have been shed in the struggle, there were many earnest and clamorous appeals and remonstrances between the parishes themselves and between the parishes and the Legislature; so that the peaceful settlement of the Middlesex seceders was not accomplished before the summer of 1741, about a dozen years after the need of such a society was felt and its incorporation demanded.

Eleven somewhat lengthy documents now on file in the State library at Hartford testify to the great interest shown in both the old and the new parishes in the proposed division. These papers indicate the most obstinate determination on the part of the first society not to allow any further alienation of any part of their ecclesiastical jurisdiction. Assuming a sort of indefeasible right to the territory, the society, by a unanimous vote of all excepting the seceding portion, declared that they would "not grant to the people at the east end of the town the liberty of a society apart." They also appointed Capt. Jonathan Hoyt and Mr. Jonathan Maltby as special agents to the Legislature to report the reasons of the town against forming the new society. But the seceders at length prevailed.

The names of the petitioners to the "Five-Mile river peticion," dated the second Thursday of October 1736, are Thomas Reed, Edmond Waring, Jonathan Cristy, Jonathan Bates, Robert Mills, John Reed, Joshua Scofield, Isaac Bishop, Jonathan Bell, Joshua Morehouse, John Bates, Jonathan Petit, David Selleck, Nathaniel Bates, Edmond Waring, Jr., Joseph Pengban, Thomas Reed, Jr., John Petit, Joseph Whiting, John Reed, Jr., James Slason, Jr., David Bates, Elias Reed, John Raymond, Nathaniel Selleck, David Scofield, Samuel Richards, Joseph Waterbury, Jonathan Weed, Deliverance Slason, Charles Weed, Theophilus Bishop, John Andrus, Nathaniel How, John Dean, David Waterbury, Ebenezer Bishop, Zachariah Dibble, Thomas Bishop, Samuel Bryan, Nathan Sturgis, Benjamin Dibble, David Slason, David Dibble, Nathan Selleck, Nathan Waring, Samuel Brinswade, Ebenezer Green, John Bolt, Jacob Waring, John Waring, Daniel Reed, Abraham Raymond, Comfort Raymond, Isaac Wood, and Samuel Reed.

The first record of a society's meeting in Middlesex bears date June 15, 1789. Ensign Nathan Bell was its moderator, and Joshua Morehouse was appointed society's clerk. The meeting was held at the house of John Bates. At an adjourned meeting held June 21st, Thomas Reed, Jonathan Bates, Daniel Reed, Isaac Bishop, Jonathan Selleck, Samuel Reed, and Ensign Jonathan Bell were appointed a committee to "caryon" the building of the "metting-hous." The ere instructed to make the house fifty feet long, hirty feet wide, and twenty feet post.

They then voted a tax to meet the expenses of the uilding, and to pay Mr. Buckingham "for His reaching the time agreed." Jonathan Weed was ppointed collector. The society records from this ate to that of the organization of the church show hat the following ministers labored here either simly as supplies or as candidates: Rev. Mr. Birdseye, ideon Mills, Ebenezer Mills, David Judson, Mr. lls, and Mather. At a meeting held Dec. 11, 1741, he society voted, by a large majority,—forty-two to our,—to settle Mr. Judson. But to give every man the society an opportunity to vote, Mr. Morehouse, he clerk, was ordered to carry a paper with the vote about and read the same to those persons that beong to said society which were not at said meeting, hat they might have opportunity to subscribe to the ame."

At their meeting Sept. 1, 1742, while Mr. Mather as still preaching as a candidate for settlement, we nd this vote: "Ye Society by major vote granted to e Rev. Mr. Right (Wright) to preach in any part of Iiddlesex parish on any needful occasion as often as e shall see fit."

A record of the doings of this society in 1747 repecting the seating of the meeting-house explains nore fully the process of this custom than any record ow existing of any other parish in town, and is worth reserving as a curiosity of the times. Besides, it ndicates some of the principal men of that day in his part of the town.

By the first vote the society decided to seat the neeting by a committee.

"2. pr vote ye society a lowed ye first pue to be ye hiest in Dignity.

"15. and Decon Bishop also by ye vote of ye society to set in his seat e fore ye pulpit.
"16. pr vote, the Society Impowered the comety to seat ye remainder f ye house a cordin to their own discretion."

The above record is of date Aug. 9, 1747, and the next meeting of the society was held "genewary ye 8th, 1747–48." A record of this meeting is also so characteristic of the times as to justify insertion:

"Voted yt Mr. Jona. In 1837 John V. White crossed the ocean with his wife and family to seek a new home in the United States. He was a landscape gardener and, finding in the wealthy and cultured residents of this section most appreciative employers, he located at Danbury, Conn., where he and his wife lived to the advanced ages of eighty and seventy-four years, respectively, Mr. White dying September 19, 1868, and Mrs. White on October 8, 1862.

As George H. White was but a lad when he came to Danbury, his education was continued there in the common schools, which he attended in the evenings, his days being spent in working with his father. In 1840 he left the paternal roof and went to New York City, where for twelve years he was engaged in the painting business at the corner of Eighth avenue and Twentieth street. On returning to Danbury in 1852, he established himself in a house and sign painting business, which he continued successfully until his retirement in 1889. For about eight years he was interested also in photography, in which he had a fine custom. He has acquired a goodly competence, and owns a number of houses in the city of Danbury, while his own residence, at No. 103 Rose Hill, Danbury, is a beautiful place, the grounds, comprising about two acres, showing his artistic taste in arrangement. The fine large trees were planted by his own hand, and the beautifying of the place has been a pleasant occupation for his spare time for many years. When he purchased the property in 1851 it was a farm, his house being the only one within some distance, but it is now in the city, and is built up closely with residences. Nearly all the large trees on the hill were planted by Mr. White, and he has straightened and opened streets through his property, being ever ready to do all in his power to improve and beautify, not only his own place, but the neighborhood in general. The interior of his house is adorned with numerous oil paintings of considerable merit, the work of his own hand.

Mr. White has been twice married. His first wife, Caroline Michaels, daughter of John and Amelia Michaels, of New Hurley, N. Y., died in April, 1874, leaving one daughter, Caroline, who married William Jacobus, a hardware merchant at No. 90 Chambers street, New York City; they have one child, George Richard Jacobus. In 1882 Mr. White married Miss Anna M. Ritch, and by this union he has one son, George Ritch, who is still at home. Mr. White is a member of the Episcopal Church; his wife is a Methodist. In politics he is a Republican, and for many years he has been prominent in fraternal society work, being one of the oldest members of Union Lodge, No. 40, F. & A. M., at Danbury. He was also active at one time in the I. O. O. F., but the lodge to which he belonged surrendered its charter, and he did not again join the Order.

HERMAN SELLECK (deceased) had lived on his farm in the town of New Canaan, Fairfield county, for half a century, and his father and grandfather also carried on agricultural pursuits in that town, where the family have been well-known for the last century.

Jacob Selleck, grandfather of Herman, was born in the town of Stamford, of Welsh ancestry, and early removed to New Canaan, being a resident of Canoe Hill when the town was organized. He was a prominent member of the Episcopal Church at Norwalk, in which he served as vestryman. For his first wife he married a Miss Fitch, of Norwalk, and after her death he wedded her cousin, also named Fitch.

Samuel Selleck, son of Jacob, was born in Carter Street, in the town of New Canaan, where he was reared, acquiring his education in the common schools of the neighborhood. Under his father's guidance he was early instructed in the science of agriculture, to which he devoted his time, farming on the paternal homestead until 1836, when he sold it to Stephen Hoyt, the nurseryman. Removing to Orleans county, N. Y., he spent his remaining days there, passing away in 1840 when a comparatively young man. He married Ann DeForest, who survived him many years, dying in New Canaan in 1872. They were the parents of ten children, namely: Caroline, Charlotte, Herman, George, Charles, Julia, Mary, Benjamin, William and Eliza, all of whom are now deceased.

Herman Selleck was born in 1823, in Carter Street, town of New Canaan, on the family homestead occupied by his father and grandfather. His early boyhood was passed there, and for about five years he lived in Orleans county, N. Y., whither his parents had removed in 1836. He lived on his late farm from the year 1841, with the exception of one year spent in Morris, Ill., and his entire life was devoted to farming, in which he met with encouraging and well-merited success, acquiring, by years of industrious toil, a fine farm and a comfortable home. He did not give much attention to outside affairs, but he served acceptably for one term as assessor of his town. Socially, he was affiliated with the Grange, and in religious faith he was a member of the M. E. Church. He passed from earth about 1897.

Mr. Selleck was married at Darien, Conn., to Miss Adeline M. Hoyt, daughter of Rufus Hoyt. There have been no children. Rufus Hoyt was born in Darien, a son of Thaddeus Hoyt, and passed his entire life in the town of his birth, engaging during his active years in farming. He married Sarah E. Reed, and of the ten children born to them we have the following record: Louisa Rebecca (Mrs. Charles Rogers) is living in Danbury; Frances Elizabeth lives in Darien; Thaddeus married a Miss Hutchins, and lives in Darien; Adeline M. is the widow of Herman Selleck; Sarah Jane makes her home in Darien; John Woolsey, Oscar Rufus and Edward Mortimer are deceased; Mary Virginia lives in Darien; and Charles Reed is a resident of Norwalk.

HON. JULIUS B. CURTIS, of the Fairfield County Bar, is a well-known resident of Stamford. He has for many years been one of the leading members of the Bar, a fact which alone gives abundant proof of his ability and high character.

The family of our subject is of English origin, and they have a coat of arms, the right to use which was confirmed in the time of Charles I. The first ancestor of whom we find a definite account was Capt. William Curtis, who came to America from England at a very early date with a brother John, and settled at Stratford, Fairfield Co., Conn. He became prominent among the pioneers of that locality, and was sent to represent them in the Colonial Assembly twelve times. His military title was gained by his appointment as captain of forces raised for service in King Philip's war, and to serve against the Dutch at New Netherlands, with power to appoint his inferior officers, Capt. Josiah Curtis, the next in the line of descent, was born in Stratford, and engaged in farming there. He served in the militia in his day, and was also active in political movements, being elected in 1716 as a member of the Assembly.

Benjamin Curtis, the great-great-grandfather of our subject, was a native of Stratford, but made his home in Newtown, where he followed agricultural pursuits during his later years. He too was a member of the General Assembly.

Benjamin Curtis (2), our subject's great-grandfather, was born in Newtown, and resided there throughout his life. He served as selectman of the town. He married (first) Fedima Nichols, and (later) wedded Mary DeVine.

Philo Curtis (a son by the first wife, Fedima), grandfather of Hon. J. B. Curtis, was a lifelong resident of Newtown, where he died in 1818. He was an influential citizen, an Episcopalian in religion, a Federalist in politics, and for many years he held the office of selectman of his town. His wife, Huldah (Hubbell), was a native of Weston, Fairfield county. They had eight children: Nichols, our subject's father; Carlos, who went west to reside; Huldah, who married M. C. Hatch, of Oxford, Conn.; Fedima, wife of Thomas Beers; Polly, wife of John Glover; Betsey, who married Amariah Beers; Philo, a resident of Newtown, and Julia, who never married.

Nichols Curtis was born September 27, 1784, in Newtown, and was educated there in the district schools and at a private school taught by Capt. Luther Harris. Throughout his life he followed farming as an occupation, occasionally teaching, and until 1822 he resided at the old homestead in Newtown. Like all of his family he was a public-spirited citizen, and although he did not aspire to political honors he took much interest in a quiet way in local affairs, being especially active in the cause of education and in religious work as a member of the Episcopal Church. He died April 20, 1852, and his wife, Sarah Ann Bennett, who was born June 4, 1786, the daughter of Amos Bennett, of Newtown, survived him a little over six years, breathing her last on October 30, 1858. Our subject is the younger of two children: The elder, Charlotte Nichols, married Monroe D. Downs, of Southbury, Conn., and died in 1881.

Hon. Julius Bolivar Curtis was born December 10, 1825, in the town of Newtown, where his youth was spent. His education was begun in the public schools of the locality, and he also attended the Newtown Academy and a private school of academic character for short periods. These opportunities were not sufficient for his wishes, however, and he is largely indebted to private reading and study for his wide range of information. His professional studies were begun in the summer of 1846 with Hon. Edward Hinman, of Southbury, and afterward continued under Isaac M. Sturges, Esq., then of Newtown, and Hon. Amos S. Treat. Later he entered the law school at Ballston Springs, Saratoga Co., N. Y., where he spent the summer of 1850. In the same year he was admitted to practice at the December session of the Fairfield county court, and in the following summer he opened an office at Greenwich, this county, where his worth was speedily recognized, aud rewarded by a fine practice. In the fall of 1864 he removed to Stamford, and has since continued in practice there. In 1867 he was elected judge of the probate court for the district of Stamford, and he

He makes a specialty of dairying, and supplies a large amount of milk to the local market. His success in his chosen line of work indicates executive ability as well as energy, and he ranks among the substantial citizens of his locality. He is not married, but is prominent in social life, and attends Trinity Church at Nichols, with which his honored father was so long identified.

WILLIAM HOLMES, a leading citizen of Shelton, has for many years held a responsible position with the Derby Silver Company, and his long and faithful service is in itself an evidence of mental and moral worth.

The Holmes family is of English stock, and William Holmes (1), the grandfather of our subject, was a lifelong resident of the old country. William Holmes (2), the father of our subject, was born in Leeds, England, where he married Miss Lucy Walker, also a native of that city. About 1845 he came with his family to America, locating first at Derby, this county, where he was employed as foreman by the Shelton Company. In 1856 he removed to Madison, Wis., and operated a gristmill and sawmill for about three years, when his mills were destroyed by fire. In 1859 he returned to Derby and took his old position again, and a few years later he located in Shelton (then known as Huntington) and engaged in business as a florist, continuing until his death in March, 1892. He took an interest in all that concerned his adopted country, and was a stanch Republican, while he and his wife remained devout members of the Episcopal Church. They had ten children: Joshua, Mary A. (deceased), Walter (deceased), Lucy, William, Lillie, Emma (deceased), Florence, Royal and Josephine. The mother is yet living.

Our subject was born September 6, 1858, in Madison, Wis., but the greater portion of his life has been spent in the town of Huntington. His education was chiefly obtained in the schools of Shelton, and on leaving school he entered the employ of the Derby Silver Company, with which he has remained ever since, except for three and one-half years spent with the Meriden Plating Company, of Meriden, Conn. In 1880 he became foreman of the plating department of the Derby Silver Company, a position which he still holds. His fellow citizens have not been slow to recognize his abilities, and he is one of the leading advisers of the Republican organization in his locality. He has been (and still is) chairman of the Republican town and borough committee for eleven years, and he has also held the office of assessor for the borough. Socially he is prominent as a member of Ousatonic Lodge No. 6, I. O. O. F., the N. E. Order of Protection, the Order of United Workmen, and he is one of the charter members of Echo Hose Company, in which he has held every office, including that of chief engineer.

On April 14, 1881, Mr. Holmes married Miss Agnes T. Trumpbour, by whom he has had three children: Everett and Leslie, who are at home; and Gerald, who died July 28, 1888, when but five days old. Mrs. Holmes is a native of Ellenville, Ulster Co., N. Y., and a daughter of John C. and Julia (Collins) Trumpbour, in their day well-known residents of that town. Mr. Trumpbour, who was engaged in a very successful bakery business, died at Stamford, Conn., June 22, 1899, at the age of sixty-four years. Her family is noted for patriotism, her paternal grandfather and great-grandfather having served in the Revolutionary army, the latter having been aide to George Washington, while her father was a soldier in the Union army during the Civil war. Her great-grandfather Crawford (on her grandmother's side) was the oldest Methodist minister in the New York Conference when he died at the age of ninety-one years.

J. WOOLSEY SELLECK, whose sudden death on Saturday, January 8, 1898, is still fresh in the minds of the citizens of Stamford, was a prominent man in the locality in which he lived, and a native and lifelong resident of the town of Stamford. He was born February 22, 1840, in the house now occupied by David Bonner, and was the son of Joseph Selleck, who was in his day a well-known farmer of Stamford township.

Joseph Selleck, the grandfather of the subject of this memoir, was born in the town of Stamford February 14, 1759, and lived to a very advanced age, dying March 16, 1846. On December 31, 1786, he married Miss Phebe Clock, who was a native of Darien, Conn., born November 17, 1771, and they became the parents of six children, namely: Polly (who married James Bell), John, Jesse, Hannah, Joseph and Isaac. During the war of 1812 he enlisted in the army, and served as teamster.

Joseph Selleck, son of the above, was born in 1802 in the town of Stamford, in a house which then faced on Selleck street. He passed his entire life in his native place, where he engaged in farming, and, like his father, he also owned vessel interests. He married Emily F. Scofield, daughter of Richard Scofield, and their union was blessed with seven children—Emily Frances, the widow of Harvey Hoyt; Phebe C. (deceased), who married Gideon C. Ferris; Henry R., living in West avenue, Stamford; J. Woolsey; Isaac; Harvey, who was killed by lightning; and Annie. Joseph was an active member of the Connecticut State militia, in which he held the rank of captain. He was a Republican in politics.

J. Woolsey Selleck attended the public schools of the town of his birth, and was reared to agricultural pursuits, which he followed all his life, also engaging in the market business, in Oliver street, from 1869 to 1875. His career was a splendid example of a life of industry and energetic purpose, for he rose by his own exertions to a position of affluence and influence, and made an enviable name for uprightness and honesty of character wherever he was known. His pleasant manners and kindly disposition won for him friends on all sides, and his generosity to the poor and unfortunate, though quietly exercised, made him their special friend, for he was never known to refuse aid if deserved. Mr. Selleck was an ardent Democrat, always ready and willing to do all in his power for the welfare of the party, in which he was a local power. Public affairs in his neighborhood received a considerable share of his time and attention, especially during the later years of his life; and being an energetic and efficient worker, and a man worthy the confidence of his fellowmen, he became very popular in the ranks of Stamford's politicians. In 1885 he was elected selectman, and so well did he fulfill the expectations of his constituency that he was re-elected annually for the five succeeding years, during which time he discharged the duties of the incumbency with ability and faithfulness, never allowing outside influences or personal feelings to draw him aside from the path of duty. His straightforwardness and integrity were never questioned.

Mr. Selleck was married in Elmira, N. Y., to Miss Helen M. St. John, daughter of Hiram St. John, and by her had four children, viz.: Emma Frances, Joseph Milton, Walter and Clara Helen. The daughters are both now deceased; Milton is employed in the St. John Wood Working Company; he married Mary E. Williams. In 1868 Mr. Selleck erected the residence occupied by his widow, and which stands just east of the house in which he was born. Mr. Selleck's decease, on the night of January 8, 1898, was a shock to the entire community. Early in the evening he went to spend a few social hours with Dewitt Betts, a neighbor, and started for home about ten o'clock. At 6 o'clock Sunday morning Mrs. Selleck, unable to account for her husband's continued absence, sent an employe to Mr. Betts' to ask whether he had spent the night with his friends, and on his way through the fields Mr. Smith discovered the dead body of his employer. Hurrying back to the house with the news, the family notified Medical Examiner Rowell, who responded quickly and rendered a verdict of death from apoplexy. The body was removed to the house, not many yards distant, as soon as Dr. Rowell gave permission, and on Wednesday, January 12, was laid to rest in Woodland Cemetery, Stamford. The funeral was largely attended by people in all ranks of life. Mr. Selleck was deeply mourned by his wide circle of friends and acquaintances throughout the vicinity, who realized that in his death Stamford lost one of her best citizens. Mr. Selleck was a great lover of sport, and was an experienced hunter, having spent many weeks in the enjoyment of that pastime in Canada.

REV. THEODORE L. DIBBLE, now living retired in the town of New Canaan, Fairfield county, is a native of Westchester county, N. Y., born July 8, 1836, in Pound Ridge. He is of English descent, his great-grandfather having been one of four brothers who came from England and settled in this country.

Simeon Dibble, grandfather of our subject, a farmer in Westchester county, N. Y., died in 1876, aged eighty-four years. He was a soldier in the war of 1812. He married Mary Brown, and to this union were born one son and three daughters. The father was a worthy member of the Bedford M. E. Church.

Jonathan Dibble, son of Simeon and Mary (Brown) Dibble, was born at Pound Ridge, N. Y., and was reared in that place. In early manhood he went from the home farm to New York City, where he followed the trade of locksmith for a number of years. He married Mary M. Coggshall, a native of Pound Ridge, and they had five children: Theodore L.; Samuel, who is now a resident of Stamford, Conn.; George B., of Jersey City; and Frank B. and Annette A., both deceased. The father passed from earth in 1855, a devout, lifelong member of the M. E. Church.

Theodore L. Dibble in his youth lived in New York City, and was given a good education in the elementary branches, attending the public schools and also a private school. For seven years he was employed in mercantile business, after which he resumed study at Bedford, N. Y. In 1858 he commenced teaching at Pound Ridge, continuing to follow that profession for six and one-half years, until, in the spring of 1864, he en-tional Church. Politically, he is a stanch Republican, and although he is no office-seeker he has served as constable one year. He is a straightforward business man and a valued citizen, one who worthily enjoys the public confidence.

WILLIAM F. NORTHROP, senior member of the firm of Northrop & Son, of Southport, Fairfield Co., Conn., is one of the leading citizens of that thriving town, with whose business interests he has been prominently identified for many years. He is a native of the "Nutmeg State," born November 6, 1836, in Kent, Litchfield county, son of Alvin Northrop, who was one of the two sons of Amos Northrop, the other being named Garry. Both became shoemakers.

Alvin Northrop was born in Chatham, New York State. He learned the trade of shoemaker, and followed it during his earlier manhood, in about 1846 removing to Greens Farms, Fairfield Co., Conn., where he spent the remainder of his life. He worked at his trade during the winter, and at farming in the summer, becoming one of the substantial, respected farmers of this locality. When a young man he married Miss Sarah Wakeman Alvord, and they became the parents of the following named children: Julia B. (Mrs. Charles Bulkeley), who died at Greens Farms; Francis N., deceased in childhood; William F.; Frances Josephine (Mrs. Charles A. Meeker), who died at Greens Farms; George E., of Southport; and Louisa A. (Mrs. George B. Mills), who died at Greens Farms. The father and mother both passed away at Greens Farms, aged seventy-three and seventy-seven years, respectively, and their remains rest in the East cemetery at Fairfield. They were Methodists in religious connection.

Up to the age of ten years William F. Northrop lived in his native county, attending the public schools there when possible, though he commenced work when only eight years old, being obliged to help at home on account of his father's ill health. He came with the family to Greens Farms, and up to the age of seventeen worked for different farmers, as he had been reared to agricultural pursuits from his earliest boyhood. He then commenced to learn the carpenter's trade under John Kerley, of Waterbury, Conn., receiving $60 and board for his first year's services. After completing his apprenticeship he immediately started out on his own account in Greens Farms, although at the time he was but a lad. For about two years he was employed in a carriage shop at Wolcottville (now Torrington), Conn., but he returned to Greens Farms and resumed contracting, finally, in February, 1858, locating in Southport, where he has ever since remained. In the meantime, after his marriage, he had farmed on a small scale, raising onions and garden truck about one year. On coming to Southport Mr. Northrop entered the employ of Sherman & Jelliff, builders and contractors, and remained with them as employe until 1865, when the firm dissolved and he continued with Mr. Jelliff, who succeeded to the business, after about one year becoming a partner to the latter gentleman, in connection with the lumber business, with whom he was in all for seventeen years. After Mr. Jelliff's retirement Mr. Northrop and his brother, George E., carried on the business under the firm name of Northrop Bros., this partnership lasting until January 1, 1897, when the present firm of Northrop & Son was established. During the preceding years, in addition to their extensive building and contracting business, the Northrop Bros. had engaged in other lines, and when the present partnership was formed the original branch was dropped, the firm now dealing in coal, lumber and builders' supplies, in which they are the leaders in this section. Mr. Northrop is a self-made man in the best sense of the term, and he has in all his dealings gained and retained an enviable reputation for integrity and sterling honesty, commanding the respect of his business associates wherever he goes.

At the age of twenty-one years Mr. Northrop was united in marriage with Miss Abby J. Baker, of Greens Farms, daughter of Ebenezer Baker, and two children blessed this union, viz.: Fred E., a graduate of Yale University, who is now his father's partner in business; and Ella A., who died when five years old. Mr. and Mrs. Northrop are devout and active members of the Methodist Church, in which he has been one of the foremost workers for years, holding all the offices, and he is at present serving as trustee. He is also an ardent advocate of the temperance cause, and sympathizes strongly with the Prohibition movement. In political sentiment he is a Republican. Fraternally, he affiliates with Pequonnock Lodge, I. O. O. F., of Bridgeport, Connecticut.

HON. WILLIAM BURR HILL, one of the most prosperous and well-to-do agriculturists of Fairfield county, is a native of Connecticut, born January 5, 1826, at Redding, where in the district schools he received a liberal education.

From some of the old documents of the Colonial History of Hartford, Conn., it is learned that the ancestors of the Hill family, of which our subject is a member, were English, the first to come to this country being William Hill, the date of whose advent on these shores was 1632, twelve years after the "Mayflower's" first arrival. For a time he located at Dorchester, Mass., thence removing to Windsor, on the Connecticnt river, having bought land there. Later he came to Fairfield county, Conn., where he passed the rest of his days. In 1636 he was elected selectman of his town; was auditor of public accounts in 1639; in 1639 was appointed to view arms and ammunition in the town; was elected deputy or representative, in which incumbency he served from 1639 to 1641, also in 1644; after his service in the House of Representatives was elected assistant senator, and collector of customs at Fairfield, and in 1652–53 he again served in the House of Representatives. By his wife Sarah he had children: Sarah, William, Joseph, Ignatius, James and Elizabeth, of whom,

William Hill died December 19, 1684. By his wife Elizabeth had children: Sarah was the wife of Richard Widow; William died in 1728; Joseph, in 1690; John, in 1727; Eliphalet, in 1695; Ignatius and James (no record).

Deacon William Hill, great-great-great-great-grandfather of our subject, died in 1737; by his wife Sarah he had children: Joseph, William and David. Of these, Joseph, great-great-great-grandfather of our subject, was born April 1, 1699, and married Miss Abigail Dunon, who was born March 30, 1701, and died April 25, 1774. He died March 6, 1797. Children: Abigail, born March 21, 1732, married David Gould; Sarah, born August 21, 1733, married William Wakeman; David, born April 22, 1737, never married; Ebenezer, born February 26, 1742; Jabez, great-great-grandfather of our subject; and Moses, born June 11, 1748. Of these,

Jabez, born June 17, 1744, was a man of considerable ability, and served as a major in the Revolutionary army. He settled in the town of Weston, Fairfield county, and married Miss Sarah Read, daughter of Colonel Read, after whom the town of Redding was named, and three children were born to them: Sarah, wife of Timothy Blatt; John R., who married Betsey Sanford; and Moses, great-grandfather of our subject. Jabez Hill died of consumption October 9, 1779. Of his family, Moses was born January 11, 17—, and died October 13, ——. He was married June 17, 1773, to Miss Esther Burr, who was born May 29, 1755, and died October 6, 1836, aged eighty-one years, and their children were: William, grandfather of our subject; Abigail, born October 14, 1776; and Esther, born June 17, 1777.

William Hill was born April 30, 1774, in Greenfield, Conn., and was a lifelong farmer. He married Betsey Barlow, who was born August 3, 1778, daughter of Nathaniel Barlow, and died September 9, 1864. Children: Bradley, father of our subject; Abigail, born November 12, 1800; Horace, born December 15, 1802; Burr, born December 23, 1804; Betsey (1), born August 2, 18—; Betsey (2); Ebbie, born August 23, 18—; and William, born October 6, 1807.

Bradley Hill was born September 9, 1798, in the town of Greenfield, Fairfield Co., Conn., and was a lifelong farmer. In the old-time training days he was a member of a troop of calvary, and shouldered his flint-lock musket with all the ardor of a true patriot. In religious faith he was a member of the Congregational Church. By his wife, Betsey (Banks), daughter of Zelmon B. Banks, he had children as follows: Abbie M., born September 27, 1823, married Lemuel Sanford; William B. is our subject; Sarah E., born January 31, 1836, is unmarried; and Arthur B. and Albert (twins), born May 28, 1847, the former of whom married Alice St. John, the latter being unmarried.

William B. Hill, the subject proper of these lines, on leaving school engaged in farming, and has ever since devoted his undivided time to that occupation, giving special attention to the buying, rearing and selling of cattle and horses, his business operations in this line extending to the West and various points. He has been quite prominent in politics, as a Whig (which party he joined in 1826) and a Republican, and has filled all the town offices; has served as selectman, as constable frequently, and for many years as a justice of the peace. In 1865–67 he represented his town in the State Legislature with characteristic ability and patriotism.

On April 26, 1854, Mr. Hill married Miss Katie A. Selleck, a daughter of Nathaniel and Eunice (Hull) Selleck, of Danbury. A brief record of the children born to this union is as follows: (1) Helen S., born May 10, 1856, in Redding, Conn., married C. W. Merchant, a prosperous farmer of Redding, and they have one child. (2) Nathaniel B., born July 30, 1859, in Redding, is a farmer and dairyman; he married Mary E. Morehouse, and has one child—Helena L. (3) Celia F., born August 21, 1863, married Walter P. Rowland, a farmer of Weston, and they have one child—Charles B. (4) Sarah M., born September 26, 1865, married Prof. Louis B. Treadwell, professor of biology in Miami (Ohio) College, and they have two children—Lois, born July 13, 1893, and Alvin H., born July 15, 1896. (5) Eunice P., born January 19, 1867, married F. B. Wickes, a foreman hatter of Bethel, Conn., and they have one child—David M. (6) Mary E., born February 22, 1870, married William G. Fish, a farmer of Redding. (7) William B., Jr., born May 27, 1871, is a farmer in the town of Redding; he married Eva L. Ferris, daughter of John Ferris, of Greenfield, Conn., and they have one child—Kate F., born September 23, 1894.

Nathaniel Selleck, father of Mrs. William B. Hill, was born in 1801 in the town of Danbury, Conn., and was a lifelong farmer. In politics he was originally a Whig, later, during the Civil war, becoming a Democrat. He married Miss Eunice Hull, who was born in 1809, daughter of Dennie and Polly (Platt) Hull, farming people of Redding, Conn., and children as follows were born to them: (1) Nathaniel B., a hatter by trade, was thrice married—to Sarah M. Burr, Decie M. Sherwood, and Martha Roscoe, respectively—and of his children one son, Nathaniel, is a physician in Danbury (he married Miss Mary Benedict). (2) David M., who resides in California, married Celia F. Miller, and has children—Eunice, Arthur, Katie, Laura and Oliver. (3) Ethan F., a carpenter by trade, died in Danbury; he married Julia Goodsell, and had one child—Caroline Selleck. (4) Oliver F., who was a carpenter in Danbury, married Mary Goodsell, and they had two children—William R. and Dora. (5) Katie A. (wife of our subject), born July 23, 1835, in Danbury, received her earlier education there and afterward attended the Normal School at New Britain, subsequently teaching school for some time prior to her marriage with Hon. W. B. Hill. By a second marriage Nathaniel Selleck had one son, Eugene W., who married Clara Banks.

Benjamin Selleck, grandfather of Mrs. Hill, was born in Maryland, and was the owner of a large plantation in the South; he was also extensively engaged in contracting. He married Hanna Taylor, of Ridgefield, Conn., and had children: Nathaniel, mentioned above; Hanford, married to Betsey Bennett; Benjamin, married to Phebe Wood; and Katie A., who died young.

NEHEMIAH PERRY, M. D. For more than two hundred years the Perry family has been noted for the achievements of its members in professional lines, and especially in the science of medicine. The subject of this sketch, who recently retired after a successful practice of forty-five years in Ridgefield, is the fifth in the line of medical practitioners who have brought distinction to the name of Perry, his career completing an unbroken record of one hundred and fifty years in which some one of his family has been in active practice in Ridgefield. As a physician and surgeon he has fully sustained the prestige of his name, winning a place in the front ranks of the profession, and during his long term of practice he has so established himself in the affectionate regard of the community that the following history will be read with unusual interest.

The first ancestor of whom we have definite knowledge was Richard Perry, a lawyer, who came from England in 1637 and settled at New Haven. In 1649 he received a grant of land in Fairfield county, where many of his descendants have remained. Richard Perry's son Nathaniel, born in 1652, died in 1681; he married, in 1675, Hester, daughter of Richard Lyon. Their son Joseph, born in 1677, died in 1753; his third wife was Mary, daughter of Michael Clugstone. Their son Micah (or Michael), born in 1721, died in 1797; he married, in 1742, Grace, daughter of Peter Sturges. Their son David was the grandfather of our subject.

Dr. David Perry was born in this county in 1747, and in 1772 settled in Ridgefield, where he was engaged in the practice of medicine for fifty years. He often rode to Bridgeport, and even to New York City, for text-books, and he acquired a wide reputation for skill and learning. He married Hannah Brown, by whom he had six children, viz.: David, who married Clarissa Benedict, of Ridgefield; Samuel, who married a Miss Catharda; Nehemiah, our subject's father; John, who died unmarried; Betsy, who became the wife of Thaddeus Keeler, of Ridgefield; and Lucy, who died unmarried.

Dr. Nehemiah Perry, Sr., the father of our subject, was born in Ridgefield in 1790 and died in 1866. He began the study of medicine with his father, and after completing a course in New York City received his degree in Connecticut from President Day, of Yale College. In 1811 he entered upon his professional career in Ridgefield, where he practiced the healing art for fifty-five years, having a very extensive clientele throughout this part of the State. For years he was a leading member of the Fairfield Medical Society, and his inherited talents, developed by study and observation, made him eminent in correct diagnosis and skillful surgery. He owned the property now in the possession of Ex-Governor Lounsbury. His first wife was Mary Sanford, daughter of Esquire the wife of Henry B. Dikeman (now deceased), a sketch of whom will be found elsewhere. She and her two daughters reside on Mount Pleasant, Newtown.

Daniel B. Camp was born on his father's farm February 21, 1836. At the age of seventeen he went to Danbury and served four years at the tinner's trade with Charles Hull. Later he worked for a short time in New Haven, then at Naugatuck, in which place, on August 9, 1862, he enlisted in Company H, 15th Conn. V. I. His command was in the 9th Corps under General Burnside. He made a good soldier, and returned to Naugatuck after two years and eleven months' faithful service, receiving an honorable discharge June 27, 1865. He resumed his former occupation at Naugatuck, engaging in the tinning business there until 1872, when he came to Newtown village, where he has ever since carried on that business. Mr. Camp is now a Democrat, although he was a Republican until the Greeley campaign of 1872. In 1885 he was a representative from Newtown in the State Legislature, and he has also held other positions of honor and trust. On November 23, 1859, he was married to Augusta, daughter of Isaac and Louisa (Bartlett) Nichols. She was born February 22, 1839. Their children are: Esther L., born January 27, 1862; Grace, born October 3, 1872, married December 29, 1897, to Dr. Clyde O. Anderson, of Pittsburg, Pennsylvania.

Lemuel F. Camp (son of Joel Trowbridge Camp) was born December 8, 1820, in Taunton District, town of Newtown, and died in April, 1894. In 1855 he was married to Sarah Jane, daughter of Amos and Mary Ann Lake, and about this time he erected the house occupied at the time of his death by Hobart Hawley, and resided there until some years ago. In 1893 he moved with his family to the Booth Hawley place, at Hawleyville, where he died. His children were: Carrie A. (deceased), Alma M. (Mrs. Charles B. Johnson), Mary A. (Mrs. Edward C. Platt), Amos Trowbridge, and Sara A. (Mrs. Asa Hawley). Lemuel F. Camp was possessed of a taste for live-stock, of which he was a fine judge, and he gave considerable attention to buying and grazing cattle for the markets. He was a member of Trinity Episcopal Church, and in politics was a Republican.

Samuel B. Camp, of Taunton District, Newtown, the youngest son of Joel Trowbridge, a farmer and respected citizen, was born in 1828. He has followed farming with the exception of two or three years, during which he was engaged in comb-making. He came to his present farm in 1839. In later years he has engaged in stock raising, has since been in the milk business, and he has a farm of one hundred and forty-five acres. On National issues he is a Republican, and he is a member of Trinity Episcopal Church. In 1867 he was married to Caroline C., daughter of Amos and Mary (Bennett) Lake, of Bethlehem, and had children: Edwin Beers, born in 1868; and Frank Bennett, born in 1870, died in 1875.

Luther Camp, whose death occurred November 11, 1884, was in his eighty-seventh year.

John Camp, his father, was a brother to Lemuel and Silas Camp, and the old home was the old red house that formerly stood opposite where Lemuel F. Camp lived. John Camp, at his marriage, moved to Brookfield, Obtuse District, and built the house occupied by the late Amos Camp. He had three sons and one daughter: Wheeler, who died unmarried at his home in Brookfield in 1868, aged seventy-two years; Lucy Ann (also unmarried), who died there in 1870, aged sixty-nine years; Amos, who died in 1877, aged seventy-six (he had two children—Beers, who died in 1855, aged twenty-five years and eleven months, about four months after his marriage to Miss Jane Wood, of Southville; and Mary, who still occupies the old home near Horace Beers).

Luther Camp, soon after his marriage to Miss Lucy Foote, removed to the place in Hawleyville which he afterward made his home. His second wife was Miss Olive Barnum, of Bethel. They had no children, but adopted, when only two years old, and loved as their own, Mrs. Camp's motherless niece, Abigail Hoyt, afterward Mrs. Abigail Wood. Mrs. Wood tenderly cared for her foster-parents some years before Mrs. Camp's death, which occurred in 1878, and remained with Mr. Camp until less than three years ago, when she felt that duty called her to live with her only child, Mrs. McArthur. Mr. Camp died at the latter's home.

NATHANIEL SELLECK, M. D., is one of the most successful medical practitioners of Danbury. Born and reared in that city, he has found his best field for work in the place where he is best known, a fact which speaks volumes for his worth and ability.

The Selleck family is of English origin, the first to cross the ocean being Nathaniel Selleck, our subject's great-grandfather. The grandfather was also named Nathaniel. Nathaniel B. Selleck, our subject's father, was born in Maryland, and was for many years a citizen of Danbury, although he had extensive business interests elsewhere. He was a hatter by trade, but also engaged in merchandising and carried on a large logging business in Minnesota. In connection with these varied lines of work he made several voyages to South America. He died in December, 1891. He married Delia M. Sherwood, who was born in Redding, Conn., and they had two children: Nathaniel, our subject; and another son, who died in childhood.

Doctor Selleck was born November 22, 1868, and received his literary education in the public schools of Danbury, graduating from the high school in 1888. After a preliminary course of reading with Doctor Benedict, of Danbury, he entered the Medical Department of the University of the City of New York, where he received his degree in 1891. After spending two years in practice with his former preceptor he opened an office on his own account, and in the six years that have intervened he has built up a large and lucrative practice; his office is at No. 238 Main street. Our subject belongs to the Danbury Medical Society, and to the County and State Societies, and is highly esteemed in professional circles.

Doctor Selleck married Miss Mary A. Benedict, daughter of Daniel M. and Mary Benedict, and they have a pleasant home on Foster street, Danbury. They are prominent in social life, and the Doctor is a member of the Ancient Order of Foresters; the Ancient Essenic Order; Union Lodge No. 40, F. & A. M.; and Crusader Commandery, K. T. In his political affiliations, he has always been a Democrat.

FOOTE. Daniel Foote, born in Stratford, Conn., July 25, 1717, son of Jehiel and Susanna Foote, grandson of Daniel Foote, great-grandson of Nathaniel and Elizabeth (Smith) Foote, and great-great-grandson of Nathaniel and Elizabeth (Deming) Foote, and of Lieut. Samuel and Elizabeth Smith [see Goodwin's Foote Genealogy and Savage's Genealogical Dictionary], married, November 6, 1746, at Stratford, Sarah Whitney, born in Stratford, Conn., September 1, 1723.

They lived in Stratford until after they had three children born, then moved to Newtown, Conn., where they spent the rest of their lives. He died June 28, 1790, in his seventy-second year; she on November 2, 1795, in the seventy-third year of her age. Their children were: (1) Abigail. (2) Anna married Stephen Shepard, a cooper of Newtown, son of John Shepard. They resided in Newtown and there died (she November 17, 1827, in her seventy-eighth year; and he July 24, 1830, aged seventy-eight), and were buried in Newtown cemetery. They were Sandemanians in religion. (3) Charity Foote, born in Stratford, June 21, 1752, married Elias Bristol, of Newtown, who was a soldier in the war of Revolution, and fell probably in the early part of that struggle. She married (second) Samuel Sanford, of Newtown. They settled and lived at Newtown. (4) Susanna Foote married Amos Griffin, of Newtown, a son of Lieut. John and Beulah (Hubbell) Griffin, of Newtown. They settled and lived at Newtown. (5) Peter Foote, born in Newtown, August 10, 1759, a weaver, married Naomi Gillett, daughter of Samuel, of Newtown, where she was born about 1764. (6) Daniel Foote, born at Newtown in 1762, a farmer, married Betty Northrop in Newtown, where she was born in 1764, a daughter of John and— (Baldwin) Northrop. (7) Jemima Foote, born at Newtown, married David Curtis Wainwright. (8) Lemuel Foote, born at Newtown, a farmer, married Charity Beers.

JAMES FOOTE, DESCENDANTS OF. James Foote and Adah Stilson were married April 25, 1774, and their children with dates of birth are as follows: Hannah H., October 31, 1774; Rhesa, April 4, 1776; Ruth, December 4, 1781; David S., March 20, 1783; Vine, October 10, 1785; Heber, December 5, 1787; Milton, September 15, 1789; Ann, August 31, 1791; Aurelia, July 7, 1793; Arisnoe, January 7, 1796; Abba, March 7, 1798; and James, June 29, 1801. Of these, Hannah died in infancy; Rhesa is referred to farther on; Ruth married a Mr. Phelps, and went to New York State; Heber married, and went to New York State; Ann married, and died in young womanhood; Amelia married, and went to the State of New York; Arisnoe died unmarried; Abba married Lyman Lake, and is buried in the cemetery at Hawleyville; James married, and moved to Groton, N. Y. The mother died August 9, 1834, in her eightieth year, the father on February 25, 18—, and the remains of both rest in Newtown cemetery.

Rhesa Foote was a shoemaker by trade and occupation through life; also worked at bookbinding. He was a Christian man, being a member of Trinity Episcopal Church, and a respected citizen of the town. He built the house, at the foot of Newtown Street, now occupied by John Nash. He married Polly Hawley, of Monroe, Conn., and they had the following children, some of whom became especially useful and prominent in the various walk of life: (1)

Dear Mrs. Pollock,

About a year ago our son Thomas married Virginia Pollock in Evanston, Illinois, and I have been helping her trace her Pollock ancestry. Genealogy has been my hobby for many years.

Her earliest ancestor we have located was Joseph Whiting Pollock, who lived much of his life in Erie, Pa., but was born in the Syracuse, N.Y., area and was an Episcopalian, according to a family history.

I have been in correspondence with the Episcopal Diocese of Central New York trying to locate baptismal records from the early days (1799). In one of her letters Mrs. Lorene S. Juengel mentioned that you had worked for the diocese and that you might possibly be a resource in my research.

What does your husband know about his Pollock ancestry? Did his family live for a long time in New York State and particularly in the Syracuse area? Is there someone else in his family who has done more work on family history?

I look forward to hearing from you at your convenience. It may be that your husband and our daughter-in-law are distantly related.

Yours sincerely,

David E. Witbeck
